ALLIES TO ENFORCE TREATY

Ready for Immediate Measures if Germans Refuse to Sign.

SEND REPLIES TO PROTESTS

FOE REJECTS WAR BLAME

Protests Economic and Territorial Terms—Allied Committee to Meet Objections.

PARIS, May 14, (Associated Press.)—Immediate measures tending to the further subjugation of Germany if its delegates refuse to sign the Peace Treaty were indicated today by the announcement that Marshal Foch had been sent to the Rhine by the Council of Four to take such action as may become necessary in the event that the treaty is not signed.

The Council of Four, composed of President Wilson, David Lloyd George, M. Clemenceau, and Signor Orlando, today considered the immediate reimposing of the blockade against Germany in case that country declines to sign the treaty. The subject was under discussion at two separate meetings of the council.

On the other hand, it is expected that the blockade will be entirely lifted immediately if the German delegates affix their signatures to the treaty.

COBLENZ, May 14.—Marshal Foch is due to arrive at Coblenz on Thursday. He is making a trip which is taking him to the different headquarters of the occupied areas.

The Marshal will come here from Mayence and will be escorted down the Rhine by French gunboats. He will be entertained at luncheon by Lieut. Gen. Hunter Liggett, and will then proceed to Cologne under the escort of British gunboats.

Notes Exchanged at Paris.

PARIS, May 14.—The answers of the Council of Four to the German notes on prisoners of war and labor subjects were delivered this afternoon.

Three additional notes from the German delegation were delivered to the Council this morning. They were very long.

One of them, dealing with economic clauses of the treaty, declares that they mean the ruin of Germany if they are enforced.

A note on territorial questions protests particularly against the Sarre Valley arrangement and the transfer of the Malmedy, Morsenet, and Eupen districts to Belgium, as well as the forced evacuation of a part of Schleswig.

Decline to Admit Causing War.

A note on reparations does not protest against the payment by Germany for the devastation wrought in Belgium and Northern France which, it says, Germany is ready to do willingly. It is added, however, that Germany will not pay reparation for this damage on the principle that she was responsible for the war.

The German note on the question of prisoners says:

"The German peace delegation notes with satisfaction that the project recognizes the principle of the return of prisoners of war and civilians with the least possible delay. The delegation deems that all the details of the execution of this measure ought to be submitted to a special commission.

"Direct oral discussions between the commission and nearly all the belligerents concerning prisoners of war have been considered, even during hostilities, as the surest means of solving the difficulties. It ought today to be all the easier to reconcile the different viewpoints and clear up certain obscurities still existing on certain details of the problem.

"For instance, as a result of the diversity of the viewpoint of the law in the different countries interested, the German delegation considers it indispensable that prisoners of war and the civilians undergoing penalties for other infractions than those of descipline should be in a group that ought to be repatriated unconditionally. Germany has recognized this principle regarding prisoners of war and civilians of the allied and associated powers in its custody.

"The German delegation deems it necessary for reasons of equity to accord certain improvements in the treatment of prisoners, military and civilian, pending the time when they may return to their own country."

According to the Havas Agency, the German note on territorial questions

Italians Land Big Forces at Dalmatian Ports While Paris Hears Talk of Adriatic Compromise

LONDON, May 14.—The Italians are landing large military forces at Zara and Sebenico, on the coast of Dalmatia, according to a Reuter dispatch from Belgrade. The troops are being moved eastward and are fortifying the ridges and passes.

This is the second time that the landing of Italian troops at Zara and Sebenico has been reported. The two ports are near the middle of the Dalmatian coast and between Fiume and Spalato. They are opposite the Italian port of Ancona.

PARIS, May 13 (Associated Press.)—Italian delegates to the Peace Conference are no longer insisting upon the fulfillment of the secret Treaty of London, and this part of the controversy relative to territory on the eastern shore of the Adriatic is tending toward an adjustment, according to those who have taken part in recent conferences. The status of Fiume is still being discussed, as the plan to make it a free city similar to Danzig has not proved acceptable.

AUSTRIANS ARRIVE FOR PEACE PARLEY

Sixty Delegates, Headed by Renner, Greeted by the Allies at St. Germain.

MAKE A GOOD IMPRESSION

"Friendly Courtesy" Pledged by French Prefect—Germans Barred from Meeting.

PARIS, May 14, (Associated Press.)—The Austrian peace delegation arrived at St. Germain-en-Laye at 5:55 o'clock this evening. The delegation was met by Prefect Chaleil and representatives of the French Government and the allied and associated powers.

The first meeting with the Austrian delegates presented a sharp contrast to the first meeting with the Germans because of its greater ease and friendliness.

The Austrian delegation was headed by Karl Renner, the Chancellor. He was the first to leave the special car. He appeared in the doorway with his hat in his hand and with a contagious smile that put the reception committee quickly at its ease.

The Chancellor is a plump, round-faced man with a black beard and bald head. His eyes shone brightly behind a pair of gold-rimmed spectacles. He bowed courteously to the reception committee.

The head of the delegation was followed by Dr. Franz Klein, Peter Eichoff, and Dr. Richard Schuller. After them came the other members of the party, which numbered about sixty.

M. Chaleil, advancing and bowing, addressed the Chancellor, saying that he was delegated to meet the Austrian representatives and treat them with friendly courtesy. He added that he would turn them over to Major Bourgeois, who would establish relations between them and the Entente Powers.

A notable feature of the reception was the absence of Germans, who had requested permission to greet the Austrians, but had received a denial. Though there was no official handshaking, many members of the party were greeted by unofficial clasps from old acquaintances as they were being shown to the waiting automobiles.

The delegates then proceeded under military escort to the villas set aside for them, overlooking the valley of the Seine and Paris and lacking the high fences and sentries so much in evidence at Versailles.

Chancellor Renner was apparently in excellent spirits. He smiled engagingly as he greeted the representatives of the allied countries. In the course of his remarks he said:

"I hope I may go away with as joyful a heart as I bring."

Members of the Austrian delegation, questioned on their arrival, intimated that they would demand the attachment of German Bohemia and German Tyrol [and presumably the rest of German Austria] to Germany, and declared that without these concessions they would be unable to sign the treaty. This was not said with such conviction as would indicate a firm determination, and the impression was gained that they were ready to sign, even if annexation to Germany was not permitted.

It is learned from members of the party that the leading representatives are sharply divided among themselves regarding the question of annexation to Germany, so that the delegation as a whole can scarcely take a firm stand on permanent prohibition of union with Germany, which appears in the draft of the treaties for both Germany and Austria.

Baron Rudolf von Slatin Pasha, a former high official in the Egyptian Government, who resigned his post because of Great Britain's declaration of war on Austria, and who has been living in Switzerland, joined the party en route. He encountered a number of old acquaintances on the arrival of the train and said he was very hopeful of better relations between Austria and the Entente powers.

"I am not a belligerent; I am a neutral," remarked Slatin Pasha, who accompanies the delegation as an expert.

KOLCHAK PLANS MOVE ON MOSCOW

But Siberian Dictator Says He Will First Seek to Destroy the Red Army.

ADVANCE HALTED BY THAW

Operations Will Be Resumed as Soon as Heavy Artillery Can Be Moved Forward.

PARIS, May 13, (French Wireless Service.)—Plans are being made by the All-Russian Government at Omsk to begin an advance on Moscow, Admiral Kolchak, the head of the Government, declared in an interview with the correspondent of the Petit Parisien. In discussing the military situation in Eastern Russia the Admiral said:

"Owing to the thaw and the difficulty of moving the artillery forward, a lull prevails. But the operations will be resumed before long and we will try to establish and guarantee communication with Archangel and also with General Denekin in the south.

"The advance in the direction of Moscow will then begin. The capture of Moscow is the supreme end, the political aim, to which our wills must bend. But we must first reach the purely strategic aim which is the destruction of the Soviet Army. This is the end to which I will devote my attention."

Admiral Kolchak said that the Allies could aim in the campaign by sending armament, munitions, material, and clothing to the army of the Omsk Government. The blockade of Soviet Russia, he added, might be made more stringent.

After the final victory, the Admiral says, a National Assembly will be called to which he will hand over his authority. To prepare for the election of a National Assembly, the Omsk Government will be assisted by a council composed of representatives of the Zemstvos, the municipalities and the large social organizations. The council will co-operate with the Government in the pacification of the country and in fixing rules and organizing the elections for the Assembly.

EXODUS OF WORKERS FROM RED CAPITALS

Copyright, 1919, by The New York Times Company.
Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

GENEVA, May 13.—The revolt of the working classes in Russia against the tyranny of the Bolshevist dictators threatens soon to lead to a general economic catastrophe and to the definite collapse of Soviet rule.

Reliable reports received here state that during the last three months hundreds of thousands of industrial workers have deserted Moscow and Petrograd and returned to the country to become peasants. Their existence had become intolerable in the cities where they were subjected to continual official supervision and interference, and reduced to downright slavery. It is estimated that in Moscow alone 70 per cent. of the workmen fled, leaving hundreds of factories idle.

The fugitives in many cases carried off valuable raw materials and manufactured goods in order to exchange them in the villages for land and live stock with which to set up as farmers.

Drastic measures have been adopted by the Soviet to put an end to this flight en masse of the industrial proletariat. The workers who remained are closely watched. Innumerable Government spies and agents pervade the workshops and report all symptoms of unrest and discontent, whereupon the chief agitators are at once arrested.

In some State factories which manufacture ammunition and arms for the Red Army the workers are forced to take meals and sleep in specially constructed barracks adjoining the workshops. May receive visits from their

SENATORS DEMAND LEAGUE CHANGES AS DEBATE NEARS

Nearly All Republican Members Want Changes in Covenant, Borah Discovers.

FOR QUALIFYING ACTION

PREPARE FOR DISCUSSION

Expected That Covenant Will Be Taken Up on Opening of Congress Monday.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 14.—With all but six of the Republican Senators back at the Capitol, speculation was renewed today as to the probable attitude of the majority party on the League of Nations when the Senate has the League covenant, as part of the Treaty of Peace, before it.

"From talks I have had with Senators today, it seems that nearly all will insist that the covenant be amended in some form or another before it can be accepted by the Senate," said Senator Borah of Idaho, leader among the radical opponents of the League, to THE NEW YORK TIMES correspondent. "The majority of Senators seem to feel that Article X. is the most objectionable. They say it would oblige the United States to mix in quarrels of all the European nations, by providing that we, as a member of the League, must guarantee the territorial rights of all other members.

"For myself, I am convinced that unless there are appreciable changes in the League covenant it will not be approved by the Senate. I say this after my talks with Senators who have come back to the Capitol."

Senator Lodge, majority leader, had no comment to make as to the alignment of Senators on the covenant.

"I have had too much to do in reorganization matters to find an opportunity to talk with Senators on the League of Nations," said Mr. Lodge. "I expect to hear from them later in the week, and may be able, after that, to form some idea of what the Senate wants done with the covenant."

May Start Debate Monday.

Although the Treaty of Peace is not expected to reach the Senate until after President Wilson's return from Europe, in June, the Senate will not wait until that time to begin debate on the League of Nations. Senator Borah, eager to voice his views in the Senate, said he expected debate would start next Monday. The Senate will have no legislative program before it on that day, and there will be little else to do after organization but talk. The League of Nations covenant, it appears, will be the first subject.

Senators express different opinions as to how amendment of the League covenant may be effected, but nearly all of them believe it will be done, if at all, through a qualifying resolution embracing features regarded as trespassing upon purely American rights or established principle of the United States to avoid entangling alliances. Senator Lodge contends that the League covenant, under parliamentary procedure, may be amended by elimination of objectionable features as a part of the treaty, or that it may be accomplished through a qualifying resolution. He says parliamentary procedure exists covering the right of the Senate to cut out anything it sees fit from a treaty.

Other Senators are inclined to disagree with Mr. Lodge. They argue that if the League covenant is amended, the treaty must go back to the Peace Conference for consideration. If the Senate expresses dissent in a qualifying resolution, they argue, it will not affect the treaty as a whole and will not undo the work of the peace conferees as affecting the peace terms.

Cold to Proposed Alliance.

Senators were interested in cabled dispatches from Paris indicating that President Wilson would sound sentiment in the Senate upon the contemplated alliance of the United States, France, and Great Britain against German aggression. The idea of the United States going into any foreign alliance seems to be distasteful to nearly all the Senators.

"The President must have heard something to make him think he ought to find out how the Senate would stand on the alliance proposal before going further with it," commented Senator Borah. "I believe the majority of the Senate would oppose it. The American people are against any alliance of that sort. That is the basis of the opposition to the League of Nations. I do not expect the Senate will give the President much encouragement."

The same opinion was expressed by some other Senators. Mr. Lodge, when asked what he thought the Senate attitude regarding the proposed alliance would be, replied: "I am unable to deal in hypothetical problems."

BLIMP FLYING FAST TO ST. JOHN'S; NC-4 MAKES FLIGHT TO HALIFAX; SISTER PLANES WAIT AT TREPASSEY

SWIFT FLIGHT BY NC-4

FORCED TO STAY OVERNIGHT

READ'S STORY OF HIS TRIP

Engine Worked Perfectly as Big Flier Coursed Along, Traveling Low.

Azores Route Weather Now Reported Unfavorable

WASHINGTON, May 14.—Weather conditions predicted for the next twenty-four hours over the route from Trepassey Bay to the Azores were reported at the Navy Department late tonight as "less encouraging." This was not interpreted by officers, however, as in any way forecasting a decision by Commander Towers to postpone departure of the planes.

The "less encouraging" weather conditions were said to be over the portion of the route near the Azores. By the time the planes reached that region, it was said, the unfavorable weather conditions would probably have passed.

Special to The New York Times.

HALIFAX, N. S., May 14.—Making a fine, fast trip in which a fresh, following southwesterly breeze was a considerable factor, the United States naval seaplane NC-4, arrived here at 2:07 P. M. (Halifax time) today from Chatham, Mass., and will start at daylight tomorrow for Trepassey Bay. The members of the crew said today that they hoped to arrive at the Newfoundland post in time to get away for the Azores with the NC-1 and the NC-3.

The NC-4 made the journey of approximately 340 miles from Chatham to Halifax in three hours and fifty-one minutes, and at times attained a speed of over 85 nautical miles, or 98.6 land miles an hour. It was a splendid trip, according to the aviators. The weather was ideal and everything went according to schedule except that the winds increased the plane's speed so that she passed over the first station destroyer on the route from Chatham to Halifax a number of minutes before her crew expected her to do so. This was, however, in the words of the aviators, "all to the good" and the fact that the plane was traveling so rapidly was considered a matter for congratulation.

Leaving Chatham, the NC-4 headed directly out to sea and picked up the destroyers at regular intervals. She made the trip across the open waters at the Bay of Fundy, a stretch of 220 miles, without incident. This is the section of the flight to Halifax which caused the NC-3 and the NC-1 some trouble. While they reported wind trouble, the NC-4 was favored by a southwest breeze, holding steady and strong, which drove the plane ahead at a great rate.

Following the prescribed route to a nicety the NC-4 sighted Seal Island, Yarmouth County, Nova Scotia, soon after 1 o'clock, and then headed east along the Nova Scotia coast for Halifax. Keeping within sight of the shore all the way and laying her course by the two outstanding promontories of the coast, Cape Sable and Aspotogen Height, the big plane sped along. Messages received here from shore ports said that she was sighted about five miles off shore, traveling fairly low and at a high rate of speed.

The Landing at Halifax.

At 2 o'clock in the afternoon the Camperdown signal station reported a seaplane, number not discernible, swooping in from the sea. Three minutes later the NC-4 came up the harbor, passing the U. S. S. Baltimore, the supply ship here, at 2:05. After making great circles around her from above, at 2:11, after a final northward sweep, which brought the plane well up the harbor and afforded a splendid view of her for the sightseers lining the wharves and housetops, the NC-4 came down, striking the surface at full speed.

The giant seaplane skimmed along the surface of the water from the north to within forty fathoms of the Baltimore. A tender from the cruiser then took her in tow, and ten minutes later she was fast to the big ship's stern.

In an interview with THE TIMES correspondent Lieut. Commander Albert C. Read, commanding the NC-4, gave a detailed account of the flight. He said that the plane sailed from Chatham at 1:16 Greenwich time, (9:16 A. M. Chatham time.) This was, he said, the exact time at which she crossed the Chatham bar. She had taken the air several minutes before that.

Speed of 85 Miles an Hour.

"We covered the distance of about 340 miles in nine minutes under four hours," he said. "I have not figured out the exact distance, but it is safe to say that our average time was over 85

Washington Sends a Message to the Flying NC-4 and Gets Reply From Commander in 3 Minutes

WASHINGTON, May 14.—The Navy Department communicated with the seaplane NC-4 after she started on her flight to Halifax today, received a reply from Commander Read, and had broadcasted to Europe and the west coast of the United States the plane's position in three minutes elapsed time.

The message filed by the Navy Department at 11:18 A. M. was as follows:

> What is your position? All keenly interested in your progress. Good luck. (Signed) ROOSEVELT.

At 11:20 A. M. this answer was received:

> Thank you for good wishes. The NC-4 is twenty miles southwest of Seal Island, making eighty-five miles per hour. (Signed) READ.

At 11:21 A. M. the substance of Read's message was sent broadcast from the Annapolis (Md.) and New Brunswick (N. J.) radio stations, reaching Europe, South America, the west coast of the United States, and Honolulu. At 11:26 A. M. the radio stations at Balboa, Canal Zone, and San Diego, Cal., had confirmed receipt of the message.

Simultaneously with the sending of the message on the high-power circuits the department sent it to ships in the Atlantic within a thousand miles from the Arlington station, Virginia.

Lieutenant T. A. M. Craven, in charge of radio arrangements for the transatlantic flight, directed the operator on a direct wire to the Bar Harbor radio station to instruct Bar Harbor to "call the NC-4." Bar Harbor replied immediately that the plane had answered and the message went up over the land wire to Bar Harbor and was relayed by radio to the plane. Commander Read's answer was received by radio and relayed by land wire back to the department.

Naval officials said the transmission of the message and the delivery of the reply within three minutes established a new record for wireless communication.

BUILT NC MACHINES TO FIGHT U-BOATS

Secretary Roosevelt Says a Fleet of Them Would Have Crossed if War Continued.

AN ALL-AMERICAN IDEA

Naval Officers Credited with Overcoming Difficulties in Their Construction.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 14.—Announcement was made today, in a prepared statement issued by Acting Secretary of the Navy Roosevelt, dealing with the proposed flight of the Navy NC boats, that their use now for a trans-Atlantic attempt is in line with the original purpose for which they were designed and in the nature of a service trial trip.

It was the intention of the Navy Department to fly a fleet of these NC boats overseas, if the war had continued, to the point where this was necessary, and the arrangements made in connection with the present flight, according to Mr. Roosevelt, including the stationing of a bridge of ships across the Atlantic, involve the same organization that would have been necessary if these boats made the trip to Europe. The boats engaged in the trial flight, he said, were designed for war service and are "not freak machines put together to perform the single feat of a record-breaking flight."

Secretary Roosevelt's statement reads:

"The giant navy flying boats built for for the transatlantic flight are not only of extraordinary size, but of unusual construction and represent a wholly original American development. The design was initiated in the Fall of 1917 by Rear Admiral D. W. Taylor, chief constructor of the navy, who had in mind the development of a seaplane of the maximum size, radius of action, and weight-carrying ability for use in putting down the submarine menace.

"Had the German submarines gained the upper hand in 1918 the war would still be going on and these great flying boats would be produced in quantity and flown across the Atlantic to the centres of submarine activity. The first of the type was completed and given her trials in October, 1918, and since that time three more have been completed.

"Their use now for a transatlantic attempt is strictly in line with the original purpose of the design and really in the nature of a service trial. The somewhat elaborate arrangements made to station ships to mark the route may seem costly when only three boats make the attempt, but the actual organization is being tried out which would be necessary to send across the great fleet of flying boats which were forthcoming if the war had made it necessary.

NC-1 Considered Best of All.

"The flying boats are designated NC. The N for Navy and C for Curtiss, indicating the joint production of the navy and the Curtiss Engineering Corporation. Being designed for war service, the boats are not at all freak machines, put together to perform the single feat of a record-breaking flight, but are rugged and comfortable craft designed and built in accordance with standard navy practice. The NC-1 has now been in service seven months and has had rough handling when new pilots for the other NC boats were trained on her, but is still in good condition and,

AIR MAIL PROVES SUCCESS IN YEAR

Has Made $19,000 Profit, Beside Greatly Expediting New York-Washington Mails.

RECORDS MADE BY PILOTS

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 14.—The postal air mail service between Washington and New York will round out its first year of successful operation tomorrow, and in celebration of the event Postmaster General Burleson, General C. T. Menoher, head of the Department of Military Aeronautics, and Brig. Gen. L. E. O. Charlton, Air Attaché of the British Embassy, together with other officers of the British and American air services, will attend the anniversary flight of the air mail plane from College Park tomorrow. Colonel Harts of the army and Major Frank of the Department of Military Aeronautics will fly from Bolling Field to College Park in a Martin bombing plane to attend the ceremonies.

The air-line distance between New York and Washington covered by the mail fliers is 218 miles. Here are some of the remarkable records of flying made by air mail pilots in the last year:

Dana C. Hart flew 191 legs of the New York-Washington route, covering a distance of 21,360 miles. Of these flights 179, covering a distance of 20,324 miles, were made without forced landings. In his entire year's service he had but seven forced landings and five uncompleted flights.

Robert F. Shank made 138 flights, covering 14,334 miles. Of these, 129 flights, covering 13,700 miles, were made without forced landings. In his year's service he had but three forced landings and five uncompleted flights.

E. V. Gardner flew 102 legs, covering 11,422 miles. Of these, 97 flights, covering 10,858 miles, were made without a forced landing. He had a total of three forced landings and two uncompleted flights.

Max Muller flew 82 legs, covering 9,242 miles, without a single forced landing or an uncompleted flight in his record.

Of the military fliers, while the army operated the air mail service during the first three months of its history, Lieutenant J. C. Edgerton made 58 flights, covering 7,155 miles. Of these, 52 were made without a forced landing. His record is a single forced landing and no uncompleted flights.

Other records of flights without forced landings were: Leon D. Smith, 67 legs, covering 7,314 miles; Lawton V. Smith, 45 legs, covering 4,866 miles; E. Hamilton Lee, 61 legs, covering 7,758 miles; Ira O. Biffle, 39 legs, covering 9,191 miles, and Charles E. Bradley, 26 legs, covering 3,924 miles.

Otto Praeger, the Second Assistant Postmaster General, who has had jurisdiction over the air mail service, today submitted to Postmaster General Burleson his first annual report on the air service, and it is one of the most interesting official reports ever made by a Government official.

"Trial flights," said Mr. Praeger's report, "were made to establish the practicability for commercial work of the De Haviland 4 airplane, which became available upon the signing of the armi-

BLIMP SPEEDS NORTHWARD

Making 58 Miles an Hour While Sailing Over Nova Scotia.

LAST REPORT FROM STEAMER

EARLY START AT MONTAUK

C-5 May Try Direct Flight from St. John's to England

ST. JOHN'S, N. F., May 14.—Naval officials here said tonight that if the C-5 attempted the transatlantic flight (and only a poor performance on the voyage here would prevent her) the "Blimp" would try for a non-stop flight, heading direct for the English coast.

Three battleships are already stationed on this route, the Utah 500 miles out, the Florida 600 miles beyond the Utah, and the Arkansas about 300 miles from the Irish coast.

If the seaplanes complete the Trepassey-Azores leg of their flight, the destroyers on this route will be moved for the C-5's benefit. It was stated, however, that if the C-5 on arrival was found in condition to make the transatlantic flight, it will not wait for a new disposition of the destroyers.

HALIFAX, N. S., May 14.—At 7:40 o'clock tonight the United States Navy dirigible C-5, bound on a nonstop flight from Montauk Point, New York, to St. John's, Newfoundland, was sighted abeam of Liscomb, on the east coast of Nova Scotia, according to a wireless message from the steamer Lady Laurier to the Canadian Marine Department.

Liscomb is about 85 miles northeast of Halifax. When C-5 passed over Halifax Harbor at 5:50 P. M. it was traveling at high speed. From points of vantage the balloon was plainly visible to many people in the city. It did not appear to be more than 500 feet above the water. If the Blimp keeps up the same speed, experts here estimated that it will reach the Newfoundland coast about 2 o'clock tomorrow.

Sighted Off Halifax.

Special to The New York Times.

HALIFAX, N. S., May 14.—The dirigible C-5, which sailed from Montauk, N. Y., this morning for Trepassey, was sighted off Yarmouth at 4:05 o'clock this afternoon, making good progress. The C-5 was later seen off Shelburne at an altitude of about 1,500 feet. She was then heading to sea, and it was thought that she was making her course form Shelburne to Trepassey. This theory was proved incorrect, however, when the big balloon was sighted off Halifax at 5:50 P. M. She was about five miles from the land and was proceeding east, still hugging the shore.

On the seaplane mother ship Baltimore it was stated that it was possible that the C-5 would follow the route outlined for the seaplanes, so that she would proceed along the Nova Scotia coast as far as Louisburg, Cape Breton, striking thence for Trepassey. The airship reported by radiogram to the Baltimore that she was "going strong."

VINEYARD HAVEN, Mass., May 14.—The C-5 passed over Vineyard Haven at 9:40 A. M.

CHATHAM, Mass., May 14.—The C-5, flying 1,000 feet high, passed over the air station here at 10:05 A. M. The balloon was ascending as she disappeared over the course, followed by the seaplane NC-4. Weather conditions were ideal, and the C-5 apparently was going at top speed. Officers at the air station had been on the lookout for her, her approach having been reported from Vineyard Haven and elsewhere, and were prepared to lend any assistance necessary, but the fliers did not slow down.

SHELBURNE, N. S., May 14.—The United States dirigible C-5 passed here at 4:15 P. M. (Halifax time) headed for Halifax. Up to this point the 420-mile flight from Long Island had been made in 7 hours and 15 minutes, giving the balloon an average speed of 58 miles an hour.

LIVERPOOL, N. S., May 14.—The United States dirigible C-5 was sighted from here at about 4:35 P. M. today, some distance off the coast, and appeared to be headed out to sea. This city is on the coast of Nova Scotia, about seventy-five miles southwest of Halifax.

that the dirigible C-5 had started for this port found everything ready to receive her at the temporary American naval air base here. One thousand tanks of hydrogen gas were piled on the mooring field, ready to re-enflate the balloon for her trip across the Atlantic or back to her base at Cape May, N. J., alternatives depending upon the performance of the big ship on her northward cruise.

The wind was blowing from the northeast, but there were indications that it might swing around toward the south by nightfall, thus assisting rather than retarding the progress of the big gas bag.

It was planned to give the crew twelve hours' sleep on their arrival here, after which the balloon would be made ready to begin the next section of its cruise upon receipt of orders.

WASHINGTON, May 14.—Reports received at the Navy Department today on the progress of the navy dirigible C-5 on its flight from Montauk Point, Long Island, to Newfoundland, led officials to believe that the craft would reach St. John's between 6 o'clock and 9 o'clock tomorrow morning.

Results of the flight will be reported immediately to the department, and if it is decided to attempt a trip across the Atlantic the C-5 probably will leave St. John's within a few days, weather permitting.

BLIMP LEAVES MONTAUK LIKE BUBBLE IN-AIR

Starts for St. John's at 8 o'Clock Amid Predictions of Transatlantic Flight.

The navy dirigible C-5 stole quietly away from Montauk for St. John's, N. F., yesterday morning at 8 o'clock, perhaps to strengthen America's chances of winning the transatlantic airship race. The secrecy with which the preparations had been made enhanced the spectacular getaway, witnessed by only 100 "gobs" and officers and twoscore fishermen. No official announcement that the "blimp" had started on its way to Europe could be obtained, but after it was on its way officers and aviators asserted the belief that a transatlantic flight was contemplated after Newfoundland had been reached. Furthermore, it was asserted that the course would be to the Irish coast and not to Portugal via the Azores.

Before dawn the hangar doors were open and the work of grooming the dirigible for the longest journey ever taken by a United States heavier-than-air machine was under way. Radio messages began to arrive every ten minutes from the different points along the path telling of the weather conditions. For twenty hours the southerly wind had not changed a point and was blowing steadily thirteen miles an hour in the right direction. The final message from Bar Harbor was the only one needed to make the hoped-for flight a certainty.

At 7 o'clock Lieutenant E. W. Coil of Marietta, Ohio, the dirigible's skipper, came from the wireless station waving the good news message in his hand. But a moment before the air was astir with the compressed excitement of the crew. A shout went up from the men. "We're off!" "Make it fast!" "Come on."—it was a game to get the gigantic pigskin to Newfoundland.

The engineers, Chief Machinist's Mates G. H. Blackburn and T. L. Mooreman, warmed up the motors and then ran them up separately. It was found that revolutions, oil pressure, and water temperature were satisfactory. Ten thermos bottles of coffee and drinking water, ten pounds of chocolate, a box of sandwiches and enough whiskey to constitute the craft as a seagoing ship were put aboard. The signal was given and the crew put on their fur-lined leather uniforms and climbed to their places.

The hull, forty feet long, is a roomy carriage suspended about eighteen feet below the big "sausage." Ensign E. O. Campbell of Lynn, Ky., the directional pilot, occupied the coxswain's seat in the bow of the boat. It is his duty, merely by aid of a marine compass to keep the ship on its path and steer in the horizontal plane. Lieutenant J. B. Lawrence of St. Paul, Minn., occupied the pilot's seat beside the Commander, and the two of them navigate and change the elevations of the balloon to find the most favorable winds. The engineer's station is in a hole cut in the boat's turtle-deck just aft of the pilots. Between the gas tanks and the extreme aft and the engineers is the radio operator's seat, which was filled by Ensign M. H. Estorley of Youngstown, Ohio. All parts of the ship, including the engines on each side of the hull, can be reached by means of communicating gangways.

At a signal given by Commander Lieut. Raymond Norris, the dirigible officer at the station, fifty "gobs" guided the "blimp" from the hangar.

"Walk the ship!" "Beam to starboard!" "That's well!" "Loose the guys handsomely!" "Hands off."

And like a graceful bubble the big balloon left the pipe-shaped hangar and was off. A shout went up from the spectators as the big "cigar" headed into the wind, and then, turning on its own axis, pointed straight with the wind, bound for St. John's, Newfoundland.

Newspapers are a treat in the camp situated on the northern tip of Long Island and Ensign Campbell sat reading the news until the balloon was about to take the air. "I see," he said, "that THE NEW YORK TIMES of last Tuesday says that we will pull out for Newfoundland at 8 o'clock today. They had it right to the second."

Lieutenant Coil when asked to prophesy about the flight said:

"I'm not going to make any definite prediction or statement. But I will say that we consider this trip in the nature of a test. It is merely one of the many such experiments the Navy intends making. It is of particular interest because if it is successful it will be the longest non-stop flight made by an American heavier-than-air machine. Whether we will be sent to Europe or not is up to the senders, but where we are sent we will go.

"If luck and the wind stay with us, we should be at St. John's tomorrow morning at this time. Perhaps it would be safer to say by noon tomorrow. Everything is going well now, and has ever since we arrived at Montauk, thanks to Lieutenant Donahue for putting all his men's shoulders behind the job of getting us off."

Lieutenant Robert Donahue, commander of the air station, shook hands with the skipper just before he left, and said:

"Say hello to the King for me."

"I will," came the quick answer, "and also to the Queen."

The principle feature of the C-5 is the surprisingly small amount of gas consumed by its two engines. They are 120 horse-power Union motors, six cylinder, of the vertical type, and develop only twenty-five horse-power less than the "V" shape Hispano-Suiza motors used on the dirigible C-4 at Rockaway Beach.

The petrol tanks carry about 250 gallons, and the motors use about ten gallons per hour when they are running full. As far as fuel is concerned the "blimp" is estimated to be able to travel 1,250 miles in still air at high speed, which gives a margin of 275 miles in the flight to St. John's. On the overocean voyage the engines would not be raced. Calculated under the most favorable conditions the craft could travel as long as it could remain afloat in the air, or 70 hours. Under normal conditions the only way in which it would start out on a flight, the dirigible can do considerably more than 2,000 miles with the engines feeding freely.

Lieutenant Ralph Norris, an expert on the heavier-than-air craft motors, said:

"The engines on the C-5 are the most economical built. They have recently undergone some wonderful tests in Washington, and it was found that this type motor is almost impossible to wear out. If it is only up to the motors they will carry the 'blimp' wherever she is sent, for there are ways of alternating the engines which would keep the craft propelled for sixty hours in still air at a speed of thirty miles an hour."

If the wind continues to favor the dirigible through the flight as it did on the get-away the C-5 should average sixty-five miles an hour, which would take her to St. John's just before 1 o'clock this morning. It was said by one of the pilots before the "blimp" started that she would fly at an altitude of 400 to 700 feet during the entire trip unless some unforeseen wind clouds developed.

Lieutenant Lawrence before climbing in the pilot's seat told how he felt about the flight:

"My guess is that we will make it. It is going to be good sport and all of us are mighty glad to make the trip. None of the crew expects trouble. The weather is ideal and the wind perfect. You can put down a bet for me that the next landing we make will be in St. John's."

Lieutenant Donahue said:

"No crew of men is better qualified to take the trip. I believe very strongly in not only their ability, but in the ability of the 'blimp' to make the long journey. I think that the ship could make the transatlantic flight without much difficulty."

Another feature of the C-5 is the wireless apparatus. The antennae of the wireless is inside the gas bag and the power of the set enables the operator to send a message to any other ship or station within 150 miles. Messages from a greater distance may be read by the operator. In addition, aerial wires are strung from the stern of the boat to the rudder tail, and the boat also is equipped with a wireless telephone so that the pilots may communicate easily with the destroyers and other ships in the vicinity.

Before the craft was out of sight on its flight Lieutenant Donahue was at the wireless telephone calling up Captain Noble Irwin, the head of the naval air service, informing him that the ship was on the way. He also notified Chatham, Boston, and Bar Harbor to keep an eye out for the ship.

It was learned after the dirigible had left that the orders for the start came from Captain Noble Irwin in Washington shortly before midnight last night if the weather continued favorable. Among those at the station was C. K. Wollam, the expert who supervised the manufacture of the gas bag used on the C-5. He expressed himself as confident of the success of the flight, and said the machine could reach St. John's early in the morning, even if she attained only her ordinary speed. He pointed out that the machine had been reconstructed, and was capable of making a non-stop flight to Europe, and that he believed she would be sent on the transatlantic journey.

The ship is well lighted, so that her pilots are able to run her easily during the night and even make night landings. She has the usual red and green running lights usually placed on ocean ships, and a red tail light. The cockpit is lighted with several globes, so that the members of the crew are able to see their instruments and the interior of the machine at all times. In addition, she has a six-inch Aldis searchlight for signaling to ships on the water and to other aircraft.

The steamer Chicago took to St. John's additional searchlights to be used there in signaling to the pilots as they hovered over the city, seeking their bearings for the landing. Four high power electric arcs will light up the landing field near the hangar so that a safe finish to the long trip will be assured.

One of the most earnest watchers of the craft as she set off on her long journey was Blimp, the mascot of the station, named after the type of aircraft. It has been the custom of Blimp to run from the air station to the shore, more than 400 yards away, to see that his naval friends in the airship got safely started on their journey. He remains on the shore until the dirigible returns to its hangar.

Kept Watch Till Nightfall.

Blimp ran to the shore with the airship yesterday and beat it there by several minutes. As the big craft drifted over him he leaped into the air and barked his farewell, and then sat down on the beach to await the return. None of the sailors could make Blimp understand that his colossal companion had gone on a longer journey than it had ever taken before, and he remained on the beach until after nightfall, when hunger and lonesomeness forced him to seek food and companionship in the barracks.

One sailor declared that Blimp howled while he was on the beach, but others said that he was too good a "sailor" and too loyal to the navy to be so pessimistic about the flight.

The giant ship was scarcely out of sight when the boys at the station had an opportunity to witness some parachute jumping from a captive balloon, about 1,000 feet in the air.

miles per hour. On two occasions I reckoned the speed at which we were going ahead at 84 miles per hour, and the second time we were making 85."

"Have you ever traveled as fast as that before?" was asked.

"Yes, faster," said the Commander. "Eighty-five miles an hour is the record for the NC-4."

"We had a wind that was slightly off our port quarter the greater part of our trip. This was from about southwest by west and, as it was a following wind, it certainly did not hinder our progress. We sailed at different heights but the average was between 500 and 1,000 feet. This low altitude was kept because the winds above were more from the west and therefore would not help us along so much. Our trip was without incident and we located each destroyer on our route without any difficulty. We picked up the first one a short time before we expected to sight her, because we had not then accurately figured on the increased speed at which we were travelling due to the wind. In the case of the other destroyers on our route, however, we were of course forewarned and had no trouble in locating them."

Commander Read added that when the NC-4 was about twenty miles southwest of Cape Sable a radiogram was received from acting Secretary of the Navy Roosevelt wishing the crew and plane the best of luck. A reply was at once despatched.

Nearing the end of the open stretch, the NC-4 sighted Seal Island, the commander continued, and then proceeded for Halifax. She set her course from two tangents of the main promontories in sight and had no difficulty in navigating along the coast to this port.

"We had a good trip, with fine weather and no trouble," ended Commander Read.

In answer to a question as to when the NC-4 would start from Halifax for Trepassey, the second leg of the transatlantic flight, Commander Read said his present plan was to sail at daylight tomorrow for Trepassey. The aviation squad commanded by Ensign O'Connor, which is attached to the Baltimore for duty in connection with the over-ocean flights, got to work as soon as the NC-4 was alongside the cruiser. By 4 o'clock this afternoon they had the hydroplane's propellers overhauled and rebolted. At that time it was said that it was not the intention to change the propellers, though this might later be considered necessary.

Commander Read said it was not necessary to have as pilot a man acquainted with the locality of a port of call. Captain W. T. Cluverius, commanding the Baltimore, who was present, added that the seaplanes were able to navigate just as well as any other ship at sea. The section of the flight from Chatham to Halifax was described as a perfect leg, with plenty of room in the harbor here to make a landing.

Captain Cluverius said he considered the rate at which the NC-4 traveled on this leg "some speed," and added that it was about the fastest time that the NC boats had yet made.

The NC-4 had plenty of gasoline to spare when she arrived here. Her commander said that, in view of the original plan for a direct flight to Trepassey, she had taken on an extra supply. It would not be necessary to load much "gas" from the Baltimore, he declared. The main idea in navigating a plane at sea, he said, was to "get there" in the quickest possible time with the least possible consumption of gasoline and oil. The strong breeze enabled the NC-4 to demonstrate this theory, the plane making very fast time and consuming a comparatively small quantity of gasoline.

Among the crew is Ensign Hinton, who is well known here, he having been stationed at the United States aviation station at this port during the later years of the war. Ensign Hinton, who made a number of flights over the city and along the south shore of Nova Scotia in connection with the Victory Loan of 1918, dropping propaganda in a number of towns, received a warm welcome from his friends.

The people of Halifax are naturally taking a great interest in the seaplanes' transatlantic flight, but the arrival of the NC-4 today was so unexpected that there was not the same din from sirens and whistles of ships as when the NC-3 and NC-1 swept in last week. It was, of course, known that the NC-4 was on her way here, but she was not expected to arrive until well on in the afternoon. The noise of the planes' engines attracted the attention of hundreds of citizens, however, and there was much excitement when she soared in over the harbor and made a spectacular swoop to the water, throwing the white spray high on either side. As she hit the water she cast a picturesque and greatly enlarged shadow over the sunlit Dartmouth Hills.

This afternoon the destroyers 88, 87, 86, and 112, which have been stationed here for the last fortnight, put to sea, presumably to take up their stations along the line of flight.

The NC-4 had wireless word about ten minutes after she left Chatham that the C-5 had passed that station. As the plane was going at a considerably greater rate of speed she soon passed out of wireless range of the dirigible.

At 6 o'clock this evening the wind had changed to northeast and the local weather forecast was not very favorable.

CHATHAM, Mass, May 14.—Two seaplanes from the naval air station here, Nos. 1,850 and 1,916, accompanied the NC-4 in the start of her flight, leaving here about ten minutes later. They were ordered to convoy the hydroplane as far as the first ship of the destroyer patrol, which is stationed at a point approximately fifty miles northeast of here.

TOWERS DECIDES TO WAIT FOR NC-4

Weather Today Likely to be Better, but Start May Be Delayed Till Friday.

Special to The New York Times.

TREPASSEY, N. F., May 14.—Yielding to his own wish that the three transoceanic air liners of his little fleet should start together, and the ardent desire of Commander Read and his companions not to be left behind, Commander Towers decided this morning to await the arrival of the NC-4 before setting the navy's attempt to fly the Atlantic actually in motion.

Today's weather along the course was again unsuitable, with the prospect of encountering winds in four different directions during the voyage, but the third seaplane's approach, and not the weather, held the expedition back. The prospect is just as good for the weather tomorrow, if not better. Should the NC-4 prove to need several days of overhauling on her arrival here it is not unlikely that she will be left behind to make the trip alone, provided she can be got ready while the destroyers are still on their stations.

Second in interest to the expected arrival of the NC-4 among the officers and men here was the news that the dirigible C-5 had left Montauk for St. John's, since there is every prospect that she will pass over Trepassey early in the morning, and with the full moon there will be an excellent opportunity to see her go by. So far as the Base Commander and other officers here are informed there is no intention that the dirigible will land here.

The jitney seaplane, which broke a steering crank shaft in midair a few days ago, is now repaired and this afternoon the members of the transatlantic crews flew about the harbor to get "the feel" of the local air. Heading into Mutton Bay, they almost skimmed the water while cruising about, studying the land and water conditions there as a final preparation for the take-off in the event that the wind necessitates starting from the bay outside, and not within the harbor. Accustomed to the big seaplanes, the pilots found the jitney a bit awkward to handle, and she rocked a bit until the crew got used to the little fellow.

Experiments with pilot or propaganda balloons aboard the Aroostook this morning for the purpose of studying the upper air currents gave rise to an amusing incident.

A balloon sent up on the port side of the upper deck drifted to starboard and the lookout, spying a spherical object on the horizon at once proclaimed the approach of a dirigible. Captain Tomb, the Aroostook's commander; Lieut. Commander Towers, and the press correspondents quickly scrambled for a view of the stranger, but were disappointed, of course, though it was strongly believed by those who have longest observed the preparations of the British for their transatlantic crossing from Newfoundland in land planes, that an effort would be made by them to get off today on account of the full moon.

A study of the midday reports here showed that the winds along their course were much more unfavorable than those the seaplanes would have been called upon to face had they started today.

Fog swept over the harbor late this afternoon just after the receipt of official advices that the NC-4 would stop at Halifax and start for Trepassey at daybreak.

The destroyer Edwards is due from Boston tonight, bringing spare propellers for trial on the seaplanes, though the present ones are satisfactory. The NC-1 was moored to the Prairie and the NC-3 to the Aroostook this afternoon while with steam lines the oil was warmed up in the engines. Then both taxied about the harbor to test the engines.

The Prairie's nine beat the Aroostook's team, 4 to 1, in a baseball game this afternoon at Meadow Point. It was the first time the sailors ever played ball in a fog.

TELLS OF DEVICES IN SEAPLANES' RADIO

Assistant Secretary Roosevelt Says They Can Keep in Touch Throughout the Trip.

TELEPHONE UP TO 30 MILES

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 14.—Details of the radio installation of the NC seaplanes engaged in the attempt to make the transatlantic flight were made public today by Acting Secretary Roosevelt of the Navy Department.

Each machine is equipped with long and short distance radio sending sets. The long distance set, which may only be used when the propellers are revolving and the plane is in flight, will enable each seaplane to send messages 250 miles. The short distance set is operated on a storage battery and is used in telegraphing or telephoning between the machines up to a distance of twenty to thirty miles.

It is through the installation of these radio sets that the aviators are able to keep in touch with one another when engaged on the different legs of the flight, to communicate with ship and shore stations, and through them with the Navy Department at Washington.

Statement by Mr. Roosevelt.

Mr. Roosevelt issued this statement:

"The radio on the NC seaplanes involves two transmitters. One is a ½ K. W. spark transmitter, the main element of which is a streamline generator and accessory apparatus, which is driven by an air propeller and is mounted on the deck of the boat aft. This set weighs only forty-five pounds, but is used for the regular telegraph communication between the seaplanes and stations up to a distance of 250 nautical miles. Since this set is driven by a propeller, it can only be used while seaplanes are in flight. The antenna used for this set is a single trailing wire leading from the tail of the boat for a distance of 250 feet down and to the rear. A streamline lead weight holds the lower end of this wire down.

"With this transmitter it is possible for the commanding officer to send messages from time to time regarding the progress of the flight, to be retransmitted by the nearest shore station to the Navy Department. Also communication can be held with destroyers or other craft and radio compass signals or other information requested.

"The other trasnmitter is a combined telephone and telegraph transmitter, and operates on a small 12-volt storage battery. It is used on an antenna consisting of wires permanently stretched on the skid fins on the upper planes so that it may be used while the seaplane is in flight or on the water.

Use Anti-Noise Microphone.

"It is this set which is used for telephoning between the planes, arrangement being made so that either the radio operators or the commanding officers themselves may communicate directly by telephone while the planes are in flight. Such interplane telephoning may be carried on up to a distance of twenty miles. While on the water this set may be used for telegraphing or telephoning a distance of about thirty miles.

"A special feature of the telephone sets is the anti-noise microphone, which is so constructed that the engine noises are not heard. This is accomplished by having the back of the microphone open. The exterior sound waves strike the back as hard as the face of the diaphragm, and therefore the effect is neutral. The voice waves strike only the face of the diaphragm, and even though the operator cannot hear his own voice, the radio sets receive enough effect to modulate the transmitted wave.

"This single item has been the deciding factor in success or failure in long-distance transmission by telephone by airplanes. It is easy enough for short distances to get communication with an ordinary microphone, but for long ranges it is impossible without the anti-noise transmitter.

Radio Compass Installed.

"One of the most important of the radio installations on these seaplanes is the radio compass. This consists of a set of revolving coils mounted in the tail of the machine, on which are mounted many turns of enameled copper wire. The radio waves are picked up on these coils by revolving the coils until the radio signals obtained on two methods of connection are of the same strength.

"The operator then knows the direction of the incoming waves. By then reading the position of a pointer on a scale on the coils, the bearing of the transmitting radio station is determined. This bearing is then communicated by the radio operator to the navigating officer by means of the inter-communicating telephone, which consists of telephone receivers built into the helmets, and the same type of microphone used by the operator.

"Using the same inter-communicating telephone system, the navigator can telephone to the pilots, giving them the proper direction in which to steer the plane. He may inquire of the engine room regarding the condition of the engines, or he may hold radio telephone conversation with the navigating officer on one of the other planes.

"In other words, the inter-communicating telephone makes possible constant communication between all members of the crews in spite of the terrific noise caused by the engine and the wind rush, and in spite of the fact that they are located in separate parts of the seaplane. In addition to this the radio telephone makes it possible for the commanding officer and navigators to talk directly with each other, although their seaplanes may be flying at a distance of 20 miles apart.

"The radio compass signals may be received from a destroyer at a distance of 75 miles, or from large land stations at a distance of 600 miles.

"The regular receiving apparatus on the seaplanes will permit of reception from land stations of high power at distances of several thousand miles, thereby permitting the seaplanes to copy weather reports or orders directly from the Navy Department at Washington.

"The main striking fact regarding this radio equipment is that, completely installed, it weighs only 200 pounds.

"The radio operators on the NC seaplanes are: NC-1, Lieutenant Harry Sadenwater; NC-3, Lieut. Commander R. A. Lavender; NC-4, Ensign Herbert C. Rood.

AZORES DESTROYERS READY.

Can Reach Seaplane Falling to Water Within an Hour.

PONTA DELGADA, The Azores, May 13. (Associated Press.)—The meteorological ships between the Azores and Newfoundland report a storm moving over the course of the American seaplane flight today, but predict good weather for tomorrow with strong northwesterly winds. It was believed here that the seaplanes would start from Trepassey tomorrow, May 14.

The destroyers, which are stretched out at fifty-mile intervals along the course to guide and assist the flyers, will emit heavy black smoke the day of the flight, and will burn flares and shoot star shells at night. At no time will the seaplanes be more than thirty minutes' flying distance from a destroyer. A destroyer will be able to reach a plane, if it is forced to alight, within an hour.

The planes are expected to fly direct to Ponta Delgada and land in the bay. If they are unable to complete the journey, however, they will land at Horta, 150 miles from here, where the cruiser Columbia is stationed with supplies to aid the continuance of the flight to Ponta Delgada. The planes will remain moored here overnight, according to present plans, and will be overhauled if necessary before proceeding to Lisbon. The destroyer tender Melville, which is in the harbor here, has aboard a crew of aviator mechanics, six extra Liberty motors, extra gasoline, propellers and other supplies.

Fourteen destroyers will be stationed between this port and Lisbon. Three are already in position, and the others will leave here tomorrow.

stice, but it was found that this plane, designed wholly for war purposes, lacked the strength necessary for daily cross-country flights, with incidental forced landings. It was then decided to modify these war planes, and, after some delay, aeronautical engineers have developed a strong and powerful plane which can still retain all the excellent flying qualities of the De Haviland machine.

"The principal work of the aerial mail service concerned the operation of a daily air mail service between Washington and New York, a distance of 218 miles, air line. In the year's operation an aggregate of 128,037 miles were flown and an aggregate of 193,021 pounds of mail was carried, the cost of operation of this route being $147,861.

"The same six airplanes that started upon this service a year ago, with the same engines that operated them, are on the flying fields on this date, rendering a continuous service. In field work, in testing out of planes by aviators, there has been one serious injury, when an aviator smashed a plane, resulting in a gas tank catching fire on the ground. In this accident the pilot was severely burned, but was able to report for duty at the end of four weeks."

Figures given by Mr. Praeger show that the Government made $19,103 out of the air mail service between New York and Washington during its first year of operation. Here are the figures:

Revenue from airplane postage	$159,700
Saving in railway transportation	2,264
Total revenue and saving	$161,964
Cost of operation	142,861
Surplus	$19,103

The cost of operation alone was $137,900 and the loss of standard plane No. 3, less salvage of useful parts, was $4,961, making the total cost of operation $142,861.

"In addition to the airplane mail," he says, "there were carried several million ordinary letters taken from railroad connections, which were advanced in delivery by airplane over train from twelve to eighteen hours. This improved service involved millions of letters, delivered by reason of airplane service in New York in the afternoon, instead of on the following morning, had they gone by train, which alone justifies, from a postal standpoint, the operation of the service."

HAASE APPLAUDS MILITARISM'S FALL

DOESN'T EXPECT TERRORISM

Declares That the Spirit of Revenge Is Confined to the Junkers.

By CHARLES A. SELDEN.

Copyright, 1919, by The New York Times Company.
Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, May 12.—In the Matin this morning there is an interview with Hugo Haase, leader of the German Socialists in opposition to the Scheidemann Government, who has demanded the immediate signing of the Peace Treaty. After a summary of the Socialist Party record from the beginning of the war, in which he declares the Socialists never were unanimous in support of the war and protested against German military atrocities, Haase tells of the beginning of the revolution.

"Among the causes of the revolution," he says, "was the long duration of the war, which had sapped our moral, physical and financial forces. The people were weary of the military yoke, and the propaganda at the front put the army in a revolutionary state. It is true the revolution began in the interior of the country, spreading to the army, but even without that our military defeat was inevitable.

"The numerical superiority of the enemy, his superiority in material, especially in tanks, had brought final confusion to German troops.

"Before that, however, the teachings of my friends and myself had been spread secretly through the country. Gradually millions of men realized the truth. The sufferings they endured and the example of Russia have done the rest."

In reply to a question as to why he and his associates had left the Provisional Government in December, Haase said:

"We differed on all essential questions. Dittmann, Barth and myself insisted on the elimination of all militarism. We insisted upon the immediate socialization of industry and a more decided spirit of conciliation toward other peoples, notably toward the Poles living in Germany.

"Ebert and Scheidemann created volunteer regiments and were opposed to the socialization of industry, and by force of inertia only served to precipitate the ideas of Bolshevism that had been in suspension. They began hostilities against Poland.

Militarist Spirit Conserved.

"The organization of these regiments conserved the detestable spirit of militarism. When I was in the Government a law was voted creating a volunteer service with an entirely different organization. The soldiers themselves selected their subordinate officers, only superiors being named by the Government. Upon the expiration of their terms of service the soldiers' officers were all considered again as civilians, with no right to carry arms. All military honors and decorations, all uniforms, tinsel, everything that turns the the head of youth, were strictly abolished. The law still exists, but it has been curiously forgotten. While Germany was in the throes of revolution it was difficult to tell how many volunteers there should be. The military officers who were members of our party said that when calm was restored 100,000 would be enough. [This is twice as many volunteers as is allowed Germany by the terms of the treaty.]

"So, according to the letter, militarism has not yet been conquered in Germany, but it will never regain the favor it had before the war, and finally we shall be rid of it altogether. It is necessary to educate the present generation without any military drill whatever—no uniforms, no military teaching, only a little gymnastics for the sake of health. There must be a revision of the school books, especially our manuals of history, the spirit of which is full of military poison. If my party succeeds, we will not hesitate to rid our teaching force of all opposed to progress."

Predicts Worldwide Communism.

Concerning Bolshevism Haase says: "Germany will not lend itself to the terrorism of Russia, but so far it is communism or socialism that is concerned. This so-called Bolshevism will not only conquer Germany, but all the countries of the world, taking this or that particular form in each country according to the temperament of the people."

As to present German politics, Haase adds:

"It is possible that the present Government will continue for some months. There may be a conservative dictatorship, or a better understanding between the Majority and Independent Socialists, and so a Union Socialist Government from which Scheidemann, Noske, Landsberg and Heine will be rigorously excluded. Ebert alone may be retained in a secondary capacity."

When asked about the sentiment of the Germans toward the Allies, Haase said:

"If the idea of revenge exists, it is only among the Junkers, but it will be born in the bourgeoise if truly German territory is taken from us. Except for that, our people are without hatred. We recognize as an enemy only such a chauvinistic government as would crush our people. We hold as responsible for war all the leaders, civil and military, of our former régime. We demand judgment upon them, not for revenge, but for the sake of justice. If, for example, the Kaiser were found guilty, it is of little interest to us whether he be executed or imprisoned. We demand only that he be banished from Germany and disgraced before the world. We are Socialists, not terrorists."

considered all around, is the best boat of the four.

"The term flying boat is used for the NC type because it is actually a stout, seaworthy boat that ploughs through rough water up to a speed of sixty miles an hour, and then takes to the air and flies at a speed of over ninety miles an hour.

"The hull or boat proper is 45 feet long by 10 feet beam. The bottom is a double plank Vee, with a single step somewhat similar in form to the standard navy pontoon for smaller seaplanes. Five bulkheads divide the hull into six water-tight compartments, with water-tight doors in a wing passage for access. The forward compartment has a cockpit for the lookout and navigator. In the next compartment are seated side by side the principal pilot, or aviator, and his assistant. Next comes a compartment for the members of the crew off watch to rest or sleep. After this there are two compartments containing the gasoline tanks, (where a mechanician is in attendance,) and finally a space for the radio man and his apparatus. The minimum crew consists of five men, but normally a relief crew would be carried in addition.

"The hull is designed to have an easy flaring bow, so that it can be driven through a seaway to get up the speed necessary to take the air, and a strong Vee bottom to cushion the shock of landing on the water. The combination of great strength to stand rough water, with the lightweight required of anything that flies, was a delicate compromise and it is believed that a remarkable result has been obtained in this design.

"The bare hull as completed by the yacht builder and ready for installation of equipment weighs only 2,800 pounds, yet the displacement is 28,000 pounds, or one-tenth of a pound of boat per pound of displacement. This lightness of construction was attained by a careful selection and distribution of materials. The keel is of Sitka spruce, as is the planking. Longitudinal strength is given by two girders of spruce braced with steel wire. To guarantee watertightness and yet keep the planking thin, there is a layer of muslin set in marine glue between the two plies of planking.

"The wings are of a curvature known from experience to be efficient, designated as R. A. F. 6, and carry a load of 11.7 pounds a square foot in the air, but the structural weight is only 1.2 pounds a square foot. The total area is 2,380 square feet. Wings of this size could not be constructed by the usual method and materials without materially exceeding this figure, and a great amount of research and experiment has been necessary to determine the best disposition of material to adopt.

The main wing spars are hollow spruce boxes. Each rib is a truss designed like a bridge, consisting of continuous cap strips of spruce, corresponding to the upper and lower chords of a bridge truss, tied together by an internal web system of vertical or diagonal pieces of spruce. The ribs are 12 feet long, but only weigh 26 ounces each. On test these ribs were required to carry a proof load of 450 pounds of sand for 24 hours without damage.

"An interesting detail of the wing construction is the hinged leading edge which incloses the control cables to the ailerons, or wing flaps. This eliminates the air resistance of these cables, but at the same time they are accessible for inspection by merely swinging up the leading edge on its hinges.

"The wings are arranged as a biplane with the necessary struts and wires to give girder strength. For lightness the struts are made up as a spruce box, but to decrease resistance this square portion is inclosed in a fish-shaped facing, or "streamline" of stiff fibre. To reduce any tendency of the struts to bow under load, the middle points are connected with a steel cable. The diagonal bracing between the wings is by means of a steel cable in pairs. These cables are arranged to lie one behind the other with a spruce batten between to reduce air resistance.

"The metal fittings where struts and wires are fastened to the wings presented a serious problem. The forces to be taken care of were so large that it was necessary to abandon the usual methods of the airplane builder and adopt those of the bridge designer. All forces, acting at a joint, pass through a common centre. In this case, as in a pin bridge, the forces are all applied to a large hollow bolt at the centre of the wing beam. In the design of the metal fitting, to reduce the amount of metal needed, it was decided to employ a special alloy steel of 150,000 pounds per square inch tensile strength. To increase bearing areas, bolts and pins are made of large diameter but hollow.

"The tail in this craft is unique and resembles no other flying machine or animal. The tail surfaces are made up as a biplane, which is of the general appearance and size of the usual airplane. Indeed, this tail of over 500 square feet area is twice as large as the single-seater fighting airplanes used by the army. This tail structure is supported by three hollow booms braced by steel cable in such a way as to remain clear of all breaking seas and to permit a machine gun to be fired straight after from the stern compartment without interference. The method of supporting is a radical change from former practice, but has resulted in several advantages besides an important saving in weight.

"The four Liberty engines which drive the boat are mounted between the wings. At 400 brake horsepower per engine, the maximum power is 1,600 horsepower, or with the full load of 28,000 pounds, 17.5 pounds carried per horsepower. One engine is mounted with a tractor propeller on each side of the centre line, and on the centre line the two remaining engines are mounted in tandem or one behind the other. The front engine has a tractor propeller and the rear engine a pusher propeller. This arrangement of engines is novel, and has the advantage of concentrating weights near the centre of the boat so that it can be manoeuvred more easily in the air.

"The steering and control in the air are arranged in principle exactly as in a small aeroplane, but it was not an easy problem to arrange that this fourteen-ton boat could be handled by one man of only normal strength. To insure easy operation, each control surface was carefully balanced, in accordance with experiments made in a wind tunnel on a model of it. The operating cables were run through ballbearing pulleys and all avoidable friction eliminated. Finally, the entire craft was so balanced that the centre of gravity of all weights came at the resultant centre of lift of all lifting surfaces and the tail surface so adjusted that the machine would be inherently stable in flight.

"As a result the boat will fly herself and will continue on her course without the constant attention of the pilot. However, if he wishes to change course a slight pressure of his controls is enough to swing the boat promptly. There is provision, however, for an assistant to the pilot to relieve him in rough air if he becomes fatigued or wishes to leave his post to move about the boat.

"A feature that is new in this boat is the use of welded aluminum tanks for gasoline. There are nine 200-gallon tanks made of sheet aluminum with welded seams. Each tank weighs but seventy pounds, or .35 pounds per gallon of content, about one-half the weight of the usual sheet steel or copper tank.

"The NC flying boat weighs, when fully loaded, 28,000 pounds, and when empty, but including radiator, water, and fixed instruments and equipment, 15,874 pounds. The useful load available for crew, supplies, and fuel is, therefore, 12,126 pounds, or over 43 per cent. This useful load may be put into fuel, explosives, freight, &c., in any proportion desired.

"For an endurance flight there would be a crew of five men (850 pounds), radio and radio telephone (220 pounds), food and water, signal lights, spare parts, and miscellaneous equipment (524 pounds), oil (750 pounds), gasoline (9,650 pounds). This should suffice for a flight of 1,400 sea miles. The radio outfit is of sufficient power to communicate with ships 200 miles away. The radio telephone would be used to talk to other planes in the formation or within twenty-five miles.

"The principal dimensions and characteristics of the NC type may be summarized as follows:

WASHINGTON IS WATCHING.

Receives Reports of the Progress of the Fliers.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 14.—The Navy Department was advised tonight that the naval seaplanes NC-1 and NC-3 were "standing by" at Halifax, waiting for a favorable opportunity to "hop off" to the Azores. Whether or not they would start tomorrow, it was asserted, would depend on weather conditions, which were not altogether favorable tonight.

The department this afternoon received the following dispatch from Trepassey Bay:

"Off shore storm from Cape Cod eastward has passed north, leaving light variable winds from Trepassey to Azores, and the sea has subsided.

"Conditions therefore fair for a start this evening for the long leg of the flight, but the arrival of NC-4 probably will delay it until tomorrow, when weather will be even more favorable between here and the Azores.

"Conditions from Chatham to Trepassey very good; expect NC-4 arrive about sundown today. Seaplane crews in fine condition for start today."

A log of the voyages of the NC-4 and the C-5, the dirigible bound for St. John's, was made public.

WASHINGTON, May 14, (Associated Press.)—The American naval seaplanes NC-1 and NC-3 probably will be in flight before sundown tomorrow in the first attempt to cross the Atlantic Ocean through the air.

Official reports to the Navy Department late today from Trepassey Bay, Newfoundland, the starting point of the proposed flight, intimated that the "hop off" would be made within twenty-four hours, as favorable weather along the route to the Azores was indicated.

The navy dirigible C-5 may also attempt the long cross-ocean trip either tomorrow or next day. Rising from Montauk Point early today, the airship passed Halifax before sunset and was expected to reach St. John's before daylight.

TELLS OF EVOLUTION OF TORPEDOPLANE

Woodhouse Describes Device That Promises to Revolutionize Naval Warfare.

INVENTED BY ADMIRAL FISKE

He First Saw Its Possibilities in 1910 as a Means of Defending the Philippines.

The torpedoplane, invented by Rear Admiral Bradley A. Fiske, U. S. N., retired, regarded as the basis of the famous British "mystery" airplanes found so successful in the naval operations of the war, is discussed as a weapon which promises to revolutionize naval tactics by Henry Woodhouse of the Aero Club of America in the current issue of the proceedings of the United States Naval Institute, Annapolis, Md.

The device of Admiral Fiske can be fitted to any plane of good lifting power. Mr. Woodhouse states that the naval seaplane NC-1 or any of its type would make ideal torpedoplane material, saying, "These machines can be converted into torpedoplanes by merely attaching the torpedoes under their planes or at some such convenient place, and then they become flying torpedo boats, capable of cruising at a speed of 80 miles an hour and of crossing the Atlantic."

The idea of the torpedo-carrying airplane came to Admiral Fiske during the Winter of 1910-1911 as a means of defending the Philippine Islands, according to Mr. Woodhouse. Admiral Fiske was in charge of the War Plan Section of the General Board of the Navy, and in that capacity suggested that the island possessions could be best defended against invasion by means of a large number of airplanes which would drop bombs on enemy boats going ashore from the transports and on men who might be landed. He pointed out that by increasing the size of the missile and, of course, the size of the airplane, it might be possible to sink enemy men-of-war.

Late in 1916 a committee consisting of Messrs. Alan R. Hawley, Henry A. Wise Wood, Rear Admiral Robert E. Peary, and Mr. Woodhouse made an investigation with the purpose of finding one or more new instruments, the value of which would be so great that they would give predominance to the side which employed them. After looking over the field of inventions the committee came to the conclusion that the torpedoplane patented by Admiral Fiske in July, 1912, was an invention of tremendous possibilities.

"The committee," continues Mr. Woodhouse "then asked Admiral Fiske to deliver an address on the subject, which he did at the Aeronautic Conference held in connection with the First Pan-American Aeronautic Exposition, Grand Central Palace, New York City. It created considerable interest, and as a result a fund of $2,500 was set aside for the purpose of defraying the expenses of the experiments of developing the torpedoplane. Admiral Fiske was asked to be chairman of a committee to supervise the work of developing the torpedoplane, and he appointed the following as members of his committee: Alan R. Hawley, Henry A. Wise Wood, Rear Admiral Peary, John Hays Hammond, Jr., F. Trubee Davison, Schuyler Skaats Wheeler, Frank M. Leavitt, nLawrence B. Spery, and the writer.

"At first it seemed impossible to develop an automobile torpedo weighing less than 200 pounds, having a range of about 1,000 yards at a speed of about 25 knots, but the committee was willing to have experiments carried out regardless of the possibility of failure, and three leading experts on torpedoes promptly took up the work and soon advised the committee that such a torpedo could and would be developed. Before the small torpedo had been perfected, however, large airplanes had come into use, and the need for small torpedoes ceased."

DEADLOCK ON ADRIATIC REPORTED BY ORLANDO

But One Paris Paper Hints at "Advantageous Rectifications" of the Istrian Frontier.

By WALTER DURANTY.

Copyright, 1919, by The New York Times Company.
Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, May 12.—"There is no change in the situation. Both we and the Americans are now established on the lines of last resistance. It is absolutely a deadlock."

Such was the substance of a declaration made late tonight by Premier Orlando to the leading Italian journalists. Despite the fact that the Austrians are expected to arrive at St. Germain on Wednesday, the solution of the Adriatic difficulty, so ardently desired by all parties, is yet to be found. In vain, taking hope for reality, an "inspired" writer of the Paris Midi in an editorial says:

"The Adriatic problem is likely to be intrusted to a committee of three or four persons who will have put before them a new American project, offering Italy advantageous rectifications of the frontier in Istria, with a régime similar to that of the Sarre for Flume, and the occupation by the Italians of the Dalmatian Islands only."

The French and the British would be willing to accept such a compromise. Even Italy would probably agree that it was sufficient, but President Wilson will not hear of it. To satisfy him Italy must abandon Fiume, and that is precisely what no Italian Government feels it can do.

Even should the Treaty of London be invoked by Italy, with all its drawbacks, and France and Great Britain should consent, the Italian leaders here do not attempt to disguise the fact that their troubles regarding Fiume would be only beginning. Not only are there 24,000 picked Italian troops there who would almost certainly refuse to obey any orders to give up the city to the Jugoslavs, but furthermore, the Fiume National Council more than ten days ago voted for annexation to the Italian Kingdom. With praiseworthy respect for the authority of the Allied conference in Paris the Italian commander, General Grazioli, then declined to accept this offer made to him as the representative of Italy. But it is certain to be made again, and before long. Not only will it be made, but the people of Fiume will fight, it is said, if need be, to carry it out.

deals with the manner in which President Wilson's points are applied, which is protested against.

One of the notes under consideration by the Council of Four is that presented by Count von Brockdorff-Rantzau on Tuesday night, asking authorization for the sending of German officers to greet the Austrian peace delegation. Press opinion is that the request will be denied.

The German delegation is busy preparing voluminous counterproposals for submission to the allied and associated powers as substitutes for terms of the Peace Treaty. Several economic subcommittees of the delegation met today, including the one on coal supply.

Close scrutiny of the treaty has revealed several omissions. The council has decided to correct one of these by inserting a clause providing for the withdrawal of representation on the Reparations Commission on twelve months' notice.

The Council appointed this afternoon a sub-committee, comprising one member from each of the five great powers, (Great Britain, France, Italy, the United States, and Japan,) to deal with objections and proposals from the German plenipotentiaries.

FRENCH UNMOVED BY THREATS

Natural Fear of War Punishment Seen in Scheidemann Speech.

PARIS, May 14.—Commenting upon the meeting of the German National Assembly in Berlin, the French newspapers point out that underlying the expressions against the peace terms were characteristic indications of a division between the Government and the members of the Assembly. In view of this the newspapers express the belief that a German Government crisis may be imminent.

As to the speech of Philip Scheidemann, the consensus of opinion among the commentators is that his attitude resembles that of a convicted individual whose punishment becomes imminent. The newspapers say that neither his interested appeals to pity nor his disguised threats will impress the Entente, which, united in peace as in war, will require the strict fulfillment of the peace treaty.

IRISH-AMERICANS WON'T TRY TO SEE PREMIER

Col. House Said to Have Abandoned Efforts to Get Them a Hearing.

LONDON, May 14.—Edward F. Dunne, a member of the delegation sent by Irish societies in the United States to Europe, declined today to comment on the report that Premier Lloyd George had decided not to see the Irish-Americans or to admit that he had received any such advices. Mr. Dunne and Mr. Ryan will remain in London two or three days. They say that they will make no effort to have a conference with the British Government.

It was learned last night in official quarters that Messrs. Walsh, Dunne, and Ryan would not be received by the Premier on their return to Paris and that no official or semi-official recognition would be accorded them.

According to a Reuter dispatch from Paris, Colonel E. M. House, who promised to endeavor to arrange an interview between the American delegates and the British Premier, has now, in view of their activities in Ireland, decided not to act as an intermediary.

Mr. Lloyd George has been subjected to bitter attacks for his alleged encouragement of the delegates' activities, which are regarded as a quite unwarranted interference with British domestic affairs. Even a serious journal like The Spectator has gone so far as to assert that a "dangerous conspiracy" is afoot for committing the Premier and the British Government to virtual recognition of the Irish Republic. Other newspapers complain that the fact that the delegates have fraternized with Sinn Fein leaders has given the Sinn Fein movement new life, besides placing the British authorities in Ireland in an embarrassing position. The question has been asked what would be thought if a British delegation should visit the United States on a mission of a like character.

DROPS EGGS 700 FEET, NOT ONE BROKEN

NOT A SHELL IS SMASHED

Fliers Hear of Accomplishments of Postal Air Post, One Year Old Today.

Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., May 14.—"Eddie" Stinson, flying 700 feet in the air at a speed of seventy miles an hour, today dropped a crate of eggs on the Atlantic City Airport without smashing one of them.

The eggs were tossed over the side of the plane by W. L. Watkins of Seattle, inventor of a parachute used in the demonstration. The wind carried the parachute and its burden 300 paces from the point over which they were released. An automatic device released the crate when it reached the ground. The eggs were sold as souvenirs, bringing 25 cents apiece.

Commercial aviation has reached the stage where airways of the world have been actually laid out, it was stated at tonight's session of the second Pan American Aeronautic Convention. Many practical demonstration in the last year were reported to have surpassel even the fondest expectations. As an example of the commercial accomplishment of the year, Secretary Augustus Post recalled that tomorrow marks the first anniversary of the air mail service in this country. Facts and figures given in the records established in this service were the basis of a message of congratulation sent to Otto Praeger, Second Assistant Postmaster General, who is in charge of the air system.

"One practical demonstration of what the air service has accomplished, is that tomorrow the same airplanes, propelled by the same motors which hopped into the air at the beginning of the postal service a year ago between Washington and New York will turn the trick again tomorrow," Mr. Post told the convention. "One airplane has been in the air 164 hours, flying 10,716 miles, and has carried 572,836 letters, costing only $65.80 an hour, while the second plane has been in the air a total of 222 hours, flying 15,018 miles, and has carried 485,120 letters, costing $48.34 an hour. This is truly a marvelous accomplishment, when it is considered that they flew on schedule, daily, and in all sorts of weather.

"Another striking lesson from the air mail service is that the element of danger that exists in the training of aviators in military and exhibition flying is almost entirely absent from commercial flying. Mr. Praeger, in reporting on the service for the year, says the record of the air mail service, which includes flying at altitudes as low as 50 feet during periods of marked low visibility, does not show that a single plane carrying mail has fallen from the sky, and there has not been a single death among the men carrying mail. The record with respect to accidents will compare favorably with that of any mode of mechanical transportation in the early days of its operation.

"Transportation by airplane is ordinarily twice as fast as by train, and on distances of 600 miles or more, no matter how excellent or frequent the train service, the airplane mail, at the higher rate of postage, should equal the cost of its operation. Where the train service is not as frequent or fast as it is between Washington and New York, our plane operations should show an immense profit on all distances above 500 miles."

No Pledge to Give Up Wilhelm.

THE HAGUE, May 14.—The Dutch Government denies that it has decided to surrender the former Emperor William. The question at present, it contends, concerns only Germany and the Entente.

ALLIES IN NO HURRY TO TAKE BUDAPEST

Believe Surrender Can Be Forced Without Bloodshed Even if Reds Are Not Overthrown.

VIENNA, May 13, (French Wireless Service.)—The allied troops which are marching on Budapest will not make any hurried advance on the city, according to information reaching the Acht Uhrblatt, because the allied powers feel convinced either that the Soviet Government will be overthrown by the Hungarian counter-revolutionists or else that the city will capitulate without fighting or bloodshed worth mentioning.

A decisive battle in the immediate vicinity of the city, the newspaper continues, would be likely to prove an extremely sanguinary one, as the soldiers of the Red Army, with no line upon which to withdraw and thus rendered desperate, would fight to the last to defend their lives. But if the allied powers advance slowly, as they are doing now, the position of the Soviet Government, it is argued, would become more and more perilous, as the counter-revolutionists are sure to find assistance in Budapest and as the increasing lack of food would have an effect as adverse as the loss of a battle.

Professor Phillip C. Brown of the American Embassy here, has gone to Paris to report to the American peace delegation on the situation in Hungary. He returned yesterday from a visit to Budapest.

The Hungarian Communist Army claims, according to Budapest dispatches received here, to have gained some successes against the Czechoslovaks at Fülek, sixty miles north of Budapest.

wives and children, but are not allowed to leave the precincts, which are surrounded by barbed wire fences and guarded day and night by Chinese mercenaries, who have orders to shoot any workmen trying to escape.

A special commissary has been put in charge of each factory by the Soviet. These commissaries are invested with dictatorial powers over the workmen and are in truth little better than the overseers who used to drive the African negro to work in the days of slavery.

UKRAINE AGAIN IN REVOLT.

Bolsheviki in Fierce Battle with Simon Petlura's Army.

VIENNA, May 13, (Associated Press.)—A message from Ukrainian sources indicates heavy fighting near Kiev, occasioned by Bolshevist attacks on the army of Simon Petlura. The fighting is said to be especially heavy near Berdicheff, southwest of Kiev.

The Bolshevist forces have met with new defeats recently from the Ukrainians led by Petlura. Zeleney, another peasant leader, is leading fresh revolts throughout the Governments of Kiev, Tchernigov, and Poltava, and the Bolsheviki have been forced to reinforce their troops in these districts.

The Government of West Ukraine has sent a mission to Italy to obtain the release of prisoners held there, who it is planned will be sent to reinforce the army fighting against the Bolsheviki.

36 JEWISH YOUTHS SHOT.

Wrongly Accused at Pinsk of Being Reds, Investigators Report.

STOCKHOLM, May 14.—The Jewish Press Bureau announces that according to a communication received from members of the inquiry commission at Pinsk, Russia, who investigated the recent pogrom there, thirty-six youths of Pinsk, who were in no way connected with the Bolshevist movement, were killed.

The massacre, it was declared, occurred during a meeting which was organizing for the distribution of American food supplies, and the youths were shot as Bolsheviki, without court-martial.

The communication added that the killings were due to a desire to intimidate the Jewish population.

This remark, though made apropos of Slatin Pasha's status as a delegate of the Austrian Red Cross, might apply to the attitude of the whole Austrian delegation, who evidently do not regard themselves as in the same category with the Germans, but rather as representatives of one of the new-born smaller States coming to make their terms as to territorial limits.

St. Germain was at its loveliest this afternoon when the Austrian delegation was received. Although strict military regulations were enforced, and the crowds of villagers held back by sentries from the railway station and the shady avenues through which the delegates were hurried to their abiding place, such precautions were unnecessary, for the crowds displayed mild curiosity rather than hostility.

The brilliant, warm day enhanced the beauty of the historic town, whose villas were embowered in blooming lilac hedges, with chestnut groves in full flower. Under official escort the correspondents and others were conducted ceremoniously to the station through streets from which other traffic had been barred. It seemed like a fête day, unconnected with war, and the good spirits of the crowd awaiting the Austrians appeared to be shared by them, for they emerged smiling from their special train.

It was a cosmopolitan crowd which awaited the delegation—French, English, Italian, Japanese, and American newspaper men and officers. Some of the Austrians gazed inquiringly from the windows as the train entered the station, uncertain of their reception, but Chancellor Renner was sure of his ground, and welcomed the friendly spirit displayed with heartiness, which was reciprocated in a measure by those assembled.

The Council of Four held a meeting this morning, considering problems relative to ports and waterways and some details of the Austrian treaty.

As the treaty stands, the Reparations Commission is left as a permanent institution. Much time today was taken up in the consideration of the question of Austrian ports and waterways. It is understood that this will be settled on the same principles as have governed the decisions in the German treaty.

Belief that the treaty would be handed to the Austrian delegates by the end of the present week was expressed today.

It develops that the allied powers to be represented at St. Germain in the negotiations with the Austrians will be less numerous than those at Versailles. These powers will comprise the States which declared war upon or broke diplomatic relations with Austria-Hungary.

INSISTS WHITMAN ARRANGED MEETING

Thompson Testifies Republican Chairman Glynn Transmitted Invitation to Luncheon.

TELLS OF FARE DISCUSSIONS

Niagara Senator Reads Statement Declaring Ex-Governor's Testimony Was False.

WAS URGED TO AID BILL

Witness Says Changes in Carson-Martin Measure Were Proposed to Win Him.

Ex-Governor Charles S. Whitman was directly contradicted by Senator George F. Thompson of Niagara yesterday, when the Senator appeared as a witness before the Senate Judiciary Committee at the City Hall in its investigation of the "slush fund" report which became current after Senator Thompson had informed newspaper correspondents at Albany that the traction interests had offered him a $500,000 "campaign fund" if he would support the Carson-Martin Increased Fare bill.

Senator Thompson appeared in rebuttal of testimony given by other witnesses before the committee and for the purpose of cross-examination. His testimony had to do largely with the luncheon at the Hotel St. Regis on March 29, when he was the guest of ex-Governor Whitman. The former Governor has denied under oath that he sought on that occasion unduly or improperly to sway Senator Thompson from his attitude of opposition to the bill, although he did not deny that he had sought to talk him into supporting the measure.

The Senator testifying made a categorical denial of practically every essential statement made by Mr. Whitman under oath regarding the luncheon, beginning with the latter's assertion that the meeting with Senator Thompson had been unsolicited by him. Senator Thompson testified that George A. Glynn, Chairman of the Republican State Committee, had told him the Governor wanted to meet him at luncheon.

The testimony of Senator Thompson regarding the luncheon in all probability will make it necessary for Mr. Whitman to take the stand again. He has already occupied the witness chair on two occasions. It was said last night also that the committee in all probability will call Republican State Chairman Glynn as a witness.

Assails Whitman's Statements.

Senator Thompson testified that in his opinion Mr. Whitman's sworn statements before the committee had been made "in a deliberate attempt to deceive the public." When asked on cross-examination afterwards, if he regarded the suggestions made by Mr. Whitman as improper, or in the nature of undue influence, he replied:

"You can figure that out for yourself. He held out to me the suggestion of a $50,000 law practice in New York City and spoke to me about my availability as a candidate for Governor. This was after similar suggestions had been made to me by Richard Henry Burke, whom I was led to believe represented the same interests that Mr. Whitman frankly admitted had sent him to see me."

A little later in the course of his cross-examination when Clark L. Jordan, counsel for Richard Henry Burke, the Albany lobby runner who is accused by the Senator of having approached him with the $500,000 "campaign fund" offer, tried to pin the Senator down to a definite statement as to the form in which the offer had been made by Burke and whether he had been improperly approached by others.

"I cannot recall," said the Senator.

"Do you mean that it was such a common occurrence that your memory failed to retain it?" asked Mr. Jordan. Then Senator Thompson, leaning forward and speaking with emphasis, said:

"People do not go around the Legislature at Albany with bags of money. They used to do it, but they are not doing it now. At present it is done in a twentieth century way. The idea of a slush fund coming to Albany alone and unattended—there is nothing to that. It is done now by subtle suggestions and by invoking antiquated rules binding members to 'regularity.' An honest lawmaker can come to Albany and vote twenty-five times, and he may have been delivered every time without his knowing the first thing about the fact."

Discussed His Candidacy.

In his recital of what took place at the luncheon, Senator Thompson brought into the record fragments of information which had not occurred in his earlier statement on the stand. One such bit which aroused considerable interest among committee members and spectators of a political bent, was that Mr. Whitman, when telling Senator Thompson that he would be the ideal candidate for Governor next year, had also told Mr. Thompson that he intended to become the candidate for United States Senator to succeed Senator James W. Wadsworth, Jr., who himself is a candidate for a second term.

The Judiciary Committee members sat up and took notice when earlier in the day Senator Thompson after declaring that a majority of the public utility corporation lawyers with whom he had come in contact had been absolutely proper in any suggestions they made to him with reference to public service legislation, made an exception of Whitman, Burke, and Charles G. M. Thomas, Treasurer of the Consolidated Gas Company. These he placed in the "undesirable" class.

The testimony of Senator Thompson was given in the form of a prepared statement which he read from the stand, pausing now and then to answer questions from Frank Moss, his own counsel, or members of the committee. The reading occupied more than four hours and then about two more hours were consumed in cross examination, which will continue at the session of the committee today.

The cross examination, as far as it proceeded, did not tend materially to shake any of the testimony given by Senator Thompson on direct and redirect examination. If anything his testimony tended to accentuate the issue of veracity between him and ex-Governor Whitman, and between him and Burke. A large portion of Senator Thompson's sworn statement was in denial of testimony given by Mr. Burke.

The bulk of his testimony regarding the luncheon at the St. Regis was given at the afternoon session. In the forenoon he told how ex-Governor Whitman's invitation came to him through Republican State Chairman Glynn.

Met Glynn at Club.

"On Saturday morning, March 29th," the Senator testified, "I went to the breakfast room at the Republican Club and met George Glynn. He asked me if I had heard from Governor Whitman and I told him I had not. He said that the Governor wanted to see me at the St. Regis and wanted me to come to lunch at 1 o'clock. He said: 'Can you do it?' I said: 'Yes, I think I can arrange it; what does he want to see me for?' He said he did not know. I said: 'Shall I wait to hear from him?' He said: 'No, he will expect you at 1 o'clock.'"

Senator Thompson in his statement said:

"In my talk with Governor Whitman on March 29 I did not say, as he testified, that 'they were all crooks in Albany,' or use any expression at all like it, directly or indirectly.

"The Governor's statement on the stand at Albany is a fabrication. He has attempted to deceive the public by interweaving a lot of unimportant falsehoods with a lot of unimportant facts in an attempt to make it appear:

"First, that I sought interview with him, which is untrue. Second, that I sought to make a connection to practice law in New York, which is untrue. Third, that I sought his advice in relation to the Carson-Martin bill, which is untrue. Fourth, that I gave him an intimation that I was going around talking about the Carson-Martin bill, looking for an excuse to change my attitude, which is untrue. Fifth, that I was using that opportunity to criticise Governor Hughes, which is untrue. Sixth, that I was using that opportunity to criticise Senator Burlingame, which is untrue. Seventh, that I was using that opportunity to belittle Senator Davenport, which is untrue. Eighth, that I tried to see him on Monday and sought an opportunity to change my attitude on the bill, which is untrue. Ninth, this conversation was not one which took the form of small talk or gossip.

"The now apparent purpose of the Governor's false statements on the occasion while testifying in Albany before the adjournment of the Legislature was to make trouble for me with my friends, and drive such of my friends as he claimed I had ridiculed or abused to the support of the Carson-Martin bill, for which he was working.

"The fact is that in the St. Regis conversation the Governor first thing suggested that I come to New York to practice law, and suggested $50,000 a year as the minimum that I could earn.

Discussed State Politics.

"He next entered into a talk on State politics and suggested that the next candidate for Governor should come from up-State; that I would be the most available candidate, and that he intended to run for United States Senator.

"After this he leaned back in his chair and said, 'What I wanted to see you about was that Mr. Shonts wanted me to talk to you about the Carson-Martin bill, and I want you to support it,' and he said, 'I have not been retained.'

"I said: 'Why, Governor, you do not understand this bill. It is not simply a question of permitting the Public Service Commission to regulate fares, but it carries with it a repudiation of contract obligations. I cannot support it and I have made it perfectly clear that I cannot.'

"It was then that I referred to the fact that a hearing had been had and Governor Hughes had been there and made a very convincing argument as to the power of the Legislature, but neither he nor anybody else could convince me that the Legislature should adopt a policy permitting any person, firm, or corporation to retain the benefits of a contract and be permitted at the same time to repudiate their obligations. I argued with him at some length about it and told him it would be absolutely impossible for me to support this bill in its present form.

"He argued that the railroads were in a bad way, some receiverships had been had, more were likely to follow on July 1, and that more money ought to be provided in some way. He said it would be bad Republican politics to defeat the bill, because when the receiverships came, if I defeated the bill, the Republican Party would be charged with it. I told him I did not so regard it, that I would take all the responsibility for my own individual acts, and that the matter was not a party measure and I did not believe that anybody would dare suggest that it should be made one.

Asked About Revision.

"I told him it was not any of my business how much fare the duly constituted authorities in the City of New York allowed the railroads to collect, that I was not going to worry over that, but that I would oppose any impairment of a contract and had no objection to a revision of a contract where benefits as well as obligations could be revised. He then wanted to know if there was some other form in which the bill could be put that would satisfy me. I told him I did not know; I did not have a copy of the bill available, was in New York on other business, had foreclosed my position on this bill some time before, and had not thought about it until he called it to my attention."

Senator Thompson testified regarding another conversation he had with Mr. Whitman, which caused prolonged outbursts of mirth among committee members and spectators. This conversation occurred toward the end of the legislative session last year and had reference to what was known as the Pratt bill, a predecessor of the Carson-Martin bill and identical with the latter measure in intent and purpose, if not in form. The promoters of the bill had received favorable statements regarding the measure from Senate Leader Elon R. Brown and from Speaker Sweet of the Assembly, and told Senator Thompson, who then as now was Chairman of the Public Service Committee of the Senate, that Governor Whitman had expressed himself as favoring the measure in conversation with them.

"The bill was drawn as an emergency bill and the time was short, and I suggested that the Governor ought to send an emergency message to get the bill through," Senator Thompson testified. "I determined to talk to the Governor about it, and I went downstairs one day and into the back room and said: 'Governor, are you familiar with this increased fare legislation?' He said he had had some talk about it. 'Well,' I said, 'what do you think about it?' 'Why,' he said, 'what do you think about it?' I said: 'Well, I do not like to be for it.' And then the Governor said: 'I do not, either. I do not like this six-cent fare idea. I am going to run for Governor in the Fall. My picture will be in the subway. I do not want people digging down into their pockets for an extra cent at that time with an opportunity for looking at my picture while I am running for Governor, for they might call me the "Penny Governor."' He said: 'I would rather give them 10 cents than 6 cents.' 'Well,' I said, 'do you want this bill?' And he said: 'No, I don't. I wish it wouldn't be passed.' I said: 'As far as I am concerned, I shall oppose it.' And then I left."

While Senator Thompson was testifying regarding his relations with Burke he took occasion to deny testimony Burke had given regarding a talk he had with the Senator about Mayor Hylan at the Republican Club in March this year.

"I did not, as Burke testified, call Mayor Hylan 'Red Mike,'" said the Senator. "I have often heard him called that, however."

It was at this point in the testimony that Senator Thompson read into the record a letter he had written to John D. Rockefeller, Jr., but never sent, and another letter written to Mayor Hylan which was sent. The Hylan letter, contrary to testimony given by Burke, was given to the City News Association to distribute to the morning papers, according to the Senator. Burke, when he occupied the stand, defied Mr. Moss to place these letters in evidence and declared that they would show Senator Thompson as "not fit to sit in the Senate."

Make No Impression.

The letters when produced did not cause even a mild sensation. The unsent Rockefeller letter was a suggestion to him that he would derive profit for himself and at the same time benefit the public if he would take the initiative in a project to have electric energy generated at the mines and conveyed to this city on a wire, thus eliminating bulky railroad transportation of coal.

The letter to Mayor Hylan was one in which the Senator offered to become sponsor for a bill to confer on the city authorities power to take up with the traction companies a revision of the dual subway contracts which would relieve the city from provisions embodied in them. This letter Mayor Hylan did not acknowledge until April 3, although it was written on March 15.

"Where is the sinister suggestion in any of these letters?" asked Mr. Moss.

"I leave that to the committee," said Senator Thompson.

At the close of the afternoon session Clark T. Jordan asked Chairman Burlingame to give him a subpoena for the vouchers representing the expenses of the Thompson committee at the Biltmore in 1915, 1916, and 1917. This was refused. Burke has testified that some women were entertained at the hotel at the State's expense.

Senator Thompson will resume the stand when the committee meets again this forenoon.

EXPLAINS MEAT EXPORTS.

Selling Army Supplies Abroad Unconnected with Prices, Says Baker.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 14.—Reports that a policy of holding for export trade the many millions of pounds of canned meat in the surplus stocks of the War Department would work to the benefit of the packing interests by keeping up the market prices in this country brought a retort today from Secretary of War Baker in which he denied emphatically that the War Department had any interest in maintaining price levels.

"There has been," he says, "a misapprehension with regard to the policy of the War Department in disposing of meat supplies. The meats in question are specially prepared meats in special containers and of a kind never sold commercially in the United States—roast beef and specially salted pork—which are not articles of ordinary commercial trade in the United States. The cans are not even labeled.

"The question of disposing of these supplies is not a question of maintaining a price level—the War Department has no interest in that—but of some way to dispose of them. We cannot, for instance, set up retail stores all over the United States to sell army supplies, and therefore have to dispose of them in bulk. So much of the supplies as are of the ordinary commercial kind in the United States, and which people recognize, we are selling in the United States, selling them in any way in which we can prevent speculation. But specially prepared army supplies, seven-pound cans of roast beef and things of that sort, are not known to the commercial public of the United States, and the buying public knows nothing about them, and they would not be available for ordinary commerce here.

"I have talked the whole question over with the Sales Director, and there are a number of questions that have to be solved. Some products, for instance, by repacking in new tins and being labeled could be resold in the United States. There is a possibility we may be able to dispose of substantial quantities of food supplies in institutions where bulk purchases are made. All avenues are to be sought out, and so far as possible food and clothes will be sold in the United States.

"The market regulates the price; we have no power to set an arbitrary price. If we had a million pairs of shoes to sell we would have no means of going to John Jones and letting him buy a pair of army shoes, but by putting them on the market it would probably affect the market price.

"There has been no agreement with the meat packers with regard to the distribution of meat supplies; but they have suggested that the most practical thing to do would be to sell these supplies in Europe, instead of disposing of them in this country, because of the fact that they are packed for transportation across the ocean. In his way it would not be necessary for the packers to prepare other food for transportation while the present supply is being distributed in this country."

SESSION REFORM GAINS SUPPORT

More Members Indorse McArthur's Bill for Additional Gathering of Congress.

LONGER TIME FOR WORK

Would Obviate Necessity of President Convening Extra Session to Get Business Going.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 14.—So many assurances have come to Representative McArthur of Oregon in support of his move to have each newly elected Congress meet on the March 5 following the Congressional election that he feels confident there will be favorable action on the project at the coming session of Congress.

Mr. McArthur's intention to launch a movement when Congress meets for the enactment of legislation to advance the meeting date of each newly elected Congress was announced in a dispatch to THE NEW YORK TIMES printed Tuesday morning. At that time Mr. McArthur had received pledges from a number of members with whom he had talked that they would support the project. Since then he has received many other such promises and has been gratified by editorial support of the project in various newspapers.

Mr. McArthur today completed the final draft of the bill he will introduce next Monday with a request that it be referred to the Judiciary Committee for immediate consideration. The text follows:

A BILL.

Providing for an additional session of the Congress on the 5th day of March following the election of such Congress.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representative of the United States of America in Congress assembled, that, in addition to the present regular annual session of the Congress, as provided by Section 4 of Article 1 of the Constitution of the United States, there shall be a session of the Sixty-seventh Congress, and of each succeeding Congress thereafter, commencing at 12 o'clock meridian on the 5th day of March following the election of such Congress; provided that, whenever the 5th day of March shall fall on Sunday, the session of the Congress authorized herein shall commence on the following day.

Under the McArthur plan there would be three regular sessions of each Congress, as follows:

First session—Meet March 5, immediately following Congressional elections and continue until adjournment.

Second session—Meet the first Monday in December following, and continue until adjournment.

Third session—Meet the first Monday of the December following and continue until March 4 following.

"Under the present arrangement," said Mr. McArthur tonight, "a new Congress comes into being on March 4 following its election, but does not actually begin work until the first Monday in December, or thirteen months after the expression of the people at the polls. I contend that this intervening time is altogether too long and that members chosen to make the nation's laws and to attend to its public business should begin their work as soon as possible after election day, and should meet in regular session by authority of law and not by call of the President. I believe in Government by law, not by men.

"Under the present arrangement, unless the President sees fit to call a special session, nine months of time is actually wasted, and when the regular session does convene members have to rush the consideration of important legislation during the long session, and much of it goes over until the short session, which automatically terminates on March 4 of the odd year.

"It is a physical impossibility for the various committees to consider appropriation bills during the short session and get them out of the way by March 4. It is my earnest belief that the measure I have prepared will solve this difficulty by permitting the incoming Congress to consider and pass the appropriation bills for the fiscal year, commencing July 1, following the beginning of the life of the Congress. This will tend greatly to reduce the amount of important legislation considered in the short session, in which there are always more or less 'lame ducks,' who take little or no interest in Congressional proceedings.

"The public business has grown to such proportions that Congress ought to be in session practically all the time, with the possible exception of a couple of months during the hot weather period of the Summer. The arrangements contemplated in my bill will permit just this thing, and the work of the Congress can begin immediately after the Congress comes into being, and it will be well under way before the hot weather period.

"There is nothing in my measure which in any way conflicts with the Constitutional provision that Congress shall meet at least once a year, and that such meeting should be on the first Monday in December."

ALTERING A STATUE.

The statue of Germania at the Custom House has been so changed that it now represents Belgium. What has been done is clearly seen in a sketch in the Rotogravure Picture Section of The New York Times next Sunday.

'FUROR TEUTONICUS' FEARED BY EBERT

Wilson Illusion Gone, German People Put Hope in French and English Workingmen.

SHOCKED BY CRUEL TERMS

President's Words Quoted to Show That This Is Not His Peace at All.

BERLIN, May 11, (Associated Press.)—Declaring that the terms of peace presented by the allied and associated Governments to Germany contemplated the "physical, moral, and intellectual paralysis" of the German people; that Germans were "hypnotized" by statements made by President Wilson, and that he, himself, was looking forward to the future "with gravest apprehensions," President Ebert said today that he still hoped that American democracy would not accept the treaty framed at the Peace Conference.

He rejected with disdain the suggestion that the present German Government would resign rather than accept or reject the terms, saying that the Government would "hold out to the end."

"When in the course of 2,000 years," he asked, "was ever a peace offered to a defeated people which so completely contemplates their physical, moral, and intellectual paralysis as do the terms enunciated at Versailles?

"In his message to Congress on Dec. 4, 1917, President Wilson said: 'The frightful injustice committed in the course of this war must not be made good by wishing a similar injustice on Germany and her allies. The world would not tolerate the commission of a similar injustice as reprisal and realignment.'

"The German people are only beginning to awake from the hypnosis into which they have been lulled because of their solid faith in the sincerity and truthfulness of Mr. Wilson's program and his fourteen points. The awakening will be terrifying, and we all look forward to it with the gravest apprehension. In the face of the cold, naked realities, we still consciously cling to the faith which found its epitome in the names of Wilson and the United States and the conception of the democracy of the League of Nations.

"We cannot believe that this has all been an illusion and that the confidence and hopes of a whole people have been duped in a manner unknown to history. Even now, optimists are saying: 'Wilson will not permit it, he dare not possibly permit it.'"

The President added that he and his party could not blame the Pan-Germans for the "immodest haste with which they are now digging up their former speeches and editorials in which the Social Democrats and other Liberals were ridiculed for their belief in President Wilson's program."

"I and my colleagues," he said in conclusion, "upon whom rests the terrific burden of the forthcoming decisions, hope and pray that the German people, who staked all on President Wilson and the United States, shall not find themselves deceived. If, however, the American democracy actually accepts the present peace terms as its own, it becomes an accomplice and an abettor of political blackmailers; it surrenders the traditional American principle of fair play and sportmanship and trails the ideals of true democracy in the dust.

"Notwithstanding the night now covering them, I have abiding faith in the future of the German people and in the unconquerability of their souls. This people, who have given the world so much in science, learning, and industry, must not go down to oblivion. They still have a cultural mission to perform and ethical treasures to bestow."

President Ebert said that the present Government would "hold out to the last," and scouted the idea that it would "make room for others to accept or reject the treaty."

"The German people," he continued, "have demolished the rule of autocracy and political mandacity at home, but they have not undertaken this job in order to enable the same antiquated system elsewhere to dictate the future of the world in a grossly exaggerated form.

"Germany laid down her arms and armament when she entered upon this combat six months ago, therefore she is now all the more effectively armored morally when she faces world foes in defense of those aims. She has seized and unfurled a new banner on which are inscribed President Wilson's Fourteen Points, which the President apparently has deserted. She therefore hopes that the American people will correctly grasp and interpret the deeper significance of the new spiritual struggle upon which we are now entering."

President Ebert said that the ominous quiet produced by the first announcement of the peace terms was a characteristic indication of their effect on the German people.

"For the moment," he continued, "we were all crushed. We had a feeling as if we had been stunned by a blow from a heavy club, momentarily paralyzing all mental action. The blow found the German people unprepared, and therefore its effect was all the greater."

The President said that he feared an outbreak of "psychic furor Teutonicus" within a few days and that the wrath of the soul of the people when it reached the boiling point would know no bounds, as a result of the deep disappointment and anger, born of fury and just indignation.

"The peace draft laid before us," he said, "produced an equal feeling of horror and revulsion. It not only signifies distortion but the complete negation of the Fourteen Points enunciated by President Wilson, the realization of whose program we took for granted—a faith to which we were entitled on the strength of Secretary Lansing's note of Nov. 5."

Many Quotations From Wilson.

"Before me lies a pamphlet discussing President Wilson and a peace of justice. It deals with his Senate message of Jan. 22, 1917, in which he refers to the need of a peace without victory. President Wilson says: 'The victor must not force his conditions on the vanquished. This would mean peace asserted under humiliation, under force and intolerable sacrifice and leave nothing definite; it would leave a sting, revenge, bitterness, giving such a peace an insecure foundation, leaving it to rest on quicksand. Only a peace between equals can endure.'"

[Textually President Ebert slightly misquoted President Wilson's utterances, but in the main his version of President Wilson's address to the Senate carries the meaning of President Wilson's words.]

"Where is there to be found in the peace draft which President Wilson jointly signed with the other allied representatives the slightest trace of the exalted ideals he proclaimed?

"In reply to the Pope's note of Aug. 1, 1917, President Wilson said, 'peace will not be secured if it is based on political and economic restrictions which are calculated to benefit new nations and paralyze others.'"

[President Wilson in this instance also is slightly misquoted, having said in acknowledgment of the communication of the Pope: "Responsible statesmen must now everywhere see, if they never saw before, that no peace can rest securely upon political or economic restrictions meant to benefit some nations and cripple or embarrass others, upon vindictive action of any sort, or any kind of revenge or deliberate injury.]

Continuing his reference to the provisions of the peace treaty, President Ebert said:

"The German people hope that the world will not countenance such avenging aspirations. It already is expectantly catching the first voices from the ranks of French and English workingmen. It also pins hope upon these harbingers of a new and better world configuration. At the same time it proclaims to the world at large that, regardless of what others may do to her, Germany does not purpose for a single moment to tolerate such injustice."

DOUBT SCHEIDEMANN IS FIRM FOR REJECTION

Conservative Press in Berlin Unconvinced—Fear the Czechs Will Invade Bavaria.

Copyright, 1919, by The New York Times Company.
Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

COPENHAGEN, May 13.—Chancellor Scheidemann's speech has been a surprise to most sections of the Berlin press, which read into it a decision and firmness that, according even to the Vorwärts, have been lacking in his previous announcements. Conservative organs, such as the Deutsche Tageszeitung, can even recognize some merit in the speech, but still express doubt whether the Government will have courage enough to abide by its "No."

According to the Berlin correspondent of the Berlingske Tidende, meetings of protest in the eastern districts of Germany affected by the projected peace treaty are becoming more numerous, being supported by the working classes as if these had been Pan Germans all their lives.

From Bavaria it is rumored that the Czechoslovaks are concentrating troops in Taus, West Bohemia, and it is thought that these are to march into Bavaria if acceptance of the peace terms is refused.

WOMEN DENOUNCE TERMS.

Zurich Conference Says They "Continue Rule of Force and Spoliation."

PARIS, May 14.—The Peace Conference today received from the Women's International Conference for Permanent Peace at Zurich the resolution adopted yesterday by the conference denouncing the terms of peace with Germany.

The resolution declaes that the terms tacitly sanction secret diplomacy, deny the principles of self-determination, recognize the right of the victor to the spoils of war, and violate principles of justice. The rule of force, it is declared, is continued by the financial and economic clauses.

The conference at Zurich also telegraphed to the Peace Conference a resolution, which had been adopted unanimously, deploring the famine and pestilence in Central and Eastern Europe and urging that the interallied war organization be transformed immediately into an international peace organization to deal with food, finance, and transport throughout the world. The resolution also urged that relief be organized immediately, and that if the supply of food and transport were not sufficient all countries be rationed. It was added that no luxuries should be transported from one country to another until relief had been sent to all peoples.

Among the American women who are attending the Zurich conference are Miss Jane Addams, Miss Lillian Wald, Mrs. Florence Kelley, and Miss Jeannette Rankin.

Naval and Military Officers Meet Her Coffin Landed at Dover.

DOVER, May 14, (Associated Press.)—The body of Edith Cavell, the English nurse executed at Brussels by the Germans, arrived today from Ostend and is resting tonight in an especially prepared chapel. It will be shipped to London tomorrow and a memorial service will be held in Westminster Abbey.

The destroyer Radiant, flagship of the commander of the Dover patrol, brought the coffin to the naval pier today, it being met there by high naval and military officers. A procession was formed, and it moved through crowded streets to the chapel, women who rendered war service marching in the advanced ranks of the cortège.

Rush of French Pensions.

PARIS, May 13.—In replying to complaints of delay in the allocation of military pensions, Leon Abrami, Under Secretary of State for Pensions, told the Chamber of Deputies today that with his present staff it would take from twelve to fifteen years to clear up the work. He said that the bureau had 1,700,000 cases of wounded and widows to deal with and that the present staff, which had been reduced through the demobilization, was able to cope with only 120,000 a year.

The Under Secretary suggested that the staff be reinforced by the temporary employment of wounded soldiers.

ALLIES FIGHT REDS ON MURMANSK ROAD

CAPTURE TOWN OF MALESKA

And Hear News That White Finns Have Cut Railroad Northwest of Russian Capital.

MALESKA, North Russia, May 6.—On Thursday at 8 P. M. we left Urosero. With a small force composed of Russians and British marines, French, Americans and Canadians, to mention them in the order of importance given by number, and at 10:15 o'clock Saturday morning, following a series of picturesque fights which cost some valuable lives, while far more expensive to the enemy, we captured intact this pretty little town on the route along the Murmansk-Petrograd railway.

For the first few miles we travelled in a luxuriously armored train. We were warned by recent explosions to expect blown up bridges, and Colonel Leckie said that as we might have to walk 255 miles or more everybody must carry two days' rations. There had been a blizzard on the previous night, so the forest lay deep in snow, slush, and ice. We had taken an hour to pass destroyed bridges, for the expedition was furnished with a small field gun which had been carried in sections, with cases of ammunition, on railway trolleys by each gap of twisted rails and tangled timbers.

By 11 o'clock, only half way to the midnight rendezvous, the men were much exhausted. Now we formed a second party to press on, and passed six more wrecked bridges and half a mile of uprooted track, before joining the officer commanding at 1 A. M. at a group of camp fires. Having tarried an hour and a half to enjoy the warmth and a bite of biscuit and bully beef, we set out after sending messages to the gun party bidding them take their time in following as best they could. There were three miles of stealthy travelling through darkness, when the foremost units crouched to earth as a hurricane of machine-gun fire swept their path. The rest of us were bidden instantly to withdraw, and having chosen a position half a mile back, we waited anxiously for dawn.

At 5 o'clock, scouts reporting that the enemy apparently had retired, a flanking party of Americans went forth. As they filed past the wheelbarrows with elastic steps and smiling faces, somebody sang out, "Hello, Garrett! Where have you been?" to a subaltern whose countenance fairly glowed. "Had a good night's rest in a lovely feather bed," Lieutenant Garrett gaily replied, as afterward we pleasantly remembered, "and I feel like a new man."

Presently we resumed the march. Soon I was bending over the dead body of a Chinaman, for our foes on this front include unscrupulous and bloodthirsty Mongolians imported a few years ago to make the railroad, who take the Bolsheviki's pay to fight the Allies and execute the Russian bourgeoisie. Those taken prisoner now do an honest day's work for board and lodging.

In the bright sunshine it was pleasant walking along the railroad path through an unending forest of spruce and firs normally upright amid the disarray of fallen trees and burnt stumps, with areas of saturated moss where the snow and ice had melted. The only sign of men was an occasional extensive woodpile.

At last, however, we beheld a house. Approaching cautiously, several of us noted the flying figure of a Chinaman among the trees. Away dashed our marksmen in pursuit, and soon the forest rang out with rifle and revolver shots. Fifty yards further, we found a Russian badly wounded in the leg, squatting among the wood piles. He explained that he was a conductor on a train, pressed into the Bolshevist service, and that there were forty-five Red Guards in the forest. Further along we found the Americans had earlier been engaged with a large party of Red Guards, while an armored train with three engines had moved up and down the line raining bullets on them from six machine guns. They were severely punished by the Americans with two Lewis guns. The train had recently departed.

Searching the forest, we found fifteen dead Bolsheviki, eight being Mongolians. Five lay within a dozen square yards. Alas! Less than forty paces away we came upon the bodies of Lieutenant Frank B. Garrett of Texas and Sergeant Frederick H. Patterson of California. An American officer and two privates were missing. Their comrades spent hours vainly searching. It was not till twelve hours later that we learned that no worse fate had overtaken them than being temporarily lost in the forest.

Meanwhile, pushing on to a little village which the Bolsheviki had deserted, each had the luxury of two hours and a half sleep on the floor of a house heated with a stove. Not merely did we rejoice at having captured the principal siding between Urosozero and Maseraka, but prisoners confirmed the report that the White Finns had cut the railway 30 miles south of Petrozovodsk. It was cheering to know that somebody else was lending a hand in this glorious campaign, not only to relieve the pressure on the Archangel fronts, but also to rescue Holy Russia from famine and folly.

British Fleet on Watch in Finland.

LONDON, May 13.—Questioned today in the House of Commons regarding the Stockholm report that the Entente Powers are preparing for naval and military operations against Petrograd, Andrew Bonar Law, Governmnet leader in the House of Commons, said a British squadron had been at Helsingfors for a long time to meet whatever emergencies might arise, but "no definite proposal of the kind suggested is contemplated at this moment."

GERMANS ADVISED TO ACCEPT PEACE

Coblenz Volkszeitung Points to Consequences if the Allies' Terms Are Refused.

'WEEK OF MOURNING' CLASH

Police Ban on Lively Music Gets a Setback as Cafe Band Plays Sousa's March.

By EDWIN L. JAMES.

COBLENZ, May 12.—The Coblenzer Volkszeitung, the organ of the Catholic Party, in a leading editorial this morning cautions the Germans against going too far in declaring that Germany should not sign the peace terms, and calls attention to the consequences of that course. This conservative journal suggests that the best plan is for the Germans to sign up and get back to work.

It will be recalled that Erzberger, who was originally a member of the peace delegation, and who is the political leader of the Catholic Rhinelanders, was in favor of acceptance of the terms as the only course open to Germany.

The Volkszeitung editorial dwells at length on the harshness of the terms. Then it says:

"And yet the dangers which would be involved in rejecting the terms must not be underestimated. Our course must be determined for us by the proper authorities. Our situation is no more desperate than was that of Carthage at the end of the second Punic war. The inhabitants of that city were stripped of everything which, so far as could be seen, would be of the slightest value to them in recovering their strength. Nevertheless the city found means to build up new power."

The editor then goes on to say that the signing of the peace terms would, of course, put Germany under certain handicaps, and he adds:

"But more serious than these political or moral handicaps is our moral collapse. Under this heading we include the reluctance to work, the lowering of our standards of justice and morality, the indifference to property rights, lack of any sense of decency, no respect for honor and humanity, failure to recognize the rights of individuals, refusal to obey persons in authority, complete disregard of all rules necessary to maintain public order, and boundless greed and lust. Our people talk about liberty, but use intimidation to achieve their objects. While praising democracy, they erect a class Government which is much worse than the old one which it is the custom to criticise so severely."

After further attacking the present Government, the editorial concludes:

"Let us put men in charge of the Government whom the entire people will support. Such an administration would be powerful even though it had no army to rely upon. Resting upon the solid support of the population, such a Government could lead us out of our present lowly situation to new heights of prosperity."

Many Americans hearing the local denunciation of the peace terms recently had almost begun to believe the Germans really meant what they said about the ruin of their nation and the inhumanity of the Allies. But the German psychology is such as to give these observers new suprises. The latest incident here illustrates this.

The week of national mourning decreed by the German Government began yesterday. All Germans were to deplore the sad times to which their country had come. One evidence of mourning was to be the banning of all music in cafés. Now the Trause Café is a popular tea room of Coblenz, conducted by Germans for Germans mainly, though American officers are permitted to patronize it under army rules.

The café orchestra tuned up and started playing at 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon. Shortly afterward a delegation of the local police appeared and told the proprietor that Germany had gone into mourning and that there must be no music. The orchestra was stopped. Forthwith the proprietor of this café went to the American Provost Marshal and, telling what had happened, asked if his orchestra could play.

The American officer replied:

"If that's the way you feel about it, go ahead and play your head off."

And so at 5:20 o'clock the orchestra marched back to its places and played "The Stars and Stripes Forever."

Not one person among perhaps 300 of the city's leading citizens who were there exhibited any resentment, none left the place, and that ended the demonstration as to the sincerity of the German week of mourning.

The Americans, therefore, are disposed to discount all this talk of Germany's not signing the peace terms. An observer here cannot speak as to the rest of Germany, but so far as the Rhineland goes, if Brockdorff-Rantzau, after making his best efforts, can get no reduction in the price of peace, it seems probable that the Rhineland will be willing to pay the price, even though it pays with the additional handicap of military occupation for some years to come.

OLD GUARD YIELDS; CUMMINS CHOSEN

Conference Elects Iowa Senator President Pro Tem. as Concession to Progressives.

BIGGER FIGHT POSTPONED

Penrose Still Backed by Old-Liners for Finance Chairmanship, but Warren May Be Shifted.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 14.—Without any show of the controversy that has raged over the contemplated naming of Senators Penrose and Warren to the chairmanships, respectively, of the Finance and Appropriations Committees, the Republican conference met today at the Capitol and, in an hour's time, completed its program for reorganization of the Senate.

The conference compromised the fight on President Pro Tempore by choosing Senator Cummins of Iowa. The Progressives had named him at a conference earlier in the day, after having failed to get into touch with Senator Lenroot of Wisconsin to ascertain if he would accept the office. The old-line Republicans were willing to accept Mr. Cummins, Mr. Johnson of California or Mr. Lenroot as a compromise.

The prospective naming of Senators Penrose and Warren to the disputed chairmanships did not come up at the conference. Outside, however, there was no abatement of the opposition of the Progressives. During the day talk was heard around the Capitol that the Old Guard leaders, while adhering to their program to put Mr. Penrose at the head of the Finance Committee, had decided upon a change in plan regarding Mr. Warren.

According to the latest arrangement the Old Guard intends to give the chairmanship of the Appropriations Committee to Mr. Smoot of Utah, who is eager for the place, while Mr. Warren probably will be shunted to the chairmanship of either the Military Affairs Committee or the Agricultural Committee, upon both of which he is the ranking member. Mr. Warren has insisted that he does not want to head the Military Affairs Committee. If he declines to take the place, it is understood that the Old Guard will insist upon his becoming chairman of the Agricultural Committee, thus paving the way toward compromise with the Progressives in the fight on Mr. Penrose.

The Progressives are not opposed to Mr. Smoot for Chairman of the Appropriations Committee, and would not oppose Mr. Warren for any other Chairmanship than that of the Appropriations. But they are still full of fight on the Penrose program. The opposition to the Pennsylvanian will come in conference after the Committee on Committees, to be appointed by Mr. Lodge, makes up its list of committees, including the Chairmanships.

Senator Borah today reiterated his intention of fighting Mr. Penrose, not alone in caucus, but also on the Senate floor. He declared that from seven to ten Progressives probably would stand with him in carrying the fight to the Senate. Other Progressives, however, expressed the belief that the opposition to Mr. Penrose would not run to the floor of the Senate.

"Harmony a foot thick," was the way Senator Moses of New Hampshire spoke of the Republican conference after it was over. The Old Guard leaders before the conference prevailed upon the Progressive leaders not to project the fight against Mr. Penrose and Mr. Warren until the party had organized the Senate next Monday. The Progressives agreed to this, if able to effect a compromise on President Pro Tempore as against Senator Curtis, who had been picked by some of the Old Guard leaders. The Progressives again urged Senator Johnson to stand for President Pro Tem., but the Californian declined to do so. This brought the Progressives to decide upon Senator Cummins.

When the Republican conference met at 11 o'clock, word reached the Republican leaders that the Progressives would support Mr. Cummins for President Pro Tem. This was entirely acceptable to the Old Guard. The conference elected Mr. Lodge Chairman, this carrying with it the leadership of the Senate. Senator Wadsworth was renamed as Secretary. The conference then chose Senator Curtis for whip, his present post. Senator Borah nominated Mr. Cummins for President Pro Tem. The vote, as in all other cases, was unanimous.

Senator Brandegee of Connecticut moved that Mr. Lodge, as Chairman, appoint the Committee on Committees, which will have the job of giving assignments to all the Senators. By virtue of having made the motion, Mr. Brandegee will become Chairman of the committee, which is to consist of nine members.

Senator McCumber of North Dakota moved that Mr. Lodge appoint a Steering Committee of nine members. Mr. McCumber will become Chairman of that committee; Senator New of Indiana moved the appointment by the Chairman of a Committee on Patronage, consisting of three Senators; as in the other cases, he will be Chairman.

George A. Sanderson, a retired railroad builder and business man of Chicago, was chosen Secretary of the Senate. David S. Barry, Washington correspondent of The Providence Journal, was elected Sergeant-at-Arms. Carl A. Loeffler was re-elected Assistant Doorkeeper.

Forty-three Senators attended the conference, the absenteees being Cummins, Gronna, Lenroot, Fall, and La Follette.

The conference adopted the Norris resolution, submitted some months ago in caucus, providing that no Senator may be Chairman of more than one of the ten important committees, Appropriations, Agricultural and Forestry, Commerce, Finance, Foreign Relations, Interstate Commerce, Judiciary, Military Affairs, Naval Affairs, and Post Offices and Post Roads. Under the resolution no Senator may be a member of more than two committees. The conference restricted committees to seventeen members.

Senator Lodge, after the conference, said the program for organizing the Senate was complete and would go through Monday without a hitch. Asked about the fight on Senators Penrose and Warren, he replied that it was a matter for the Committee on Committees to thresh out.

With Senator Brandegee, one of the Old Guard faithful, as Chairman of the Committee on Committees, it is regarded as a foregone conclusion that Mr. Penrose will be named as Chairman of the Finance Committee. As to Mr. Warren, Senator Watson of Indiana was authority for the statement that Mr. Warren would not be Chairman of the Appropriations Committee.

The plan of the Old Guard leaders, it is said, is to have the committees, with the chairmanships, offered to the Senate en bloc and a vote taken upon them in their entirety. If Senator Borah or any other Progressive should endeavor to have the Finance Committee Chairmanship or that of the Appropriations Committee separated from the others, the Republican leaders would count upon support from the Democrats, if necessary, to put their program through by refusal to accede to the request. It has been the custom, in organization of the Senate before, to vote for the committees as a whole, instead of individually.

If the Progressives, on the other hand, should force a separate vote on the Finance Committee Chairmanship the Republicans would depend on enough Democrats staying out of the Senate to allow the Old Guard to put their program through.

WARN OF OBSTACLES IN AMERICANIZING

Better Comprehension of Aliens Here Urged at Washington Conference.

HOPE IN LEAGUE OF NATIONS

H. A. Miller Says It Will Remove Race Grudges—Prejudice Against Aliens Deplored.

WASHINGTON, May 14.—Representatives of foreign-born residents of the United States told the Americanization Conference of the Interior Department today that native Americans had much to learn in attempting to make citizens of aliens. Sharp criticism of the contempt exhibited by some persons toward foreigners and of the general ignorance in this country of European racial differences was expressed by the speakers.

Warning was given by several speakers that no attempt should be made to force American citizenship on an alien, as that, it was declared, would lead him to believe that this country was attempting to submerge minority nationalities, as was attempted in Austria-Hungary and other despotic countries.

Albert Mamaty of Pittsburgh, President of the Slovak League of America, said that those who came to these shores of their own choice, seeking freedom from oppression, were easily made citizens, but not if they all were grouped disdainfully as "hunkies" or "dagoes" or relegated to inferiority collectively as plain "foreigners."

The same belief was expressed in a different way by Nathan Peyser, Executive Director of the New York Educational Alliance, who said that Americanization could be advanced only if there was a sound and sympathetic understanding of the psychology of the various national groups which come to the United States, their ideals, religions and the reasons why they sought a new home.

Mr. Mamaty questioned the wisdom of what had been done by native Americans to make citizens of foreigners in the past.

"Little or nothing has been done to raise them to a better social standard," he said. "Especially have the foreign born women been neglected."

Mr. Mamaty was especially insistent that no effort should be made to force foreign-born residents or citizens to discard the use of their native tongues.

"If American ideals could be expressed only in English," he said, "what patriots would be Emma Goldman, Victor Berger, and the I. W. W., compared with hundreds of men who died in France for the liberty of this country? Don't suppress the foreign-language press in the idea that you are making Americans of its readers. The foreign press is read almost exclusively by those who came to this country as adults, not by their children. For the former, their native-language papers are essential."

The loyalty of the foreign born during the war was praised by Felix J. Streyckmans of the Chicago Liberty Loan organization.

The Peace Conference was called the "best Americanization agency" by Herbert A. Miller, director of the Mid-European Union and Professor of Sociology in Oberlin College, Ohio.

"The foreign-born resident needs from America an insistence that there be an adequate League of Nations to eliminate the injustices of the past in Europe," Mr. Miller said. "He will never forget the land of his birth so long as injustice prevails there. He will always be longing to help those of his racial brothers left behind."

Raymond F. Crist, Deputy Commissioner of Naturalization, described the work of the Naturalization Bureau in making citizens.

Secretary Lane was the principal speaker tonight at a banquet of the delegates.

BAKER TO TELL OF 165TH.

Secretary of War Will Speak at Opera House Exercises.

Secretary of War Newton D. Baker will tell of the exploits of the 165th Infantry, U. S. A., (formerly the 69th Regiment,) at the welcome home to the 165th Infantry to be given by the Veteran Corps of the old 69th Regiment at the Metropolitan Opera House tonight. The 165th saw much hard service. The regiment was composed of 2,800 men when it marched down Fifth Avenue to sail for France. Only 700 whole men have returned.

One of the features of the welcome home will be the exhibition of an Irish flag carried in all the battles in which the regiment participated. The flag has been turned over to the Friendly Sons of St. Patrick by William Evers, Corporal, Headquarters Company, 165th Infantry.

Francis P. Garvan, Alien Property Custodian, will preside at the welcome home of the veterans. Martin Conboy and Judge Mulqueen will speak. Miss Margaret Romaine, soprano of the Metropolitan Opera House, will sing several selections. The Friendly Sons of St. Patrick Glee Club will sing, accompanied by the 69th Regiment Band.

When Secretary Baker arrives at the Pennsylvania Station he will be met by the present 69th Regiment, under the command of Colonel John J. Phelan, and escorted to the opera house. A committee of the Veteran Corps and many members of the 165th will also be on hand to greet the Secretary.

BERGER TO ASK FOR SEAT.

Sentenced Socialist Arrives in Capital for Congress Opening.

WASHINGTON, May 14.—Victor Berger, Socialist Representative-elect from Wisconsin and under jail sentence for wartime violation of the Espionage act, arrived in Washington tonight preparatory to presenting his credentials and request to be seated as a member of the House when Congress convenes next Monday.

He declined to make any statement as to the course he would pursue to obtain title to his seat pending appeal to the United States Supreme Court or as to action he would take if the House refused to seat him.

To Review Officers Training Corps.

The New York University unity of the Reserve Officers' Training Corps will be reviewed this afternoon at 4 o'clock by Maj. Gen. John F. O'Ryan of the 27th Division, when military exercises will be held in Ohio Field, University Heights. Led by Cadet-Colonel J. E. Baker, 600 members of the unit which is in command of Captain Henry Cook Hathaway of the U. S. A. Infantry Regulars, will pass in review. The Dramatic Society will present three playlets in the auditorium this afternoon for the benefit of the R. O. T. C. band.

KINSMAN RESIGNS AS DELAWARE BISHOP

Cannot Give Whole-Hearted Service to Protestant Episcopal Church, He Says.

HIS WITHDRAWAL PREDICTED

Speaks of Increasing Lack of Sympathy with Denomination's Tendencies.

Special to The New York Times.

WILMINGTON, Del., May 14.—Saying he was "conscious of an increasing lack of sympathy with various dominant tendencies" of the Protestant Episcopal Church, Frederick J. Kinsman, Bishop of the Diocese of Delaware, notified the 133d annual convention today that he would retire from his position in October. It is believed by local Episcopalian clergymen that this move is a forerunner of his retirement from the church.

"I have never been able easily to adapt myself to the varied conditions of a Bishop's work," Bishop Kinsman said in his communication to the convention, adding that his family responsibilities were another reason for his retirement.

"But there are deeper reasons," he continued, "which make it unnecessary for me to weigh these lesser considerations. These have nothing to do with the diocese or the special conditions of my work, but have reference to my attitude toward principles and policies of the church at large."

Speaking of the "dominant tendencies" of the church, he declared he could not give it his whole-hearted service. Whether he would join any other church the Bishop did not say. He declared that before the taking of effect of his resignation he would make certain decisions, in which he could not act hastily.

"I cannot be hurried into premature determination of questions which, though not of particular importance to others, are nevertheless of vital importance to myself," was the way he put it.

Bishop Kinsman was elected to head the Delaware Diocese eleven years ago. Prior to that time he was a professor in the General Theological Seminary. He has been considered a "high church" man. He did not attend the convention, but was at his residence, Bryant Pond, Me., with his family.

LEWIS ASSAILS THE B. R. T.

Prosecutor Attacks Company in the 10-Cent Fare Dispute.

Asserting that the continuation of a 10-cent fare to Coney Island on the Culver and West End lines by the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company was "lawless," in view of the contract existing between the city and the railroad, District Attorney Lewis of Kings County expressed yesterday regret that there was no penal law under which he could prosecute the company.

"The attitude of this railroad toward the Brooklyn public," said Mr. Lewis, "is again indicated by its disregard of law and order and its failure not only to provide safe and proper vehicles for transportation, but its exaction of a higher fare than is permitted by the plain and unambiguous language of the contract.

"Having failed to secure legislation at Albany for increased fares, it now attempts to take them by lawless means. It is regrettable that this conduct should even have the approval of an officer of the court. Unfortunately, there is no penal law which will permit of prosecution."

According to some officials familiar with the dual contracts, District Attorney Lewis has been misinformed as to the exact situation regarding the Culver line. These officials said that under the dual contracts the fare is not to be reduced until the Culver line is completed. The Public Service Commissioner announced yesterday that the line would not be completed until December.

PRAISES WOMEN DRIVERS.

Mrs. Harriman Calls Work of Motor Corps in France 100 Per Cent. Good.

High tribute to American women drivers in France is paid by Mrs. J. Borden Harriman, who went to Paris last October as assistant Director of Transportation for the American Red Cross. Mrs. Harriman is spending a month in New York before returning to Paris to continue Red Cross activities there.

"There was an exceptional class of young women in the motor unit," Mrs. Harriman said yesterday. "They were devoted, conscientious, and efficient and surprised every one in the way they conserved their cars and uncomplainingly attended to their jobs. As a member of the commission for France put it, they were 100 per cent. good.

"A month before America declared war on Germany the first motor corps in the United States was organized in Washington. The call for 300 American women drivers to substitute for men in the A. E. F. last Fall came as no surprise. After 100 women were sent to France, the call for the remaining 200 was withdrawn, owing to the armistice."

GEO. J. GOULD'S ACTS DEFENDED IN COURT

J. B. Stanchfield, Fighting Removal, Offers Explanations of Many Transactions.

WESTERN UNION STOCK SALE

$600,000 Commission Proper, He Contends—Counsel for Sister Anna Assails Defendant.

The acts of George J. Gould as trustee under the will of his father, Jay Gould, for which his brother Frank and sister Anna, the Duchess de Talleyrand, ask his removal, were explained and defended yesterday before Supreme Court Justice Whitaker by John B. Stanchfield, attorney for the grown children of George Jay Gould, who are approving their father's acts. Mr. Stanchfield insisted that Mr. Gould had done nothing legally or morally wrong, and that the papers before the court do not disclose proof of acts sufficient to require his removal.

The hearing yesterday also included argument by Clarke M. Rosencrantz, counsel for the children of the Duchess de Talleyrand, who outlined the various financial transactions by George J. Gould, and insisted that upon his interpretation of these acts the court should remove Mr. Gould and compel him to refund to the estate the loss of more than $25,000,000 alleged to have been sustained because of the transactions objected to. Justice Whitaker adjourned the hearing until today, when the arguments will be concluded.

When Mr. Stanchfield opened in behalf of Mr. Gould he made it plain that he still insisted that the Court has no jurisdiction to hear the removal charges, and the court said that it would consider those objections.

Mr. Stanchfield said he would defend the three principal charges made against Mr. Gould, the first being his failure to set apart six separate trust funds, the second the charging of commissions on the sale of Western Union stock, and the third the destruction of personal books, letters, and papers. The other charges will be defended today by William Wallace, Jr., Mr. Gould's personal counsel.

Mr. Stanchfield contended that the whole scheme of the Jay Gould will calls for the administration of the estate as a unit. Extraordinary powers conferred on the trustees and in the event of difference of opinion George's wishes were to control. He pointed out that the will was drafted by John F. Dillon, for many years Jay Gould's personal attorney, who until his death in 1913, was legal adviser to the trustees. Every step they took and every investment was made under his advice, Mr. Stanchfield said.

After Mr. Dillon's death David H. Taylor was the attorney for the trustees. Mr. Stanchfield said that no matter what the courts may eventually hold as to whether six trust funds should have been created, "it must always be borne in mind that the trustees were acting in concert and under the most expert legal advice."

Concerning the charges by Judge Seabury that George Gould's "derelictions measured up to the dignity of crime," Mr. Stanchfield said that the estate is now between $73,000,000 and $75,000,000, whereas it was originally $83,000,000, and he added:

"The loss, when you consider the fact that the estate under the management of the trustees ran the gauntlet of two wars, numberless financial panics, and survived crises in railroading, speaks pretty well for the financial management of the trustees.

"The facts are bitterly controverted, the greatest hostility is developing and no quarrel is so bitter or so venomous as one between the representatives of a family. Frank Gould never in his life paid much attention to the affairs of the estate and such acts as he did perform, resulted in disaster and since 1912 he has lived a life of pleasure in Paris. The Duchess de Tallyrand is acting in concert with Frank to remove the man chosen by her father who founded the fortune, from the place he has held and where he has borne the brunt of duty for twenty-seven years at $10,000 a year, and has distributed regularly the money on which Frank and the Duchess lived."

Secrecy in Stock Deals.

Mr. Stanchfield said that more than half the estate was invested in railroad securities and if the estate desired to sell a block of the holdings in Wall Street, the world would say they were bad and the estate was trying to unload, so the stock would drop. If they went into the market to buy more stock to protect the integrity of their lines, and the Street knew of it, the stocks would go up in price.

Mr. Stanchfield stated that the greatest secrecy was accordingly necessary in the purchase or sale of the securities. The trustees were obliged to resort to circuitous methods, by which they used individual brokers to buy or sell. These transactions in vast volumes occurred as the years went on and might not be entered up in the books until they were merged into a consummation. For the same reason cash paid out for stocks was not entered on the books for months afterward.

"There is not the slightest question and we will produce expert evidence to prove it, that if this estate had disposed of the stock holdings it would not have saved 50 per cent. of the estate," Mr. Stanchfield said. He insisted that this explained many of the transactions included in the charges against George Gould.

Concerning the charges relating to the destruction of Mr. Gould's books and papers Mr. Stanchfield said:

"In 1912 George Gould decided to change his business. He felt that there had accumulated a mass of letters, papers, and books which had survived their usefulness and contained no active or live transaction. He had them taken to his residence, where at his leisure he could decide what was necessary, if anything, to save of the lot. He did that thing. He kept what he thought he needed and passed the others to one side to be destroyed. It is an idle, wicked, and cruel aspersion for any lawyer to charge that an occurrence four years before the action for the accounting was thought of was suppression of evidence. When the term is used it contemplates the destruction of books and papers of present moment in a court of justice. It is not conceivable that Mr. Gould can be pilloried in a court of justice under such circumstances as must be conceded to represent the facts in this case."

Defending Mr. Gould's acceptance of more than $600,000 commissions upon the sale of the Western Union stock, which he said Judge Seabury featured as his "masterpiece," Mr. Stanchfield said:

"I have not the slightest hesitation in saying that if an indictment were framed and on the face of the indictment were spread all the facts alleged in the affidavit of Frank Gould and in the reply of George Jay Gould, I would give a written guarantee to have such an indictment dismissed before Judge Seabury, if he were sitting in the Criminal Branch of the Supreme Court.

Chadbourne Paid Commission.

Mr. Stanchfield pointed out that through the efforts of Mr. Gould and his attorney, Thomas L. Chadbourne, the estate sold its Western Union stock for $85 a share, when the market price was $65. "We know the estate was subjected to no expense because Mr. Gould's representative got his commission from the buyer, and this attitude is perfectly proper and legal," said Mr. Stanchfield. "The broker made a contract by which he was to receive $3.50 a share on the sale of the stock, and received the money and deposited it in his bank account. Has the estate any claim or any interest in the moneys paid to the broker? Not the slightest in the world. The estate could not have enforced the payment of this money in a suit at law. It was Mr. Chadbourne's money and he could divide it as he pleased because he took nothing from the estate. The transaction made for the estate more than $4,000,000. So much for the acumen or the lack of it argued by the other side.

"The entire transaction was done in the face of formal agreements. There is no proof here which would justify the court in stating that any part of the transaction was actuated by corrupt, felonious, or criminal intent where these solemn agreements appear. The only way to spell out pilfering would be to have witnesses take the stand and give testimony which would warrant the court in finding that it had occurred."

Mr. Stanchfield said that Mr. Chadbourne received $801,682 as commission at $3.50 a share. As the result of a conversation between them, he paid Mr. Gould more than $600,000 of this sum.

"You mean he donated the money?" asked Justice Whitaker.

"Well, paid or donated it, as you will," said Mr. Stanchfield. "Whether there was any secret or subterranean understanding does not appear. There is no basis for the statements to that effect. There was no criminality unless there was a preconceived secret arrangement. If these facts measure up to grand larceny or embezzlement there must be from some source proof of understanding as to the division of the commission."

Justice Whitaker asked what Mr. Chadbourne said upon the transaction. Mr. Stanchfield replied that he had made no affidavit in the case, but added: "Mr. Chadbourne is here in the room and is prepared to say something if necessary."

In concluding his argument, Mr. Stanchfield stated that in the proceeding brought against Mr. Gould, witnesses should be heard in a common law action so that Mr. Gould could have his day in court and for this reason objected to the removal application being heard in the accounting proceeding. He also stated that Howard Gould is a trustee, but has not been made a party to the proceedings.

"Is it possible," asked Mr. Stanchfield, "that a court of justice can remove a fellow trustee without making all trustees parties to the proceeding involving his title as a co-trustee?"

Desired to be "Railroad King."

The argument of Clarke M. Rosencrantz, in outlining the objectionable financial transactions listed in the charges against George Gould, said that William Nelson Cromwell, guardian for the de Talleyrand children, had contemplated bringing the removal proceedings before Frank did. He read the section of the will providing that the executors were not to be held responsible for loss in securities and said it did not give them authority to invest in whatever they saw fit.

He said that Mr. Gould bought prohibited stocks because of his desire "to be a railroad king" and to own a great railroad stretching from coast to coast. He said that the estate paid $3,500,000 for bonds at 91 which were secured only by a like amount of St. Louis & Iron Mountain Railroad stock, and asked: "What business man in charge of any trust estate would think for a moment of investing in such an enterprise even under the authority of the will."

"He didn't use his own funds, for which no one would quarrel," Mr. Rosencrantz continued, "but used the estate funds to control the railroads and their subsidiaries." He referred to "machinations with the funds of the estate," and said that the estate held only 1½ per cent. of good bonds, 40 per cent. of speculative bonds, and 59½ per cent. of stock.

Mr. Rosencrantz declared that George Gould exhibited "effrontery" in maintaining that an investment of $6,600,000 in Missouri Pacific bonds was a good and wise investment, because they were exchanged for stock at par, and the road went into the hands of a receiver. He pointed out that the Wabash stock was appraised at 54 when Jay Gould died and sold as high as $125. He sold 52,000 shares at an average of $40, and the remainder down as low as $15, with an average of $22, making the loss on the transactions in this railroad stock from $12,000,000 to $15,000,000.

Referring to the estate transaction in International & Great Northern, Mr. Rosencrantz said that after the road had been in receivership three times Mr. Gould lent $3,300,000 to the road which was absolutely lost. He said that Mr. Gould's explanation of the investment was that it was to protect other advances made by the estate, but Mr. Rosencrantz asserted that a careful trustee would not have advanced three times the amount of an investment in order to protect it.

Mr. Rosencrantz argued, finally that the act of Mr. Gould in acquiring control of the Colorado Fuel and Iron Company, which resulted in a large loss to the estate, was additional ground for his removal. Referring to the payment by Mr. Chadbourne of more than $600,000 commission on the Western Union sale, Mr. Rosencrantz said that George Gould "blackjacked the commissions out of Mr. Chadbourne."

In concluding his argument Mr. Rosencrantz said:

"The amount George Gould owes the estate can never be accurately determined, due to the fact that he destroyed his books. He lived in this city all his life. He knows that when people desire to destroy books of account and papers for which they have no further use, there are ways to have that done, and a certificate will be given leaving no doubt as to what was destroyed. Mr. Gould did not do this. He took his records to his house and with no one present but himself and his son, he destroyed the only evidence possible to show in the event of an accounting what was done with the funds of the trust estate."

STRAUS SEES LEAGUE AIDED BY ALLIANCE

Says Our Agreement with France Only Means Greater Celerity of Action.

NO NATION COMMITTED YET

Further Progress Depends on the Approval of Washington, London, and the League.

By CHARLES A. SELDEN.

Copyright, 1919, by The New York Times Company.
Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, May 12.—There is a state of mind in America, as indicated by the fragmentary reports received here concerning the arrangement between America and England to protect France, which very much needs clarifying, in the opinion of Oscar S. Straus and other American leaders in Paris.

"There has been nothing," said Mr. Straus to me today, "in this matter but an exchange of notes between Wilson, Clemenceau, and Lloyd George preliminary to submitting a certain proposal to the American Congress and the British Parliament for their approval. This is a proposal that if France is again attacked by Germany, (without provocation,) America and England will go immediately to her assistance.

"It proposes nothing that the League of Nations itself would not do under the same circumstances, the only difference being, perhaps, in providing for greater celerity of action. Furthermore, the League of Nations, as well as Congress and Parliament, must approve the agreement before it is valid.

"There is a provision in the League covenant that all agreements among member States must be registered with the League before they are operative. This agreement with France, provided that it is approved by Congress and Parliament, bids fair to be the very first thing so registered.

No Nation Committed Yet.

"But, as I say, no nation is committed to anything yet in the matter, and its further progress depends on three approvals, those of Washington, London, and the League of Nations. It is to be admitted and understood that the action of Wilson and Lloyd George in this matter was in deference to the idiosyncrasy of the French people and in compliance with the urgency of the military men of France, who from experience naturally fear German aggression as a permanent menace. It was due much more to Foch than to Clemenceau that Wilson and Lloyd George undertook to submit this proposal to their Parliaments.

"They have done it in the same spirit that France yielded to having the Monroe Doctrine included in the League of Nations covenant. That was the French method, deferring to the idiosyncrasy of the American people. The Monroe Doctrine was sufficiently protected in the original covenant, but America insisted on having it recognized in specific terms and got such recognition. So the covenant of the League of Nations amply provides protection for France, but France demands something further, more specific, and Wilson and Lloyd George consented to grant it, provided their people approve.

"But at home there seem to be all sorts of misconceptions. The arrangement is referred to as both a separate treaty and part of a general treaty; also as a secret treaty and as something that nullifies the League of Nations at the outset. It is not any of those things. Its rejection or acceptance by Washington, London and the League of Nations has no bearing whatever on the Treaty of Peace now being considered by the German delegates at Versailles. Each is absolutely independent of the other.

Calls It a Help to the League.

"It is obviously not a secret alliance or arrangement, whatever else it may or may not be, and, partly because of the very openness of it, it becomes an indorsement of the whole spirit and policy of the League of Nations. It helps the League because it gives at the very outset a notable illustration of the new régime, in which there must be no secrecy. It helps the League also because it undertakes only what the League is bound to undertake also.

"Furthermore, there is nothing in this proposed arrangement to protect France which would prevent the League of Nations itself from disciplining France should that nation violate the rules of the League. To take a highly improbable, but hypothetically possible, case for illustration: Suppose that in the future, because of friction growing out of the administration of the Sarre Valley, or some other cause, French and German relations become strained, and France herself should become the aggressor in violation of the rules of the League. In such a case there would be nothing whatever in the special arrangement to protect France that would render her immune against the corrective or punitive power of the League of Nations.

"We also hear much comment on the fact that Italy is not included in this special arrangement with France. I think that eventually she may be in it.

"There are two probable reasons why Italy was not in at the outset. The matter was developed at a time when Italy was temporarily pulling away from the Peace Conference because of the Fiume question. There almost seemed to be danger at the moment that the League of Nations was about to lose one of its principal parts. Second, because of the different forms of Government it was necessary for Wilson and Lloyd George to make their decision immediately to prepare for the submission of the case to their Parliaments. In the case of Italy it would not be necessary to do it in just the same way."

MAY 11.—The French press continues to talk of the defensive agreement of the United States, England, and France as though it were an accomplished fact in the form of a treaty already signed; but there is regret that Italy is not included.

"It was only natural," says a writer in the Matin this morning, "that Italy should be asked to join in the agreement destined to oppose future German aggression. In the first place, the incorporation of the Italian army, which is at our side and would not have to cross the sea, would be necessary in such a case. Secondly, German aggression may be against Italy herself, and the Allies of the great war should find themselves automatically together in case of a new peril. It is certain that Orlando has been present at all the conversations in which this alliance has been debated by Wilson, Clemenceau and Lloyd George. The Italians declare that Orlando only waited to be asked to give his support. The French say that if Orlando had expressed any desire to participate in the alliance he would have had the opportunity.

"However that may be, the result is all the more regrettable because of the triviality of the causes of the misunderstandings. It is deplorable that such a thing could happen among the four chiefs of government, and they can try to justify it only with reproaching one another for not saying at the opportune moment the words they expected one another to say."

ALLIES TO GUARD SCHLESWIG.

Foreign Ministers Plan to Station a Joint Naval Force at Flensburg.

PARIS, May 14, (Associated Press.)—The Council of Foreign Ministers is considering a plan prepared by the allied military and naval authorities to maintain order in Schleswig after the evacuation of that territory by the Germans.

The plan contemplated is to use an allied naval force stationed at Flensburg, in which the United States, Great Britain, and France will join. Several battalions of infantry will also be employed for the policing of the territory.

The selection of an allied commander for this force is under consideration.

TO AVERT AUSTRIAN CHAOS.

American Official Suggests Commercial Court for New Republics.

VIENNA, May 13, (Associated Press.)—The Peace Conference, during the stay of the Austrian delegation at St. Germain, should provide for a commercial high court to have charge of commercial affairs in the republics formed from the old empire, and the court should have authority for a long period of years, Captain Thomas Gregory of California, the representative here of the Inter-Allied Food Commission, said in a statement today.

"Otherwise," he added, "the political differences of the various nationalities will cause a continuance of the present commercial chaos, with the result that the superior German trade organization will come in and eventually will dominate the country politically, as it did formerly. Also, there are likely to be new wars under present conditions.

"Such a high court should have final authority in regulating trade, and it is also important that there should be a controller in charge of the railroads and waterways."

GERMAN PEACE THREAT CITED.

Called Bucharest Terms Mild Compared to Those Intended for Allies.

BERNE, May 13.—Rumania considers the peace terms given to Germany severe, but just, and less severe than Germany imposed on Rumania a year ago, the Rumanian Press Bureau here announces. It is recalled that the German plenipotentiaries made this remarks to theRumanians.

"The conditions imposed on you are mild compared to those we intend to impose on the Allies."

FEARS PEOPLE WILL RISE.

Hohenlohe Prince Calls Treaty "Tragedy of Versailles."

ZURICH, May 13.—The German Prince Alexander Hohenlohe-Schillingsfuerst, in an article in the Neue Zeitung of Zurich, attacks President Wilson in regard to the peace treaty, which he calls the "tragedy of Versailles."

"Whether the Germans sign or not," he writes, "I fear another tragedy is coming when not only chiefs of Governments, but entire peoples, will rise to terminate the last scenes of the world tragedy."

Hopes Allies Won't Have to Choose Between Italy and Us.

ROME, May 13.—Gabriele d'Annunzio and Professor Luigi Luzzatti had a long interview today with King Victor Emmanuel. Afterward Professor Luzzatti gave to the American newspaper men a statement setting forth Italy's position regarding Dalmatia. In this statement he said:

"I hope that free America will not take the responsibility of appearing like an oppressor to the eyes of millions of Italians desiring to reunite with their mother country."

Professor Luzzatti likewise expressed the hope that President Wilson "would not put France and England to the alternative of breaking their agreements (with Italy) or breaking with America."

SINN FEINERS FINED.

$250 Each From Mellowes, McCartan, and McDermott.

"General" Liam Mellowes, Dr. Patrick J. McCartan, and James M. McDermott, the Sinn Feiners, were fined $250 each by Federal Judge Learned Hand yesterday for swearing falsely in an effort to obtain passports.

The defendant had withdrawn tentative pleas of not guilty, and had pleaded guilty with the implied understanding the prison sentences would not be imposed.

The men are said to have participated in the Easter uprising in Dublin in 1916, when they fell under the English ban. Their counsel said there was no way in which they could hope to get back to Ireland except by subterfuge. He pleaded that they did nothing to injure this country. It was also argued that the act was a violation of a statute enacted more than 100 years ago to save American sailors from being impressed into the English Navy.

The court declined to listen to any suggestion that the defendants acted as German spies or were laboring for the German cause. The only offense considered was that of attempting to evade the passport regulations.

Mellowes and McCartan are members of the Irish Parliament, McCartan having been twice elected.

Fathers

A LONG time ago, before the war, a garden was planted, eastward in Eden.

Two people lived in it, a man and a woman.

And the woman, because she hadn't enough to do, and was naturally curious and eager, listened to the restless Something within her. And obeyed it. She reached up and plucked a little red apple and defiantly bit it.

And then they had to move.

It was hard on both of them, that moving, because it was a frightful come-down, and one has to be very big and quite experienced to take a come-down cheerfully.

But it was hardest for the man. He not only had to give up lying on a couch of shell-pink orchids, munching at a pomegranate by way of exercise, and set to tilling the soil and earning their bread by the unaccustomed sweat of his brow, but, worse than anything, he lacked the compensation the woman had. He had no memory of having been daring and dramatic, of having stood in the center of the limelight, the star of the performance.

So he bent his head and hoed dismally but steadily.

Of course the woman had to bear the children—a thing she hadn't in the least counted on doing. But that, too, had its compensation. She was again in the center of the limelight, dramatic, courageous, the star of the performance.

And that was the beginning.

Ever so many years later, one night, a nurse in a maternity hospital popped into my room, and with a toss of her little white-capped head said:

"Well, there's another husband sitting on the stairs looking stern!"

And suddenly I saw millions of husbands all down the ages sitting on stairs looking stern—agonized, inarticulate, helpless, waiting husbands. Nurses toss their heads at them, doctors push them on to the stairs, janitors don't even trouble to flick the corner of an eye at them. Helpless, agonized, inarticulate husbands waiting on the stairs.

And then it is all over. Here is mother, looking like a sunrise, with a halo about her—and well-deserved it is, too—with her babe on her arm, dramatic, daring, the center of the limelight, the star of the performance.

Father? Oh, he's background; just one of the "props."

A shaken, deeply stirred "prop," solemnly warning himself that he's got to make life all right, by George, for those two on the bed. But nobody notices this emotion, because he's just the father. And of course he'd die before he would say it out loud.

But from that moment on he never forgets that he is all there is between that baby and want, that he is all there is, as a general rule, between all the babies and a meager, mediocre life for them, or even actual privation. But then that's all right; that's what fathers are for!

And then came the war.

Why, I wonder, has nobody ever written a song or a poem, or even a limerick, about father sending his only son or any of his sons off to be a target for Hunnish shot—the "flesh of his flesh, bone of his bone," the wonderful, inexplicable being around whom he weaves all those dreams he himself has had to relinquish, for whom he strives patiently, unremittingly, to build up a business, a home, a heritage, in whom he finds his very reason for having lived, upon whom he rests his hope of eternity in this world, his name, his blood, his tradition!

You think fathers don't care for their children as mothers do? Have you ever seen a father when he thought he was alone pick up his baby and hold it in his arms and look at it?

If you have, you will forever after walk a little more softly in the presence of fathers, remembering the tenderness, the wistfulness, the yearning, the hopes that stream from his whole face, the resolution that this little, pink, downy thing shall have his chance, shall not have the long, hard pull his daddy had, the petty things, the limitations.

And that's the baby a man lets go to war.

Mother and the Flag are two subjects that never fail of response; they are fundamentals; they are the very center of the human heart. As they should be.

But why isn't father a fundamental, too? Why doesn't he edge in pretty close to the charmed circle? Could it be possible that there is something else wrong with civilization besides war? Could it be that this enlightened world takes father a little too much for granted?

I'm so awfully fond of fathers myself. I know quite a lot of them and I own one. Never yet have I seen his fine old head lowered. Yet he lost his only son. And the war practically ended his business. And he is seventy years old. When I want courage and a "second wind," I think of my father. War? Why, my father has always been in khaki !

Hasn't yours? Marching right along through fatigue and danger, the awful danger of failing, of not making good for his family; over the top at the worst kind of enemies—fear, hunger, discouragement, rivalry, whole hosts of mental Huns. And father's war isn't a matter of four years, though that is quite long enough; it's all of his father life.

And that's just a father.

And then there's the war father.

Up at dawn to work in his Liberty garden, hoeing away alone because the boy, the very center of his life, is "over there," his graying hair blowing in the wind, his strong, capable, man hands sowing and weeding faithfully, his lips perhaps softly whistling "Over There," and his heart, his heart saying with every beat:

"It ought to be me. I ought to have gone, not Bill ! Why, Bill is just a boy.

"It was only a little while ago that I walked almost all night with him because he had the colic. I just bought him his first pants the other day.

"Bill oughtn't to be standing up against those German savages; not little Bill !"

And then he stops hoeing a moment and sees Bill, standing straight and tall in his uniform, as fine a boy as a man could wish; he feels again the grip of his hand.

How he had longed to put his arms around Bill and hold him tight the way his mother did !

And he's gone, that life of his life. He's in a trench with vermin and mud, and shell is falling around him—his baby, that he had carried in his arms because he had the colic and didn't know how to bear pain.

The thud of the morning paper hurled to the front steps by the paper-boy startles him. He drops his hoe.

Fear walks with him to the steps. That long casualty list must be read, because, if anything has happened to Bill, mother and the girls mustn't see it. They mustn't learn it that way, printed in a newspaper.

His hands are steady as they open the paper, hands that through hundreds of years have learned to be steady because so much depended on them—father hands.

But there's a fear in his heart as keen and sharp as any mother's.

No, it's all right; Bill's name isn't there.

But other men's Bills are there, and he shakes his head sadly; other men's dreams have ended.

"It ought to be the old ones," he mutters, "like me. Not boys, not young things. Yes, yes; I'm coming!" He answers the call to breakfast a bit impatiently.

A touch of irritability is the spontaneous combustion of father's emotions, because fathers aren't supposed to show that they are sad or afraid.

After breakfast Sue or Molly comes wheedling up for just one more check for the Red Cross Drive. Their school is trying to come up to a certain mark and they haven't yet reached it.

"And it's for the Red Cross, daddy!"

He pulls out his check-book. His eye refuses to back down before the small balance there.

He's had to face a small balance a great many times in his life. So much has gone into the Red Cross, Liberty Bonds, Y. M. C. A., Salvation Army, because, you see, after all, whether it's Molly or Sue or mother—though the good God knows no real mother ever yet was paid all she earns—no matter who it is who gives to the war, it all comes from father.

But his eye never wavers; he'll pull them through somehow. Perhaps this very check will buy a bandage for Bill, though God forbid he should need one, but for some man's Bill.

So long as he has a dollar to give he'll give it to fight the savage that's shooting at Bill and civilization.

So Molly gets her check.

Then he goes down to business, the business that no longer thrives, because war has struck at it. Or perhaps the Government has taken it over and it is running without profit to him.

He gives his brain and his energy to it with every ounce in him; he's glad to; it's his way of fighting. He doesn't say much about it, any more than he says much about his feeling for Bill.

He is still in the background, like the man in the garden; neither dramatic nor daring; just a father.

And nobody writes poems about him, nor a song, nor even a limerick.

Then at night when he gets home he can't slip out of his collar—because well-brought-up fathers don't do that—and settle his nerves with knitting. Instead he brushes himself up and goes off to the courthouse to help with the Red Cross Drive.

Perhaps he makes a speech or perhaps he's just one of those men who slip around quietly with small bits of paper for other men to sign. At any rate, he gives all he has of time and money and brains—for Bill and civilization.

That's the every-day war father.

And nobody has ever written even the smallest ditty about him.

When the crisis comes—Bill is wounded or perhaps he is killed—it is father who must take it standing, who must break it to mother, who must cry only in his heart, because man and tears are not customary; father who must see to the sad disposing of the body, caring for the necessities there, as he has for all other necessities in the family.

Why?

I'm not talking about men. I'm talking about fathers.

And I'm not belittling mothers; they're the most wonderful, incredible, God-made things in all this world. But fathers are brave and glorious and pathetic, and a poem or two wouldn't hurt them.

And now peace has come. And the Bills are safe.

"They're coming home!" And the Great Fear has gone out of the world.

Father, who through Liberty-Bond speeches came nearer to being dramatic than ever before, sinks back once more into being a "prop" on the family stage.

Bill is coming home, with a limp, perhaps, or a scar. He is a hero. Mother is his mother. Father is just the dad.

He didn't fight and he isn't the mother of a boy who was a soldier, who actually was in the fighting for democracy and right; he isn't anything at all but the man who followed his wife out of the garden after her disastrous, interesting impulse, to earn their bread by the sweat of his brow.

One of that kind of people who wait on stairs looking stern.

Unsung, ununiformed.

One is passing my window now, marching, marching in his invisible khaki. He is whistling softly, a little out of tune. It is, "Keep the Home Fires Burning."

Not a poem, not a song, not even a limerick.

Take a look at your father. Will you?

RHINE ARMY READY TO FIGHT OR LEAVE

All Americans Except Corps and Three Divisions to Start in a Few Weeks

IF GERMANS SIGN TREATY

Foch, Escorted Down River by French Gunboats, Is Expected at Coblenz Today.

COBLENZ, May 13, (Associated Press.)—If the Germans sign the peace terms, all the American troops except the Third Corps and three divisions and a few headquarters units will be out of the occupied district of Germany by June 1, or soon after that date, according to reports in circulation in Coblenz.

It is understood that the First, Second, and Third Regular Divisions will be those to remain for the duties in connection with turning over the area to French control. If the Germans accept the peace conditions, it is understood, preparations will begin immediately for the remaining three divisions to withdraw to France preparatory to embarking for home.

The length of time required to turn affairs over to the French has not been determined, but it is estimated that it may take perhaps a month longer. If the Germans do not accept, the plans for the withdrawal of the Americans, of course, will be changed materially.

General Pershing, when asked by the correspondent on Monday what would be the part of the American Army in the event the Germans did not sign the treaty, said it might be depended upon that America would do her part whatever that might be.

In connection with the report that all the Americans except the Third Corps and three divisions will be out of Germany by June 1 provided the Germans accept the peace conditions, it is understood that the headquarters of the Third Army will remain in Coblenz, with Lieut. Gen. Hunter Liggett in command. The task of paying bills and checking up property preparatory to turning the area over to the French will require a great mass of detail work, but plans for the transfer of the Americans from German soil have advanced to such an extent in the last few days that latest estimates are that possibly by August the duties of the great mass of the Americans in connection with occupation will be virtually at an end and the last doughboy will have said good-bye to the Rhine.

The Fourth, Fifth, Sixth, and Seventh Regular Army Divisions will be turned over to the Service of Supply. Various other units in the area of occupation also will be ordered to France.

The Ninetieth Division, consisting principally of National Army men from Texas and Oklahoma, has been turned over to the Service of Supply, and is scheduled to start moving for Brest within a week.

Plans have been prepared so that when the Germans sign the treaty the moving of troops will begin immediately. It is hoped to move eight trains loaded with troops daily. The equipment of the soldiers will be shipped out later. In the area from which divisions are being withdrawn a certain number of troops from various American detachments will be assigned to patrol duty pending the arrival of the French. This is considered necessary in the military routine of guarding property and turning over supplies, ammunition, and other articles of war to the army of relief.

$60,000,000 OVER QUOTA.

Many Belated Subscriptions Increase the Loan Total Here.

Reports of belated subscriptions coming in yesterday at the Liberty Loan headquarters at 120 Broadway indicated that the total over-subscription for the Victory Loan for the Second Federal District, including New York State and city, the twelve counties of northern New Jersey, and Fairfield, Conn., would exceed over $60,000,000. The Rainbow Division of Victory Loan canvassers announced that the drive among over 120,000 business and professional concerns in the city had netted more than 85 per cent. of the organization's quota, which was set by the Committee at half the quota for the entire district.

Reports from Brooklyn yesterday showed that the borough's quota of a trifle less than $60,000,000 had been exceeded by more than half, the present total being $92,646,050. The Brooklyn Committee said that it hoped to see this raised to $100,000,000 before the last subscription was recorded.

The Coal Trades Industry of the Rainbow Division reported yesterday that it had raised $9,496,450 in the Victory Loan. In previous campaigns the same committee obtained subscriptions aggregating $65,000,000. Physicians, nurses, and other employes of Bellevue and Allied Hospitals, it was announced yesterday, had raised a total of $51,700 for the loan. The Jewish Welfare Board at their Paris headquarters took in subscriptions totaling $13,200 to the Victory Loan, according to a cable dispatch received yesterday from Colonel Harry Cutler, Chairman.

In the Bronx last night a dinner was given by the business men of the borough to Irving Crance and his assistants of the Borough Liberty Loan Committee in honor of the work the committee did in the campaign, raising $14,000,000, more than four times the quota assigned to the Bronx. A feature of the dinner was the presence of an elephant from one of the theatres, which came into the dining room at the Criterion Restaurant, where the diners were gathered. The elephant, who answered to the name of Tom, caused some trouble when he espied the side table spread with dishes of salad for the dinner. Before his keeper could check him, most of the salad had disappeared.

WILL ATTACK DRY LAW.

Opposers of Prohibition Arrange for a Mass Meeting.

The Association Opposed to National Prohibition announced yesterday that its country-wide speaking campaign against the prohibition amendment would get under way at a mass meeting to be held on May 24 in Madison Square Garden. The meeting will be held jointly by the Association and the Central Federated Union and delegates will attend from New Jersey, Long Island and Westchester County, as well as this city.

The speakers will include Charles A. Windle of Chicago, Father John L. Belford of Brooklyn, and Congressman Reuben L. Haskell. It had been planned, it was said yesterday, to have the meeting include a debate between Mr. Windle and William Jennings Bryan, the latter representing the Anti-Saloon League. James Arthur Seavey, Director of the Association, said that no reply had been received from the Anti-Saloon League to the Association's challenge for an open discussion of the prohibition question. A statement issued yesterday by the Association said:

"Samuel J. Fickel, Managing Editor of the American Issue, the official organ of the Anti-Saloon League, is quoted as saying that the League would decline the challenge because the issue is not debatable, and all that is left to be done is to enforce prohibition. Apparently the Anti-Saloon League thinks there is a great deal about the question to be discussed, because it will open a nation-wide discussion of the question in this city about May 19. The League will send out about half a dozen or more of its leading speakers, including W. J. Bryan, who is booked to speak in Chicago, Indianapolis, Louisville, Nashville, Atlanta, Savannah, Jacksonville, Richmond and Washington."

TO TRAIN STUDENT OFFICERS

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 14.—The War Department announced today that the six Reserve Officers' Training Corps camps to be opened on June 21 are not for officers now commissioned in the Army Reserve Corps, but for students who are members of the various educational institutions having Reserve Officers' Training Corps units.

These camps are intended to train future reserve officers, and not for officers who hold commissions now. A six weeks' course for these men will be held at Camps Devens, Lee, Zachary Taylor, Custer, and Funston, and the Presidio of San Francisco.

Communications received by the War Department indicate that there has been widespread misunderstanding upon this subject, but the present outlook is as stated. Reserve officers will not be called for training this year.

Owing to the absence of legislation effecting a reorganization of the army, nothing more definite concerning the annual training for those officers now holding reserve commissions can be announced at present, it was said.

GILLETT BREAKS A GAVEL.

WASHINGTON, May 14.—Speaker-elect Gillett today rehearsed the calling of the House into session for the benefit of motion picture company, and so vigorously did he rap for order in the empty Chamber of the House that he broke the handle of an ivory gavel, which had been given to him by a friend.

The gavel was one that was used by the presiding officer at a firemen's convention in 1841 at Baltimore.

The Straight Stroke is the thing

When the typist taps a key on the "Royal", the bit of live energy set loose is communicated in a direct straight line to the typebar—as it should be.

No angles, curves, corners exist in the connections between key lever and typebar pivot to eat up energy. The direct pull gives a non-vibrating, true-swinging typebar that must travel directly.

This construction, exclusive to the "Royal" alone of all visible typewriters, helps to achieve an arrow-straight alignment more truly permanent, reliable, uniform.

Phone for a "Royal" demonstration—compare the work—note the clear-cut beauty of the type impressions that can come only from perfect press work. And when you remember that the durability of the "Royal" ends the "trading-out" evil, you will realize why it is the logical choice of big business.

Strained Japanese-Chinese Relations.

The official facts bearing upon the strained relations between Japan and China; official documents; China's part in the European War; Japanese Racial Discrimination, form one feature of the May CURRENT HISTORY MAGAZINE, 40 big features. Published by The New York Times Company, on news stands 25c.—Advt.

What will happen in Europe if we have a farm labor shortage this summer?

Herbert Hoover said: "If we value our own safety and the social organization of the world, if we value the preservation of civilization itself, we must bestir ourselves in the solution of this problem" of feeding Europe.

In the foreground of Mr. Hoover's plan to block anarchy with food stands the American farmer, making still greater efforts to increase his production.

Shall a farm labor shortage this summer be allowed to cripple him in the attempt?

How many will return?

Two and a half million men were taken from the farms by the war. How many will return? Of 19,000 who left New York farms, 3,000 came back last year.

In the city there is a growing industrial surplus. New York City employers have had to make an agreement to employ only New York men, in order to protect their jobs against the throngs of westerners who have failed to go back home.

Will this city surplus be there when the harvest comes? Will it spread to the farms if it is?

Many well-informed Government officials and men in private life predict that in spite of this present city surplus there will be a dearth of farm labor, basing their belief on a great development of industrial enterprises and a shortage from immigration.

The biggest labor problem in America

The men who run our farm food factories are the biggest employers of labor in America. One state, Nebraska, reports she will need 136,000 men to help harvest the wheat crop this year.

How to meet the sharply fluctuating needs of the farm with a mobile supply of skilled labor is a problem upon the solution of which depends not only the feeding of Europe but the price of food at home, the labor supply of cities, and the whole question of industrial unrest vs. commercial prosperity in America.

The farmer business man has gotten into the habit of believing that any problem can be solved by scientific study and co-operative action. He is demanding the answer to this one, and FARM AND FIRESIDE has responded by taking the lead in a movement to get it.

In the May issue William Harper Dean shows where the whole subject stands and what the first step must be to get somewhere on it.

It is a typical example of the vigorous editorial policy on the business side of farming that has made FARM AND FIRESIDE a positive force in more than 600,000 better farm homes.

SAYS FINNS STOPPED BOLSHEVISM SPREAD

Saved Western World from Being Inoculated with Poison Virus, Asserts Envoy.

A NEW ENTENTE CORDIALE

Recognition of Country's Independence a Great Stimulus—Look to America for Material.

Poorly armed and equipped soldiers of Finland, like "the embattled farmers of Lexington," according to Armas Saastamoinen, new Finnish Minister to the United States, "saved the Western world from being inoculated with the poison virus of Bolshevism."

Discussing conditions in Russia and his own country, the Finnish envoy, who arrived here on Monday, declared that Lenin and Trotzky, the Russian Bolshevist leaders, had hoped to establish a strong military base in Finland and then to spread their doctrines through Sweden and Norway. The defeat of their forces in three important battles—Tampere, Lahti, and Viborg—ended their aspirations and brought stability and peace to the Helsingfors Government under the present regent, General Gustaf Mannerheim, said Minister Saastamoinen.

As a result of the reverses to the Bolsheviki, Mr. Sanstamoinen said, and their elimination from Finland, "a new entente cordiale has developed between Norway, Sweden, Denmark, and Finland which must weigh heavily in the scale toward a just and lasting peace."

Working for Social Revolution.

Already the four nations, he said, were engaged in standardizing maritime and labor laws for the mutual benefit of each country. The Minister called attention to the fact that the design of their national flags is similar, a cross in a differing colored field. He said that notwithstanding the defeat of Bolshevism in Finland the Russian radicals were "flooding the world with base and worthless currency and meeting with considerable success in its distribution in France and England." They are working night and day in large centres all over the world, he said, in the expectation of bringing about an international social revolution.

"These are hard facts," he continued. "The Bolsheviki have strong centres in Germany and are working energetically and ingeniously to poison the minds of the working classes in all countries. One of the greatest antidotes to all this, I believe, is home-owning. It was a not inconsiderable element in the heroic, and almost unbelievable, victory of the Finns over the Bolshevist Red Guard. More than 50 per cent. of the people of Finland own their own homes. The Finns, it should be remembered, also cleared Esthonia of the Bolsheviki, organized her army, and after liberating 1,500,000 of her population, put the nation upon its feet financially."

Recognition a Business Stimulus.

Recognition of the independence of Finland by the United States and Great Britain, Mr. Saastamoinen added, would be a great stimulus to business.

"We are in America for every kind of raw materials and manufactures," he continued, "notably iron and steel, oil, and electrical machinery. We prefer to deal directly with Americans and not through intermediaries. In return there are wonderful possibilities in Finland for American buyers. Our furniture industry is booming, and we have an abundance of timber, particularly pine and birch.

"Now that Germany and Russia are no longer able to supply Finland they must look to the United States, where there are superior business methods." As an instance of this the Minister said that before the war American wheat flour was sold in Finland at $2 per 200 pound sack cheaper than the corresponding amount of Russian flour, made from wheat raised practically at Finland's door.

Dinner to Alexander and O'Ryan.

Major Gen. Robert Alexander and Major Gen. John F. O'Ryan, former commanding officers of the 77th and 27th Divisions, respectively, will be the guests of honor tonight at a dinner given by ex-Dock Commissioner R. A. C. Smith in the Union League Club. The dinner will be preceded by a reception to the Generals and members of their staffs. Other invited guests include Rear Admiral James H. Glennon, Charles Evans Hughes, George T. Wilson, Samuel W. Fairchild, William C. Breed, Lieut. Commander T. B. Hasler, and Walter Frew.

$25 FOR 'GOUGING' SOLDIER.

Barber Fined for Charging $4.60 for a Haircut and Shave.

It cost Arthur Stading, a barber employed in a shop at 138 West Thirty-fourth Street, $25 yesterday for the various operations he performed on the unsuspecting head of Cecil Bell, a former member of the Third Anti-Aircraft Machine Gun Battalion, who has just returned from overseas.

Bell entered the barber shop last Monday morning for a hair cut, shave "and trimmings." When the barber got through he got a check for $4.60. Bell paid it without a murmur, being unfamiliar with the ways of metropolitan barbers, but his comrades told him that he had been overcharged, so he obtained a summons and Stading was arraigned in Jefferson Market Court before Magistrate Corrigan yesterday morning.

Stading protested that he was only carrying out the instructions of the proprietor, and showed an itemized bill, which included $2 for a "peroxide steaming" and $1 for "mange treatment."

"Have you got the mange?" inquired Magistrate Corrigan of Bell.

"No," replied the soldier. "I didn't ask for the treatment. I didn't know what they were putting on my head."

"This is an outrage," said the court. "That mange cure can be bought for 20 cents a gallon. We have frequent complaints of overcharging from the barber shops and it appears that they have one price for civilians and another for soldiers. If I had the proprietor here I would fine him $100. As it is, I will fine you only $25. That shave and hair cut and a lot of superfluous treatment will cost you just $20.40."

Thereupon the magistrate complimented Bell on his initiative in having the barber brought to court.

A tree will be planted in Central Park at Lenox Avenue and 110th Street on Sunday morning, May 18, at 11 o'clock, by members of the Rubel family of 168 Lenox Avenue in memory of Lieutenant Solomon Rubel, who was killed at Château-Thiery on July 26. Lieutenant Rubel was in Company G of the 168th Infantry Regiment, and letters to his mother, Mrs. Regina Rubel, from his commanding officers announced that he was about to be made a Captain.

GARVAN ENJOINED BY LANDIS

100 Per Cent. Brewery Dividend to Wait on Oberstadt Citizenship Plea.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, May 14.—The Schoenhofen Brewing Company was restrained from declaring a 100 per cent. dividend by order of Federal Judge Landis today. The injunction was issued on application of Count Bopp von Oberstadt, son-in-law of Peter Schoenhofen, and was directed against Francis P. Garvan of New York, the Alien Property Custodian, and the brewery director appointed by him.

Fred A. Brown, attorney for the Count, stated that the proposed dividend would decrease the value of property which his client was now engaged in litigation to recover from the Alien Property Custodian, on the Count's contention that he is an American citizen.

Von Oberstadt's plea was contested by District Attorney Clyne and Fred Blackington, Special United States Attorney, but the court issued a temporary order restraining the issuing of the dividend until the case could be heard. The property in question is about $1,000,000, and is one-fifth of the total value of the brewery.

Natural Milk Clean

The barns are scrubbed

SINCE we control absolutely the production, transportation and delivery of Walker-Gordon Milk, we can and do take extreme measures to keep it exceptionally clean and pure. The barns are actually scrubbed before the milkers begin. The floors are kept damp to lay any dust that may be in the air.

With the barns clean, cows clean and milkers' hands clean, Walker-Gordon Milk cannot be otherwise than as clean and pure as when it came from the cow.

It is delivered to you ice-cold under a double seal, with its original, natural, fresh-milk flavor absolutely unchanged. Even if you do not like the taste of milk, we urge you to try Walker-Gordon Milk. It is quite different.

Kolynos Enters all the Little Mouth Caves

THE beneficent action of Kolynos extends to places in the mouth which your tooth-brush cannot possibly reach.

By the construction of your mouth—the normal or the abnormal arrangement of the teeth—there are crevices and cul-de-sacs that furnish lodgment for particles of food which, if not removed, lead to the collection of germs, due primarily to fermentation. No tooth-brush will reach them all.

Even a dentist must have instruments specially made to reach these spots.

Kolynos Dental Cream, transformed by brushing into a creamy fluid, goes into all these little caves, searching out their contents. It dissolves the oily and greasy food particles and neutralizes others, which cause fermentation and washes away objectionable bacteria. Then it finishes its work by keeping your tooth-brush clean and odorless and sanitary. Procure Kolynos from your druggist.

International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union Replies to the public statement made by

MR. SAUL SINGER

President of the

New York, May 14, 1919.

MR. SAUL SINGER, President,
Cloak, Suit and Skirt Manufacturers' Protective Ass'n,
220 Fifth Avenue,
New York City.

Dear Sir:

This morning's newspapers print a statement by you to the effect that our demands are unreasonable and that all the efforts of your conference committee to reach a peaceful agreement with the Union were without avail. You also say that "whenever the Union is ready to meet the Association in an earnest effort to adjust the present controversy, the Association stands willing to resume the conference in the hope of finding a solution of the existing difficulties."

We take it that the first part of your statement was made for the purpose of placing your Association in a favorable light before the public. We believe, however, that the public is sufficiently informed in such matters to understand that as President of the Manufacturers' Association you are expected to say that the workers are unreasonable, and your statement will, therefore, fail to make the impression you desired it to produce.

As to the second part of your statement, we wish to say as follows: The Union stands ready to resume conferences with your Association. We earnestly hope that after a closer analysis you will find that our demands are reasonable, just and fair, and that a satisfactory adjustment can be reached.

We would kindly request you to designate in your reply the place and time for a conference.

Very truly yours,

BENJAMIN SCHLESINGER

N. Y. DIOCESE VOTES FOR WELFARE DRIVE

Approves Proposed $20,000,000 Campaign After Heated Debate by Pastors.

MISSION BOARD UNDER FIRE

Church Must Provide Substitute for Saloon, Says Dr. Freeman, Supporting Movement.

After a long and spirited debate the convention of the New York Diocese, in 136th annual session, in the Synod Hall of the Cathedral of St. John the Divine, yesterday afternoon adopted the proposal of the Board of Missions for a nation-wide campaign to raise $20,000,000 for welfare work. Earlier in the day the convention had referred the matter to the General Convention of the Church. The decision to reconsider came after the Rev. Dr. James E. Freeman, a member of the Board of Missions, had outlined the plans and the aims of the board.

Dr. Freeman said the campaign had been planned for the Fall as part of the work intrusted to the Board of Missions by the General Convention. He argued the necessity of extending the work of the Church, and urged taking advantage of the impulses of the present moment for launching the campaign. In the course of his remarks he referred to the passing of the saloon, saying:

"Some adequate, satisfactory, well-conceived substitute must be provided. It is part of the Church's business to see that the wage earners who have enjoyed the saloon as a place of recreation receive something that will fill its place. The social service work of the Church must be advanced. The Church must be interested in economic conditions. It must set up and finance well-administered agencies to deal with problems that are constantly arising.

The Rev. Dr. A. G. Cummins led the fight against the indorsement. "If this campaign is to bear the earmarks of the autocracy of the Board of Missions, it will be a failure before it starts," he said. "It is a plan being foisted upon the Church by the board, and the question to decide is whether we are going to let the board rule us, or whether we are going to rule ourselves. The General Convention should decide whether this work is to be done and should do it. Suggestions from the Board of Missions are welcome, but it is up to the General Convention to take the initiative.

Indorse "Every-Member Campaign."

Several delegates sprang to their feet to reply. Dr. E. M. Stires said:

"It is plainly within the scope of the duty of the Board of Missions to plan such work as this. There is no lack of confidence in the board, which is the machinery authorized by the General Convention, and its incumbents were chosen by the General Convention. It is a sign of life and vitality in the Board of Missions when some one begins to be frightened, for it is very true that never yet was anything worth while attempted that some one did not get frightened about it."

A resolution also was adopted indorsing the diocesan "Every-Member Campaign," which is to be held on Nov. 19, to deepen and quicken the spiritual life of the Church and to address every member of the Diocese of New York and bring before him all the needs of the Church and the diocese.

The convention endorsed that part of Bishop Greer's report dealing with closer communion between churches, and adopted a resolution calling upon the Bishop to take up with the churches the question of increased salaries for ministers to meet the increased cost of living.

During the session a prayer was said by the Right Rev. Charles S. Burch, Suffragan Bishop, for the recovery of the Right Rev. William Lawrence, Bishop of Massachusetts, on the receipt of an announcement that he had undergone a major operation in Boston yesterday.

Asks for Another Suffragan Bishop.

At the morning session, with Bishop Burch presiding, the request of Bishop Greer that another Suffragan Bishop be appointed for the Diocese was presented. While action was postponed, the convention placed at the disposal of the Bishop $4,000, or as much of it as is necessary, to enable him to invite to his assistance Bishops from other Dioceses during congested periods in the work of the New York Diocese.

If, after this plan has been tried, Bishop Greer still considers it necessary that another Suffragan Bishop be appointed, a special meeting will be called to act.

BRITISH OFFICER A PRISONER

Captain in Flying Force Accused of Posing as Lieutenant Colonel.

A man in the uniform of a Lieutenant Colonel of the Royal Flying Corps, British Army, was detained at the military barracks in City Hall Place last night, where he was taken by Sergeant Robert F. Morris of the Military Port Control Office of the United States Army and officers of the British Provost Guard in this city, who charged him with impersonating a Lieutenant Colonel.

The arrest was made at the Hotel Biltmore. The prisoner's name, according to his statement, is Daw McNabb. It was stated that he was a Captain in the Royal Flying Corps and that he had won the Mons Star and the Military Cross of England during the war. According to the information on which the man was arrested, he received an honorable discharge at Algiers, after the armistice, and then, after decorating himself as a Lieutenant Colonel, obtained an emergency passport under the name of Lieut. Col. Hornby by alleging that his ship had sailed without him with his luggage and passport on board.

He arrived here last Saturday on the Patria and the search for him was begun by officers of the British Provost Guard shortly after his arrival. Captain MacNabb was quoted as saying that he came to this county to take up a mining venture. No explanation was made of the reason for his alleged impersonation of a higher officer.

NEW BANK MURDER SUSPECT

Four Go to Identify Man Resembling Roy Tyler.

Assistant District Attorney Albert Conway, Detective William Roddy, George McCullough, and a bank official of the East Brooklyn Savings Bank, which was held up on Dec. 13 of last year, left Brooklyn yesterday afternoon for Tacoma, Wash., to try and identify a man under arrest there who bears a remarkable likeness to Roy Tyler. The authorities refused to disclose the name of the bank official who is accompanying the party.

McCollough, one of the group, was the chauffeur of the automobile in which the robbers made their escape. Refusing any further information, the Assistant District Attorney said that they were satisfied they were following up "very good information."

SMITH AND HYLAN LINKED IN PRAISE

But Some Blame Goes to Mayor in Report of Civil Service Reformers.

PENSION VETOES APPLAUDED

Comment, However, on the "Unfortunate Situation" in Health Department Regarding Dr. Monahan.

Both Governor Smith and Mayor Hylan were praised last night by the Civil Service Reform Association in the annual report of its Executive Committee read at the forty-second annual meeting of the association at the Hotel Astor. The Mayor was praised for his vetoing of a series of private pensions, rehearing and reinstatement bills, while the Governor was commended for his fulfillment of his promise to appoint to the State Civil Service Commission persons in sympathy with the civil service law and able to administer it capably. At the same time the Mayor's administration of the Municipal Civil Service Commission was criticised.

The report set forth that Governor Smith's promise to uphold the civil service law became performance when he appointed Colonel William Gorham Rice of Albany for a six-year term.

Regarding Mayor Hylan's vetoes the report said:

"In considering city bills, Mayor Hylan has declined to accept three bills transferring without examination civilian employes to the uniformed force of the Fire Department, thus conferring upon them all of the benefits accruing to members of that force, and has disapproved several rehearing and reinstatement bills, including two which would reopen old cases, the first those of policemen and firemen removed or reduced in rank prior to July 1, 1919, and the second all those persons removed who had served for thirty years, the latter so drawn as to meet the case of Mrs. Dunphy, who was removed with much difficulty from the Department of Charities by the last Administration.

"Mayor Hylan is also to be commended for his action in vetoing seven bills arbitrarily granting pensions to employes of various city departments without reference to any scientific principle. These bills were peculiarly vicious because they sought to anticipate the establishment of a scientific system proposed by the Legislature by its appointment of a commission to investigate the entire subject of retirement and report its conclusion at the session of 1920."

Regarding the work of the Municipal Civil Service Commission the report says:

"There have been various attempted evasions of the provisions of the civil service law and laxities in its administration which have resulted in a general lowering of efficiency, particularly in the Police and Health Departments."

The report stated that the first blow at the law was taken by Mayor Hylan on the day of his inauguration when he appointed former Coroner Reardon to the position of chief medical examiner, despite the fact that the office was in the classified service. The report related how the Civil Service Reform Association brought a taxpayer's action to prevent the payment of salary and forced the Mayor to recognize the eligible list from which Dr. Charles Norris, an eminent pathologist, was appointed and who still retains the office. The report also criticised the Mayor for appointing Dr. Doyle, a veterinary surgeon, as head of the Fire Prevention Bureau.

"In the Health Department," the report said, "a most unfortunate situation exists, where the important office of sanitary superintendent is now filled by the Mayor's physician, Dr. Monahan. This position has been in the competitive class for a great many years, but was transferred to the exempt schedule, with the approval of the Mitchel and Whitman commissions, in April, 1917. The result is that the Hylan administration has been able to pick out an obscure physician and place him in charge of public health work vital to 5,000,000 people."

Among the speakers at the meeting were Dr. Anna W. Hochfelder, William Drennan, and Prof. Henry C. Metcalf.

SAY ITALIANS ADMIT MURDER OF HOLBACH

Five Men, It Is Said, Confess to Killing Queens Hotel Man and His Wife.

SIXTH DENIES COMPLICITY

Robbery, Investigators Assert, Was the Motive and Had Been Planned in Advance.

Six Italians were arraigned before Justice Lewis L. Fawcett in the Queens County Supreme Court yesterday, charged with murder in the first degree for the killing of Joseph Holbach, hotel-keeper of Way Avenue and Rockaway Road, South Ozone Park, Queens, and his wife Helen, shortly after midnight on Jan. 20 last. They were Michael Casalino, 27 years old, of 146 Classon Avenue, Brooklyn; Paul Ricci, 33 years old, South Ozone Park; Rocco Bracci, 27 years old, 841 Kent Avenue, Brooklyn; Tony Bruno, 20 years old, 328 Hudson Avenue, Brooklyn; Nicholas Chiusano, 19 years old, 86 Emerson Avenue, Brooklyn; Frank Rialo, 34 years old, 251 Classon Avenue, Brooklyn. They pleaded not guilty to the charge and were held without bail for trial. Three of the men, Ricci, Bruno, and Chiusano, told the court that they were too poor to engage counsel, and Justice Fawcett later assigned Attorneys Dana Wallace and Henry Vollmer to defend Ricci; Attorneys James A. Dayton and Robert Price Bell to defend Bruno, and Attorneys George J. Schneller and State Senator Frank Adel to defend Chiusano.

The arraignment of the men has followed nearly three weeks of strenuous work directed by Assistant District Attorney William J. Morris, assisted by Detective Michael Fiaschetti from Manhattan Police Headquarters, Detectives Louis Dardis and William Quinn from Brooklyn headquarters, and A. J. Triebel, investigator of the Queens District Attorney's office, and, according to statements made yesterday by District Attorney Denis O'Leary of Queens, has resulted in complete confessions from five of the men which clear up what was at first supposed to be an unsolvable murder.

Bracci is the only one, it is said, who has refused to confess to have had a part in the murder, but admits furnishing money to the others. The story as revealed in the confessions now in the hands of the District Attorney shows the workings of gangsters. Last January, according to the confessions, Casalino asked Ricci if he knew of some one in that vicinity who could be robbed. Ricci is said to have suggested Holbach.

At the hospital before he died Holbach was able to make a statement, and in doing so he said: "Look after Di Rosa's friend. He had reference to Casalino.

The Italians scattered after the murder. Rialo was arrested in Brooklyn a few days after the murder, but discharged because of a lack of evidence. Detective Fiaschetti came into the case at this juncture and he started to locate Casalino. The latter was traced to New Jersey, to Philadelphia, to Staten Island, and finally to a farm at Fairport, N. Y. Fiaschetti went to this place, worked as a farm hand, while Detectives Dardis and Quinn remained in the town to give assistance. Fiaschetti finally found both Casalino and Ricci and they were arrested and brought back to Long Island City. Then followed the re-arrest of Rialo. Later, with the assistance of Investigator Triebel of District Attorney O'Leary's staff Chiusano was arrested in East Boston.

Armenian and Syrian Relief Gets Its Largest Appropriation.

The largest single appropriation, $3,600,000, made for relief in Armenia and Syria was placed in the hands of a committee for distribution at a business meeting yesterday of the American Committee for Armenian and Syrian relief, which was preceded by a luncheon for members and guests at the Bankers' Club, 120 Broadway.

One million dollars of the appropriation will go toward purchasing clothing and supplies, and the following allotments have been made for relief in the various territories which the committees' activities cover: Persia, $500,000; Caucasus, $825,000; Beirut, Ourfa, and Mardin, $300,000; Aleppo, $100,000; Constantinople, $650,000.

Speaking at the luncheon, Dr. Howard S. Bliss, President of the American College at Beirut, said that the need for additional relief expeditions was still pressing, and spoke with emotion of the gratitude the Syrians and Armenians held for America. "Since these expeditions have been undertaken," he said, "a new faith has been born in the countries which I represent. I would not call it a spiritual rebirth, but a renewed faith in humanity and the intangible things in life. Your nation has not only fed the bodies of these starving people but their souls, and that is a great achievement.

Nothing to eat but food!

A lot of men feel that way every little while.

A lot of their wives feel that way every morning.

Yet some women do manage to make dinner the exciting event that dinner at home ought to be.

They serve new things to eat.

And old things in new clothes.

Real surprises—and good ones.

You too will find these new ideas, new combinations of foods, in the Companion.

Every month.

Tested, all of them, so it's no expensive experiment to serve them.

A steak on a plank

with a fluffy border of potatoes, and a decoration of peas and carrots and a bit of asparagus—all piping hot—doesn't it make you hungry? It's easy to do. Alice Bradley tells how, in her article "How to Use a Plank."

The Bride and the Gown

Depending for its loveliness upon its graceful lines, and the shining satin of it, this wedding gown is so simple that any dressmaker may attempt it.

There's a sketch of one less formal, and also a picture of a [illegible], with pattern numbers for all of them. And a page of recipes for the home-made wedding menu.

Brides, especially, will need the June issue.

Mashed Potatoes à la Charlotte Russe would be easy with a pastry bag, and much more delectable than plain mashed potatoes. The June Companion has some splendid hints on the decorative effects of the pastry bag.

"It saved us ninety dollars"

We like to believe that a woman can save each month at least the cost of her subscription to this magazine.

Sometimes she saves many times that sum, and other women, reading the interesting examples we publish, save likewise.

Be sure to read this page in the June number.

An All-American Wedding

should be American even to the Wedding March. Reginald deKoven has composed a lovely processional which the June Bride will want to feature on her wedding program. A sweet compliment from the June Companion.

Alice Bradley's Wedding Menus

Being Alice Bradley's, they are unusual, dainty and sure of success.

There's satisfaction to many brides in preparing their own menus for the wedding. If you are one of them, these suggestions will find an instant appreciation.

A House That Runs Itself

eliminates the maid problem, and increases the health and happiness of the family is practically demonstrated in the June Companion. It makes you wish you could live in one just like it—and probably you can.

Do You Dream of Living away from the Crowded City and having a house and a garden and some chickens?

Bill and Betty's human little story is bound to interest you. John Barton Oxford calls it "Unreal Estate" in the June Companion.

Good Sunday dinners—and no dishes

It sounds too good to be true. But one woman who sustained the family's reputation for hospitality served delightful dinners without servants, and still had time for her guests. "Movable Feasts" tells how.

What happens on June 24th?

Midsummer Night, with its witching superstitions, offers an enviable chance for the ingenious hostess.

She doesn't have to be so ingenious this year, at that, for in the June number Laura Gates Sykora has planned it all out for her.

It is a fête that the young people will especially enjoy—not elaborate, but appropriately weird and ghostly.

TENNEY WILL GIVES $250,000 TO CHARITY

Estate of Banker, More Than $2,000,000 to be Kept in the Family.

Salem, N. H., Churches Remembered —Housekeeper and Chauffeur Get $5,000 Each.

The will of Charles H. Tenney of 570 Park Avenue, who died on April 27 last at the Plaza Hotel, disposes of an estate of more than $2,000,000, of which $250,000 is devoted to charitable and religious purposes. The largest bequests are $50,000 each to the Lawrence General Hospital of Lawrence, Mass ; the New Hampshire Conference Seminary and Female College at Tilton, N. H., and the Boston University.

Mr. Tenney gave $10,000 each to the Orthodox Congregational Society, the Methodist Episcopal Society, the Baptist Society, and the Universalist Church of Methuen, Mass., the First Methodist and Pleasant Street Methodist Churches, and the Congregational and Baptist Churches of Salem, N. H., and the North Methodist Church of North Salem, N. H. The will gives $5,000 to Jessie Ritchie, the decedent's housekeeper, and an equal amount to his chauffeur, Albert Breton; three grandchildren get $250,000 each, and Ebenezer M. Saunders of Middlebury, Vt., receives $25,000. The bulk of the estate goes to Daniel G. Tenney, a son, who gets a trust fund of $1,000,000 and the residuary estate.

Mr. Tenney, who was a retired banker, was the head of the banking firm of C. H. Tenney & Co. Some years ago he went to Massachusetts and founded several of the institutions which he endowed. He owned an elaborate country place, "Greycourt," at Methuen, and a farm at Salem, N. H. The will directs that this property be kept in the family and handed down from generation to generation, providing the upkeep is not too heavy.

TO LET ARMY WIVES SAIL.

Those Planning Six Months Abroad May Go After June 15.

WASHINGTON, May 14.—After June 15 the inhibition against granting passports to wives or mothers of American officers and enlisted men who may wish to go to Europe will be removed.

It was announced today by the State Department that passports will be issued in such cases, providing the officers or men concerned are not about to return to this country, but wives and mothers who taken advantage of this opportunity will not be able to return to the United States within six months. This time limit is set to prevent congestion in transportation facilities.

OIL MAN ACCUSES WIFE.

R. P. Resor Names South Orange Doctor In His Suit.

Testimony that Mrs. Mary J. Resor, the wife of Reuben P. Resor of South Orange, N. J., auditor for the Standard Oil Company at Bayonne, and Dr. Arthur C. M. Herdling of South Orange registered together at the Elberon Hotel in Fourth Avenue, New York, on the afternoon of Aug. 7, 1918, was given before Vice Chancellor Eugene Stevenson in Jersey City yesterday by Abraham Weinberg, a private detective, and his wife, Mrs. Mary Weinberg.

The Weinbergs asserted that, accompanied in an automobile by Herbert de Pierce, an employe, they trailed Dr. Herdling in his car, saw him meet Mrs. Resor at the Lackawanna station in Newark, and followed them to the hotel. Mr. Resor's petition charges his wife with misconduct "at various times between December, 1915, and August, 1918." It mentions the Hotel Traymore, Atlantic City; the Robert Treat Hotel, Newark, and the Elberon.

Weinberg told of automobile rides taken by Mrs. Resor and Dr. Herdling last Summer, on which he saw them stop at hotels, drink cocktails, and dine. The Resors were married at Willimette, Ill., Sept. 20, 1900, and have three children, Natalie, 17 years old; Mary L., 8 years, and Angela, 2 years, who are with their father. Mrs. Resor put in a general denial of the charges. She was not in court. Pierre P. Garven, who appeared for Resor, said he had fifteen more witnesses. The Vice Chancellor adjourned the trial to Dec. 9.

LEAVES $50,000 TO CHARITY.

$1,500 Bequeathed to Magistrate in Brooklyn Jeweler's Will.

By the will of James Cline, a retired jeweler, who died April 23 at 276 East Fifth Street, Brooklyn, filed yesterday, $50,000 is divided among several Brooklyn charitable institutions. A bequest of $1,500 is made to Magistrate James T. O'Neil, "as a token of my fondness and affection for him, and for his goodness and kindness to me and my dear mother."

St. John's College, Willoughby Avenue, Brooklyn, receives $5,000 to found and maintain a scholarship for the education and preparation of young men for the priesthood, to be known as the James and Bridget Cline Scholarship. A like sum is to be divided among the Cunningham family, in whose home Mr. Cline died.

The residue of the estate, $50,000, is to be distributed among the following charitable organizations: The Brooklyn Home for the Blind, Crippled, and Defective Children, at Port Jefferson, L. I.; the Home for Orphans at Mount Loretta, Staten Island; the Little Sisters of the Poor, Sixteenth Street and Eighth Avenue, Brooklyn; the Roman Catholic Orphan Asylum of Brooklyn, and the Sisters' Convent of Mercy, Willoughby Avenue and Taafe Place.

MEET TO PREVENT ICE SHORTAGE HERE

Mayor's Conference Names Committee to Avert Threatened Scarcity.

FIND SITUATION SERIOUS

Only 675,000 Tons of Natural Product Stored—Big Task for Manufacturing Plants.

Mayor Hylan called a meeting yesterday in the City Hall of the ice manufacturers and ice dealers in all five boroughs of the city to discuss plans to relieve a possible ice famine this Summer. After considerable discussion it was agreed that the situation was likely to become serious. It was brought out that there are only about 675,000 tons of natural ice in icehouses along the Hudson River and that the manufacturing plants in the city will have to run at full capacity and their product conserved in every possible way to prevent a famine.

On motion of the ice men, a committee was appointed to take up all phases of the problem. Robert H. Elder, President of the Ice Manufacturers' Association, was made Chairman, the other members being William Rathjen, Jr., representing Queens; Bertram G. Eadie, representing Staten Island; Wesley M. Oler, representing Manhattan; Ralph R. Horton, representing the Bronx, and Mr. Dorman, representing Boooklyn. the Mayor, the Commissioner of Docks, and the Commissioner of Public Markets also were made members. The purposes of the committee were set forth as follows:

First, to obtain the co-operation of the railroads in supplying cars to bring ice from outlying boroughs into Manhattan, particularly into the congested sections, or other boroughs where there would be great demand.

Second, to get the natural ice men who have ice stored up the Hudson, to keep their ice until the hottest part of the season, that is, during July and August, that it most effectively may serve the needs of the city in case of a crisis.

Third, to gain the co-operation of all ice manufacturers, so that their plants will be run to capacity, and so that they work together to get their ice to points of greatest need.

The committee will immediately seek a conference with railroad heads.

Praise Professor Robinson.

The Executive Committee of the Board of Trustees of Barnard College yesterday adopted a resolution upon the recently announced resignation of Professor James Harvey Robinson, for twenty-four years a member of the Barnard Faculty. The resolution outlined the various posts which Professor Robinson had held and his activities therein, and expressed regret that he had found it desirable to leave the institution.

WHEAT PRICE MAY FALL.

Prediction Follows Conference of Federal Director and Grain Men.

A view that the present price of wheat might be sharply reduced if crop reports were borne out was expressed yesterday, following a conference between Julius Barnes, Wheat Director, and representatives of the grain industry, including grain handlers, millers, jobbers, and bakers. A hope was held out for lower prices of flour as well.

"The views of the various trades on the effect of certain policies and methods of operation suggested for next year's Wheat Administration," said a statement issued at the Grain Corporation, 42 Broadway, "were requested by the Wheat Director. He explained that it was desirable that there should be the least disturbance to established business to make effective the guarantee to the producer, as intended by the national pledge, and, at the same time, make assured the reflection to the consumer of a proper price for flour, reflecting as nearly as possible the supply and demand situation in America and the world.

"There was a general agreement, in order that all of the wheat producers of the country over such a wide territory and in such great numbers could secure the benefit by contract, to see that wheat trading should be only on the guaranteed price level throughout the country. Then, if a lower basis was justified with the development of world factors as the season advanced, this lower basis could be made to reach the consumer by trade agreements with the millers and manufacturing facilities, the Wheat Director making the readjusting basis effective by payment of the difference, as allowed under the act of Congress."

The dealers' part in the contract between the wheat producers and the Government, and crop outlook and traffic plans also occupied the attention of the conference.

ALLIES' AIRPLANE OUTPUT.

45,270 Constructed in Ten Months by Britain, France, and Italy.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 14.—Data prepared by the War Department for the airplane production of France, Great Britain, and Italy from Jan. 1 to Oct. 1, 1918, shows that service planes constituted 79 per cent. and training planes 21 per cent. of the total.

Country.	Service Planes.	Training Planes.	Total.
Italy	2,507	421	2,928
Great Britain	17,854	5,655	23,509

EXPECT TO COMPLETE FORD JURY TODAY

Exercise of Peremptory Challenges Forwards Selection—Plaintiff Stays Outside Courtroom.

MOUNT CLEMENS, Mich., May 14.—The new panel summoned last night as possible timber for the jury in the libel suit of Henry Ford against The Chicago Tribune was exhausted today and a further summons for additional veniremen was sent out tonight. Mr. Ford came to Mount Clemens, but the day was warm and bright, and he did not enter the crowded courtroom.

The exercise of peremptory challenges forwarded the task of getting a jury. Four of these were used by Attorney William Van Dyke, representing the Solomon News Company, co-defendant, and one by counsel for the plaintiff. This left four peremptories still to be exercised by The Tribune and three by Mr. Ford. This was taken to indicate that the jury would be completed tomorrow.

Two of the veniremen were dismissed because they admitted having opinions which it would take much evidence to change. They were W. H. Flory, cashier of a Mount Clemens bank, and A. P. Grim, a retired merchant and President of the Business Men's Association, who designated himself as "the town loafer," and took his examination, which was brief, with high good humor. Irwing Ellis, a farmer, was frankly disappointed when he lost his seat by the peremptory challenge route, although he was worried about his plowing at home.

At adjournment there were twelve men in the jury box, but as seven peremptory challenges remain it is certain that five of them will be on the jury when it is sworn in.

THEATRICAL NOTES.

Sam Bernard will retire from the cast of "Friendly Enemies" tomorrow night, and the part will then be played by Charles Winninger. Mr. Bernard will rejoin the play when at the Manhattan Opera House in the Fall.

The original "Maytime" organization, headed by Peggy Wood and William Norris, will end its season in Brooklyn this week, after playing continuously since Aug. 17, 1917.

Mrs. Charles G. Craig has been engaged for "A Regular Feller," a farce by Mark Swan, which Charles Emerson Cook will produce.

"The Greenwich Village Follies of 1919" will be seen at the Greenwich Village Theatre during the first two weeks of June.

"Sunrise," by Pearl Franklin and Ella W. Peattie, will be produced in Atlantic City on Monday night by Winchell Smith and John L. Golden. The cast will include Alphonz Ethier, Wilson Day, Chester Morris, Malcolm Bradley, Benjamin Kauser, Marion Kerby, Sylvia Field, Joseph Woodburn, Andre Aubrey, and others.

Mrs. Otis Skinner is the author of a play which has been accepted for the use of Mr. Skinner next season.

"Welcome, Stranger," a comedy by Aaron Hoffman, will be produced in Baltimore next Monday night by Cohan & Harris. The cast will include George Sidney, Charles Dow Clark, Mabel Juliene Scott, and Florence Ryerson.

WOULD BAR KIN FROM TOMB.

Cook Sues to Keep Relatives Out of Her Mausoleum.

Miss Mathilda Carlson of 46 West Thirty-second Street told Supreme Court Justice Greenbaum yesterday that she and her sister, Sophia, worked as cooks forty years and used $7,000 of their savings to buy an elaborate mausoleum in Woodlawn Cemetery in order that they might rest in state after their death, and now her declining years are full of sorrow because her nephew, Nils Fegelgren and members of his family, with whom she is not on good terms, say they have the right of burial in the mausoleum.

Miss Carlson is asking for an injunction to prevent the interment of her nephew and his family in the tomb in which her sister is now buried in one of the six niches, and said their names were put on the cemetery deed without her knowledge. hTe court reserved decision.

"Love Laughs" for Bijou Theatre.

"Love Laughs," a comedy by George D. Parker, will be presented at the Bijou Theatre on Tuesday night of next week. The cast will include Jessie Glendinning, Lionel Adams, Katherine Alexander, Ada Waterman, and others.

"Who Did It?" Coming to Belmont.

"Our Pleasant Sins" will be withdrawn from the Belmont Theatre this week, and "Who Did It?" a farce by Stephen Gardner Chaplin will have its premiere at that house next Thursday night. In the cast will be Mary Moore, Ernestine Gordon, Frances Morey, and others.

Do You Pay 66¢ for Sirloin Steak? —or 33 Cents?

We serve all tastes

A recent Government bulletin quoted sirloin steak in different cities at prices ranging from 33 to 66 cents!

We buy live cattle, according to quality, all the way from $7.00 to $20.00 per hundred-weight, live weight. Sirloins from these cattle vary greatly in quality.

Some retailers sell 33 cent sirloins. These steaks come from cheaper cattle.

Customers of other retailers demand choice sirloins at 66 cents. These retailers buy meat from higher-priced cattle.

Also, the retailer who carries complete stocks, delivers to your door, and lets you run a charge account, has to get higher prices than the retailer who runs a "cash and carry" store.

We sell beef of a given quality at practically the same price all over the country—except for slight differences due to freight rates.

And our profit hardly affects the price at all—only a fraction of a cent per pound.

RACHMANINOFF

"The Star-Spangled Banner"

In his brilliant series of recitals, Rachmaninoff prefaced his programs with "The Star-Spangled Banner." His interpretation is so enriched with dynamic contrast and patriotic eloquence that those who heard him felt that they had heard the familiar air as never before.

The "Polka de W. R."

This charming work is an elaboration of a polka by Rachmaninoff's father (the W. R. of the title). It is fascinating in the composer's interpretation with its perfect rhythm and exquisite light and shade.

Those who have expressed a desire to hear these records will please accept this notification that they are ready and may be heard on the RAILWAY EARNINGS AND COSTS.

Fuller and more precise details of railway operations for the first quarter of this year show that no improvement can be hoped for so long as rates and wages are in their present relation. The significant thing is not the loss of $176,166,065 in operation, but the operating ratio of expenses to earnings. With an operating ratio of 92.9 per cent. the more business the railways do the more money they will lose. The comparison between this year and last is discouraging, but the conditions were then abnormal. To show that the outlook is hopeless it is necessary to make the comparison with 1916, when the railways made their largest operating income. In 1916 the gross was $811,000,000 and the net $214,000,000. This year the gross is $1,109,614,242 and the net $93,636,589. On $298,000,000 less gross in 1916 the railways made net $120,400,000 more. All the theoretical economies of Government operation, all the actual economies of operating in a manner unlawful for private operation, all the billion-dollar increase of rates—all and more is lost in the increase of operating expenses. Even this does not tell the entire story of deterioration, for there is a concealed deficit in the lack of maintenance, starvation of upkeep such as operators for profit resort to only as a refuge from bankruptcy.

The railways are not now bankrupt because the Treasury is behind them, and the necessities of the Treasury will put Congress under duress such as no distress of capital could. The time has now passed for gloating over the distress of the railways, hardening hearts against their appeals because they were suffering the deserts of their mismanagement and sins. The mismanagement now is that of the promoters of Government operation, and of the critics of the railways who would show them how to save hundreds of millions. The silence with which they receive the results of the experiment with their theories attests their recognition of its failure. Not only is the door closed on Government operation to supply the people with railway accommodations at "cost, without profit"; it is also not now possible to urge the economies planned by the critics of waste under private operation. Not that there were no private wastes, but because the public wastes are so much greater. If the door is closed on those two routes to railway reform, the third and last route is to help the railways in the manner of railway operators, whose methods now emerge from their eclipse into brilliancy all the greater by the comparison. The shippers will now lament their too great success with the Interstate Commerce Commission, and the Commission will see the unwisdom of the anti-railway partisanship which disqualified it for the judicial duties to which it aspired.

The education of the commission has been painful to its members and costly for the country, but if at last it is complete there is hope that the railways and the commission will regain their standing together. But if the country is compelled to make a choice between preserving the solvency of the railways and the reputation of the commission, the choice will be easy. The capital of the railways is around twenty billions, and the total wealth of the country is something over tenfold that sum. The country is not prepared to sacrifice one-tenth of its accumulations since COLUMBUS discovered the continent in the pursuit of theoretical benefits, and in persistence in the policies of the commission. The commission did not see its duty, and did not do it. It will be taught its duty, and there is no doubt that it will have the wisdom which comes from hindsight when foresight has failed. There are better days before the country, the railways, and the commission, all together.

Senator ROOT has charted the new course as well as anybody. He brushes aside what he calls the "machinery" on which most of the planners for the railways rely. For him there is no charm in Federal incorporation. He might have added that one of the worst failures among the railways has been under a Federal charter, and on account of its provisions which prevented access to new capital. He would not recapitalize the railways reorganized into new groupings, for he is unable to see how or when it could be accomplished. He would not have the Government guarantee return on capital. He would not deny jurisdiction over the railways to the State Commissions, which have surpassed the Interstate Commission in the savagery of regulation, for there is still room and need for local regulation of railways. What he would do is simplicity itself. He would assert the undeniable supremacy of Congress over interstate commerce and would remove all obstacles to the railways earning their living. That must be done, whatever else is done or left undone.

LENIN REFUSES.

Another projected compromise for alleviating the miseries of Russia has been rejected. LENIN, through TCHITCHERIN, has refused Dr. NANSEN'S proposal for feeding Russia under the supervision of a neutral commission, and declares that "a "continuation of hostilities is necessary for political reasons." The Soviet Government will support a movement to feed Russia so long as it has no political character, "but it will not be duped." Like the proposal for a conference at Prinkipo, this suggestion suited none of the Russian parties; the anti-Bolsheviki, who have won important military successes recently, were also afraid of being duped. But there was a difference: the democratic parties wanted to be sure that the neutral supervision of food distribution would be thorough, so that the reprovisioning would not be limited to supporters of LENIN; the Bolsheviki seem to have been afraid that neutral control would guarantee impartial distribution.

LENIN seems to think that he will be duped if neutrals are allowed to distribute food to all Russians regardless of political belief. His insistence on the continuation of military operations may be based on a confidence of victory over KOLCHAK, but there are reports from Russia which suggest as a more plausible motive fear that a population no longer menaced by reprisals may turn against the Bolshevist leaders. Whatever the reasons which inspired the Bolshevist refusal, one more attempt to find an easy way out of the Russian difficulty has collapsed. Whether we like it or not, the world is beginning to realize that there is no easy way out. The redemption of Russia must now be the work of Russians, and there is no reason why the peoples whom LENIN would, if he could, visit with the Red Terror should refuse to lend such material help as they can to KOLCHAK and the other Russians who seem able to save their country.

MR. PENROSE.

In itself the desire and pursuit of virtue is wholly admirable. Moralists would like to say, if divisions were so surely sharp, that the Hon. BOIES PENROSE is always wrong, a wicked and a hunker personage devoted to ideas rejected of the people, and assuredly, objectionable to the Progressive. As a matter of fact, Mr. PENROSE, a gentleman of great ability and experience and a sufficient sense of humor, has accepted all the ulterior signs of progressiveness. He stands for primary reform, for every reform that doesn't change the essential notion that he has of national polity. Abstraction made, as the French would say, of his natural Pennsylvanian theories and practices of high protection, Mr. PENROSE is one of the ablest and the most useful members of the Senate. That he has alarmed the extra virtuous, that he has been used as a symbol among the Progressive catechumens of the Middle West as a Manichean "capitalist," doesn't alter the essential fact. The beautiful, extreme, William D. Kelley theory of exports and imports has disappeared with the rising of the new world.

Mr. PENROSE, in spite of all the hatred stored against him by the Progressives, most of whom are inheritors of Iowa Grangerism, retains a certain sense of actuality. He has, not to mention others, two policies that are of cardinal importance. The capital and supreme reform is a budget system. The United States, especially under the new relations and adjustments that it has accepted and that will come to it under its new and responsible relations to the world, must know what its money is spent for. The talk about a budget has seemed, for a generation, to be merely prattle. Mr. GILLETT, the Speaker of the next House, declared himself, a month and a half ago, in favor of the budget system. Mr. PENROSE, the next Chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, regards that budget system as the capital essence of an intelligent policy of national expenditure.

Whether Mr. PENROSE'S plan for a close relation between the House Committees on Appropriations and Ways and Means and the various departments of the Administration is practically carried out or not, he has attacked a long-standing problem of administration and legislation. Vaguely, hastily, without co-operative intelligence, the United States has been spending money prodigally. In this time of enlarged appropriations, sobriety, judgment, a sense of corelation must obtain. The virtuous, including some of the Progressive Senators, whose virtues are rather emotional than financial, mercantile, and bagely practical, may have a hundred glories of goodness over the Hon. BOIES PENROSE; but even virtue might make occasional concessions to fact.

Whatever be thought of the essential political wickedness of Mr. PENROSE, as compared with the essential goodness of those illustrious statesmen, of whom, apparently, only Mr. BORAH, so much nearer to the Townley League, is the most theoretically logical, he has committed the Republican Party to two great policies of construction. For the moment he represents the intelligent thought of the American people. A co-ordinated, intelligent plan of national expenditure is absolutely necessary. In the heat of national patriotism we are not looking closely at expenditures, but for years and years to come we shall be taxed, and taxed, according to the ideas of thirty years ago, to the utmost limit of reason and of profit. If Mr. PENROSE, scarecrow though he be of the Progressives, can introduce an ordered system of appropriation and expenditure, it is not for the descendants of the Grangers of the '70s to raise their voices in holy horror.

Another thing. Senator PENROSE is one with a majority of Americans in objecting to certain "luxury" taxes. For instance, one may happen to be complexedly in need of lenses to correct his sight. He pays for the ordinary privilege of seeing a "luxury" tax. Is it necessary for the Government, looking for persons whom it may mulct, to be as foolish as that? In his desire for a budget and in his desire to introduce, if possible, a certain faint intelligence among the Kitchin taxes, the Hon. BOIES PENROSE, whatever his past wickednesses, from the Progressive point of view, will have the hearty approval of everybody who has to pay taxes.

THE SHIPBUILDING PROBLEM.

Optimism hails the President's order permitting American shipyards to accept foreign contracts as an assurance that the yards will be able to operate at full capacity for many years. The question naturally arises, What is to become of the Shipping Board's program for a great merchant marine? It was Chairman HURLEY, it seems, who urged the President to issue the order. The announcement that many war contracts would be canceled had resulted in a chaotic situation in American yards. On May 4 Mr. HURLEY said in a public statement:

> During the first few months following the armistice we canceled contracts calling for 2,000,000 tons of steel ships and about 1,500,000 tons of wooden ships. The Emergency Fleet Corporation canceled these contracts because it was felt that we should not continue building ships at high war costs under peace conditions with money appropriated for war emergency purposes.

The logic was sound enough, but the storm raging about Chairman HURLEY'S head did not abate, because the cancellations had thrown many of the shipyards into confusion and left them in the air, so to speak. The owners had to stop building ships for individual and foreign account when the President, under the act of June 30, 1917, took the yards over and requisitioned ships on the stocks. These cancellations, not unforeseen, were awkward, nevertheless, for owners who had assembled large forces of mechanics and made strenuous efforts to hurry the building of ships to win the war. They now saw a sharp decline in business and were confronted by a labor problem. Some of them railed at Chairman HURLEY. Perhaps he had encouraged the shipowners to expect too much, but the emergency of war had left him no alternative but to ask for all the ships that could be built in all the yards of the country, day and night. He had to keep everybody hustling and hopeful. The armistice came unexpectedly, and the shipbuilding program had to undergo revision.

Chairman HURLEY may have talked with too much enthusiasm about the expanding merchant marine, but on that point the shipbuilders encouraged him until the scale of construction had to be reduced. He was undeniably right when he said that it would not be good business to go on turning out a vast tonnage at war prices of material and labor in advance of action by Congress to adjust the merchant marine policy of the Government. On the other hand, the new shipyards on the Atlantic, Gulf, and Pacific Coasts were threatened with hard times, if not heavy losses of invested capital, by the cancellations. Last week the "Shipbuilders of America" sent a long cable message to President WILSON protesting that if any more Government contracts were to be taken away from them there would be "great financial and industrial disaster to the American shipbuilding "industry and its employes." Now comes as a palliative the order opening to shipyards a prospect of getting business abroad as well as at home, provided the American merchant marine program is not prejudiced.

The shipbuilders would naturally prefer the Government contracts, for at present prices of labor and material here and abroad it is at least doubtful whether the American yards can compete with the British yards. If American shipbuilders had received last December the partial release now given them, they would be better off in a business way, because in the intervening months they have been obliged to decline contracts for 3,000,000 tons. Moreover, as HARRISON ROBINSON, Secretary of the California Shipbuilders' Committee, points out, the shipbuilders "are faced by an emergency "which we must meet at once, the "presentation of the domestic program." They are completely in the dark about it, and the sooner Congress defines the policy of the Government, deciding how and by whom the new tonnage built and building shall be operated, the better it will be for both the shipyard owners and their employes, for capital and labor.

A CANDIDATE FOR EXCOMMUNICATION.

These are hard days for Socialists. The noble fanaticism of the orthodox has been undermined by schism; in Germany there are three Socialist parties, in Russia there were several before it was demonstrated that one of them had all the machine guns, even in New York the brethren are not living together in perfect unity. Nevertheless there is still a certain standard of orthodoxy, which has been violated most egregiously by no less eminent a leader than KARL KAUTSKY. Overnight this defender of the faith has become a heresiarch; within the week we may see all factions laying aside their differences to join in reading him out of the party.

KAUTSKY'S offense is indeed a heinous one. He has said that Upper Silesia ought to be ceded to Poland because the majority of the inhabitants are Polish. And he said this on the same day that a delegation of eminent international Socialists, no less persons than HJALMAR BRANTING, CAMILLE HUYSMANS, ARTHUR HENDERSON, RAMSAY MACDONALD, PIERRE RENAUDEL, and JEAN LONGUET, came together in Paris to proclaim that the reunion of the Polish people was a violation of the right of self-determination. Herr KAUTSKY might have anticipated this much, since it is a well-known Socialist principle that self-determination is inoperative against Germany, however admirable it may be elsewhere; that a Polish majority has no rights against a German minority. But he could not reasonably have been expected to foresee that the liberation of Poland would also offend these gentlemen on purely strategic grounds, because it separated two parts of the German State. Such a recognition of one of the ancient principles of imperialism on the part of internationalist leaders suggests that their sympathy for Germany must indeed be deep.

PRICE FIXING AND UNFIXING.

It was announced yesterday that, after eleven bidders for naval steel contracts had submitted identical offers, the Department determined to requisition the steel it needs, the price to be fixed later. That sign that steel prices are not likely to go lower is supplemented by the Director General's doubling his request for bids on rails. When he was contesting the fixed price he needed only 200,000 tons. Now he wants 400,000, as though he thought the market is likely rather to be higher than lower, and wants to supply himself while he can. His hurry is justified, for the market reports indicate that foreign buyers may overbid Americans who are slow about making up their minds. Birmingham actually bought rails here while the Director General was seeking lower prices, and Italy has just placed a $6,000,000 order for American locomotives. When the arrangements are made to finance the building industry and the foreign trade, the Industrial Board's scale is likely to look different to the trade at large, and to the Director General in particular.

If the Director General is forced to pay higher than the fixed prices which offended him, the regret at the cost to the railways will be softened by the betterment of the steel trade. And the Industrial Commission's price-fixing adventure, in bringing about the Director General's conversion, will have accomplished its object, although in a manner so different from its intention. That it did not succeed as it intended is due to the idea that "fixed" prices are extortionate. When Government fixes prices it is rather to keep them down than up, or to prevent their falling beneath a fair price. For example, yesterday was reported the case of a coal dealer who was sentenced to a sixty-day term because he sold coal above the fixed price. That price was truly fixed, but the extortion was the dealer's, not the Government's. Nobody would have gone to jail for ignoring or for buying or selling above or below the Industrial Board's price recommended as reasonable. That price was not fixed so that anybody was compelled to abide by it, and it was rather below than above the market. We are told now that the prices of breadstuffs and of bread are likely to be lowered by the co-operation of the trade with the Government price "fixers," and yet there were those who would have wished for the Grain Corporation the fate of the Industrial Board.

On principle and in normal times price fixing is obnoxious, and it should last no longer than necessary. But that does not prevent recognition of the fact that, practically speaking, price fixing during the war not yet over has justified itself by its results, even though there have been incidents connected with it not altogether welcome. Even in the steel trade the price fixing has been more in the public interest than would have been the breaking of the market for the sake of any single interest, even of the railways under Government operation.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

A Youthful Prodigy in Trouble. Probably there is no very close or direct relation between the fact that WILLIAM JAMES SIDIS was graduated from Harvard at the age of 15 and the other facts that he assaulted a policeman while participating in a proletarian "demonstration" on May Day and that he expressed Bolshevist, or at least Bolshevistical, sentiments in the court where he was sentenced to a year and a half in prison. A tendency toward riotous conduct, with the entertainment of foolish opinions, political and economic, is often shown by men who neither are nor were prodigies of learning in infancy, and it is not impossible that young SIDIS would have been just about what he is now, so far as his views and behavior are concerned, even if he had never been on a university campus, and even if his father, who is eminent as a psychopathologist, had not made him the subject of an experiment in education that involved a good deal of mental strain.

That the boy's health did not suffer is pretty fair evidence that the strain was not excessive, and the chances are that the precocity of his attainments as a scholar only illustrates the truth of what the philosopher after whom the boy was named used to say in regard to powers of mind possessed by most of us and used nothing like as often as they could and should be.

What the episode does suggest, however, is that the education of young SIDIS, though begun so early and crowned with a degree so soon, was far from having been as nearly complete and well rounded as it should have been, and one can hardly avoid suspecting, though it would be impossible to prove, that, if he had been taught more slowly, more of what he learned would have been true. Responsibility for his vagaries can be ascribed with about equal plausibility to influences exerted at home and in college, or perhaps the fault lay in the failure in either place to give a right direction to youthful likings for the new and adventurous and youthful dislikings for the old and established in the domain of ideas.

Genius Early Revealed. Precocity, it should be remembered in considering a case like that of young SIDIS, has been shown by not a few really great men, and it is not to be feared or reprehended as much as is the custom, especially on the part of the possessors of slow and mediocre minds whom it humiliates and therefore offends. Sometimes, indeed, it is a display as brief as brilliant—a fire of straw that soon burns out. As often, however, it is the beginning of sound and long achievement.

It is usually exploitation in a financial way by unwise or greedy relatives that wrecks the youthful prodigy, and this boy has not suffered from that cause. Sending him to jail is not very likely to cure him of his follies. That result certainly will not follow if the jail be one of the older sort, but, if his appeal fails, as apparently it must, he may be fortunate enough to land in an institution of the sort that teaches good citizenship instead of the very worst kind.

Getting Above the Clouds. Astronomers have often had heart-breaking experiences when they traveled far and made elaborate and expensive preparations for the observation of eclipses or occultations, only to find on the so carefully calculated day that there was nothing for them to see and study except clouds that told them nothing. That, at least, is not likely to be the fate of Professor TODD of Amherst, who, as told in THE TIMES yesterday, hopes to observe the solar eclipse of the 29th instant from an airplane that has soared from 10,000 to 15,000 feet above sea level off the east coast of South America.

That is a fine idea. No clouds are likely to trouble the professor there, and, though storms that would make aviation impracticable for such a purpose are not unknown in that region, they are far more rare than are overcast days almost everywhere.

Not everything in the way of astronomical observation can be done in a vibrating and rapidly moving airplane that can be accomplished with instruments firmly fixed on solid ground, but almost unlimited possibilities in the way of photography will be provided for the occupant of such a machine, and it is pictures of the sun's corona that Professor TODD especially wants to get.

Thus is a new utilization of the airplane for the ends of peace discovered, and it is quite safe to prophesy that it is only the first of many soon to be revealed.

Alabama Troops, Too.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In looking over your great Sunday edition I read Major Gen. Menoher's article "The Rainbow Division." In the second paragraph he mentions troops of several States included in the Rainbow Division. I was very much surprised that he omitted the grand old State of Alabama, as her boys rendered such valiant service in that division.

AT THEIR GRAVES.

A blood-red radiance lingers
  Along the western way,
And points with swaying fingers
  The eastern dawn of day.

'Tis war's last glory darting
  From agony's release;
A night of pain just parting
  Before a day of peace.

All golden comes the morning
  Beyond the eastern hills;
Gone is the blood-red warning
  Of hate's envenomed ills.

But where the sunbeams falter
  Behold the myriad graves,
Each one a hallowed altar
  O'er which a free Flag waves!

Forget not in rejoicing
  How wretched was the night!
Forget not in joy's voicing
  The price we paid for Right!

They sleep who brought the blessing
  Of future peace to man.
Swear, at the graveside pressing,
  To hold it—as ye can!

THE CITY AND THE STREET RAILWAYS.

A Method of Control Halfway Between Private Ownership and Complete Municipal Operation.

By WALTER WELLMAN.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Efforts are now being made by members of the City Government and representatives of the surface lines to reach a solution of the street railway problem in New York. The aim is to take advantage of the present serious crisis to attain a permanent adjustment of the relations existing between the public and the companies. Some progress has been made in the preliminary discussions, and more will follow if the men concerned are ready to get together in a spirit of common-sense endeavor to build up the City of New York.

It is well known that the present city administration favors municipal ownership and operation, and in the past has been willing to attain its end, if possible, through corporate bankruptcy. But there are indications that wiser counsel is now receiving attention, with realization that the responsibility of maintaining service and the equipment and solvency requisite to good service is at least as much that of the city as of the corporations, that indefinite financial disability of the companies would be a public disaster.

There appears to be a growing perception of the truth that while good service is assured on the rapid transit systems because there the tax rate must reinforce short earnings, on the surface lines service of satisfactory quality cannot be maintained without revenue at least equal to its cost, that a poor service is dear at any price, a good and adequate service worth whatever outlay may be necessary to produce it.

Moreover, at least some members of the city administration are beginning to see that while direct public ownership and operation are to be had, if at all, only at some remote day in the future, through public disaster, and then probably not worth the price the people have had to pay for it, something far superior to direct public ownership and operation is immediately attainable without disaster, with continuous high grade service, by solving the problem in the light of modern experience.

During recent years many American cities have experimented with various ways of dealing with their street railway problems. This series of experiments has developed a fairly well settled principle of organization and method of applying it—what is fairly entitled to be called the modern, scientific, practical, well-tested, experience-proved solution of a universal and complex civic problem. And this outcome falls halfway between the two extremes of private ownership and only nominal public control of operation on the one hand and direct public ownership and operation on the other. Wherever fairly tried it is regarded as superior to either.

The principle underlying this method is simple: The right of the public to the best possible service is the supreme consideration. To maintain this is the direct responsibility of the city government and of the corporations owning the lines. The rate-making power lies with the public partner—control of the prosperity of the property. The power is not wisely used when it deprives the property of adequate revenue for the maintenance of service and physical equipment and betterments. Disaster to owners is in the end a greater disaster to the public. The power is almost sure to be wisely used if the community is a partner, sharing in prosperity, its interest as keen as that of owners in present and future solvency and efficiency.

The method of applying this principle has also evolved through experience in many cities: There is a contract between the city and the corporations for a term of years. Management of operating details remains in owners' hands, but over management in general—policies, service, purchases, contracts, betterments, finances—is placed a public trusteeship in the form of a small, compact, expert board of supervising engineers representing both partners.

Generally there are three members of such board, one chosen by the city government, one by the companies, the third and chairman by a stipulated court. Nothing of importance can be done by operators without the approval of this board. It has been found that in actual working this tends strongly toward efficiency and harmony. There is no political meddling on one hand, and on the other the companies can no longer do as they please. They must satisfy public opinion, and public opinion has an organ of power. The trustees, being expert administrators, not politicians or theorists, bring so much additional skill devoted to the highest interest of the properties and aid which the agents of owners welcome and co-operate with.

Experience in many cities has also evolved a solution of the vexing question of financial returns, rates, expenditures, profits. It is found in what may be called a financial baseline, and that baseline is Cost of Service. In the last analysis it means this great public utility is to be managed solely for the convenience and benefit of the community, as water works and other utilities are managed, with no aim at profits for anybody in the old sense. Charges for service should equal the cost of service, and no more. Cost of service includes operating expenses, maintenance, depreciation, betterments, and a fair and limited return upon the capital invested measured by the actual value of the property when the partnership is effected.

This invested capital is simply money at work, entitled to its wages as the motorman or conductor is to his—that return is a necessary part of the cost of service. It is also entitled to protection and stability of conditions. Having become a mere public servant, having surrendered all power to reach out for large profits, all power to exploit stocks and juggle with franchises as in the old days, justice requires assurance that it shall get its stipulated wage. If there are profits above this actual cost of service they are to go back into the property or into the city treasury.

With such a fixed fiscal base line it is only necessary so to use the rate-making power as to produce sufficient revenues to meet cost of service, raising or lowering rates as conditions require. And an obligation so to use the rate-fixing power takes the place of a guarantee upon the invested capital and relieves the community of any financial risk in its copartnership.

The high importance of the rate-making power, and the need of raising or lowering fares to meet changing conditions, is a relatively new factor in the relations of the public to the passenger carrying industry. Formerly the fare was by tradition and common consent the conventional nickel, and such rate-making questions as arose generally related to transfers and the like.

Now all this is changed. The war has brought new conditions to all industries, and this one is no exception. Costs of production, whether of goods or service of all sorts, have risen from 40 to 100 per cent. The nickel is no longer adequate to meet costs of service. And the cities which had reached this modern and scientific adjustment of their problem were the first to raise fares to meet the new conditions.

Just now higher fares are imperatively needed. In a few years the old fare may be restored. And it is not impossible that a few years later fares may be reduced to 4 cents, or even to 3.

In New York today the vital thing is to stop drifting into disaster and take action to put the whole industry immediately upon a scientific basis. The opportunity of this hour is too good to be thrown away. The present city authorities aim at municipal ownership. No one can see how that is to be won save after a long and disastrous period of deterioration.

They may take advantage of the straits in which the corporations now find themselves, not to bankrupt and ruin these vital public utilities, but to make them more truly public and useful than ever before. Inquiry develops that such reorganization of the surface railways is without doubt immediately practicable. If the rate-making power be used to build up, not to tear down, the companies are ready to accept complete public control and fixed limitation of their own power and profit. At least the more progressive members of the city administration are known to be studying the problem with a view to finding a rational way out of the present dilemma.

The Postal Zone System.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I note in THE SUNDAY TIMES, May 4, that Theodore Glover Fillette charges that I made misstatements in relation to the postal zone controversy between myself and Mr. Burleson on the basis that I had stated in connection with Postmaster General Burleson's record "among this is your contemptuous overturn of the sound postal principles established by Abraham Lincoln," i. e., in reference to Mr. Burleson's revival of the postal zone system abolished by the signature of Abraham Lincoln in 1863.

I am unaware by what process Mr. Fillette can interpret this as a misstatement in view of the accuracy of the historical facts involved, which may be easily proved by the official records.

This revival of the postal zone system was enacted into a law during Postmaster General Burleson's administration in 1917 and with his full knowledge, approval, and consent; he has sent officials of the Post Office Department to the Senate committees to quote in defense of this system figures officially discredited by the most recent United States postal commissions. It is a general historic custom that attributes the adoption of a measure to the administrators responsible during the period of its adoption and not to credit—as Mr. Fillette has—those who in previous times had unsuccessfully recommended the revival of a vicious postal zone system.

I am unable, in the light of these official records and facts, to see any misstatement as alleged by Mr. Fillette.

History at Fayal.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Now that Fayal, Azores, is brought to our notice through the courageous undertaking by American naval officers of a flight across the Atlantic, it brings to mind that it was in the harbor of Horta, Fayal, that one of the outstanding exploits of the war of 1812 was performed when Captain Samuel Chester Reid of the privateer brig General Armstrong of 246 tons beat off a boat attack by the British Plantagenet, 74; Rota, 38, and Carnation, 18. The result of this expedition, ordered by Captain Robert Lloyd—who was on his way to reinforce Admiral Sir Theodore Cochrane's fleet at Jamaica, and who must have imagined that the little privateer would be easy prey—was a loss to the British of not less than 120 killed and 180 wounded, while the Americans sustained a loss of 2 killed and 7 wounded.

The first attack by three barges of the Carnation was repulsed with a loss to the enemy of eight or ten men, whereupon the Plantagenet and the frigate Rota manned sixteen barges with about 450 men, and Reid fired into them as they divided into four divisions. The First Lieutenant of the Carnation was killed at the first fire, and as the boats stood on the Americans poured shot into them from three long 9's and the famous Long Tom 42, which can be seen at this day in the Washington Navy Yard. Every attempt to board the Armstrong was repulsed, Reid himself having a hand-to-hand encounter on the deck of his ship with a brave British officer. Reid, hopelessly outnumbered, was forced to scuttle the brig and abandon her, and the British commander completed her destruction by setting fire to her. The Americans retreated to the shore in good order and prepared for another attack, but no further fighting took place.

The Pryor and Potter Affair.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I saw several accounts in THE TIMES relating to this occurrence but have seen none that give a true statement. At the time I was in the senior class at Princeton and read the daily papers.

In affairs of this kind it is the "second," or best man, who delivers the challenge and receives the reply from the one challenged. In this case Mr. Chisholm of Kentucky was the best man for General Pryor and delivered the challenge. He refused to accept Mr. Potter's terms and the affair did not proceed any further on that line, but General Pryor expressed himself as much disappointed at Mr. Chisholm's action and he wrote a letter to Mr. Potter that he did not approve of what Mr. Chisholm had done and that he was willing to accept his terms. Mr. Potter did not seem as anxious to carve anybody as he had at first appeared and he refused to carry the matter further with General Pryor.

All the puns were made in different ways upon Potter and Pryor, but the only definite display that I recollect was at the Republican convention at which Mr. Lincoln was nominated, when some time during the proceedings they dropped a curtain with a full length picture of Mr. Potter, under which was written, "He always meets a Pryor engagement."

From this affair I could form a very good idea of what would be the result of the war. Nearly all the Northern men were for Potter, while the Southern men were for Pryor, and although the Northern Democrats would argue about secession and nullification in the strongest terms it was very evident that they did not intend to engage in a war for their protection or promotion. I was a Whig, indorsing neither nullification nor secession, of the same political opinion that I am at this time; but, as we know, the Democrats of the North rallied to the Government against the South and furnished many of the best troops that appeared in the war.

To the Army Doctors.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Now that our men are returning, and the press is daily citing the many instances of valor, it seems only fair that credit should be given to a class of men who have peculiarly supported our Government and soldiers. I refer to the physicians who went to the front.

These men gave up practices which it has taken most of them years to acquire, and in a spirit of noble generosity volunteered to leave their families for the good they could do suffering humanity.

As a patient for over a month in the surgical ward of one of our largest hospitals in France, I know something of what a surgeon's work means, at the time an American offensive was in progress, and the devotion to duty shown by our doctors and nurses was something beyond all praise. At the first aid stations directly back of the front line, I have heard of surgeons operating continuously for thirty-six and forty-eight hours, often in a zone under enemy fire.

TENANTS THREATEN A GENERAL STRIKE

Persons in Brownsville District Talk of Refusing to Pay Rent After June 1.

WOULD INVOLVE THOUSANDS

Want Landlords to Give Yearly Leases—Houses Scarce Throughout the State.

A general strike of tenants against landlords in the Brownsville section of Brooklyn, to begin June 1, was forecast as a possibility yesterday by tenants, who declared that if no relief was accorded they would act as a mass and refuse to pay rent. At present about 1,500 tenants are on strike in this district, and a general strike would involve many thousands.

Leaders of the Brownsville strikers said the idea of a general strike is agitating residents of that section because of what are termed intolerable living conditions. If the strike is called, it was said the Brooklyn Tenants Union would seek the co-operation of labor unions, churches and synagogues.

At the Brownsville Labor Lyceum last night, it was said the tenants are not in the fight against the landlords as such, but against the system of increasing rentals every few months because of the frequent changing of landlords.

Representatives of the tenants said they do not object to the landlord obtaining a fair return on his investment, but they oppose excessive increases which in some cases are 100 per cent. more than the original rentals. It was emphasized that not all the landlords in the section are profiteers, and one landlord on Howard Avenue, who refused to raise rents, saying he was making a fair profit, was the guest at a dinner given by his grateful tenants. The tenants also hung out an American flag in front of his house, and a sign reading: "We honor our landlord. He has not raised his rent in six months."

Brownsville tenants desire, above all, that the landlords grant them leases agreeing not to raise the rent for a year. In the event of a strike pickets will be stationed in front of the houses affected to warn prospective tenants of the situation and to advise them not to move into the apartments.

The Mayor's Committee on Rent Profiteering adjusted the dispute between Abraham Perlman, landlord of 573 Powell Street, and his twenty-four tenants. Perlman agreed that if he still owns the property on Oct. 1 he will not increase the rent more than $1.

Conditions Bad Throughout State.

John Alan Hamilton of Buffalo, Chairman of the Housing Committee of the State Reconstruction Committee, who was in New York, said the housing situation all over the State is serious, and that an Up-State Advisory Council has been formed to consider the problem. He said that the council is conducting a survey of the State similar to that being carried on in New York City.

"Overcrowding in all the towns is becoming a menace," he said. "In the smaller places there are few tenements, and the congestion is apparent chiefly in the fact that families everywhere are taking in boarders to such an extent that the practice is becoming dangerous to health and morals."

Mr. Hamilton said that in Buffalo, as in New York City, there has been no building. He said that unless building is resumed the industries will suffer. The Public Health Committee of the State Reconstruction Committee, of which Dr. Henry Dwight Chapin is Chairman, will meet Monday evening at the Academy of Medicine to discuss the relation of housing to public health, it was announced yesterday.

The Mayor's Committee received a petition from tenants in the houses at 622, 626, 630, 636 East 136th Street, saying their landlady, Mrs. Rose Rudinsky, was about to evict them and asking that she be restrained. The petition said Mrs. Rudinsky had increased the rental to a point which the tenants thought too high and, when they refused to pay, she attempted to evict members of a committee who waited on her. Thereupon, the petition said, the 120 families in the houses went on strike.

Threatens to Boost Taxes.

Commissioner of Accounts Hirschfield examined Joseph Rudinsky of 409 West 129th Street, owner, with his wife, of 2,101 and 2,109 Harrison Avenue, the Bronx. When Rudinsky said his annual plumbing bill was $5,000 some of his tenants laughed. Commissioner Hirschfield said that, taking Rudinsky's own figures on the income of the houses, he was receiving more than 35 per cent. on his investment and that the property was assessed for about half its value. Several tenants testified as to lack of heat, leakages, poor plumbing conditions, and Rudinsky's refusal to make repairs.

Mr. Hirschfield told the tenants the Mayor's Committee has no power to stop landlords from raising rents, but that if they do so, the city could increase their tax assessments.

Abraham Davidson of Weeks Avenue, the Bronx, whose income is $20 a week, and who has a wife and three children, one of whom is an invalid, called at the office of the Mayor's Committee and said that in eighteen months his rent had been raised $13. He said that when he first rented the apartment it cost $23 a month. To meet the increases, he said he had to pawn trinkets belonging to his wife.

Captain Goldsmith of the Mayor's Committee settled a dispute between the tenants and landlord of 548 and 550 Powell Street, Brooklyn, on the basis of continuing the payment of the rentals which were being charged April 1.

MODERN FRENCH ART SALE.

Countess de Fontenailles's Exhibit Opens at Kingore Galleries Today.

In behalf of the Hospital Militaire Saint Nicolas d'Issy-lés-Moulineau of Paris, where she has been a voluntary nurse for the whole period of the war, the Countess de Fontenailles has come to New York to give an exhibit and sale of modern French art and modern book bindings. Some of the pictures were made in prison camps and some are so recent that they are even of the celebration of the armistice. The exhibition is unusual and brings forward the latest in French art; it will be at the Kingore Galleries commencing today. The proceeds of the sale will go to the hospital and to the impoverished families of French artists killed or wounded on the field of battle. The exhibition will continue eight days.

The Countess has just reached this country and is staying with Mr. and Mrs. Adolph Bori, 112 East Thirty-fifth Street. The pictures cover a wide range and are unusually interesting. Many are pastels and chalk drawings. Among the painters represented are Georges Migot, Domergue, Jouas, Mignot, Girard Cochet, whose sketches in oil of the celebration of the armistice will be shown, Cahuet-Levieil (miniatures,) Mme. Desbordes-Jouas, Christian Frogé, (whose pictures are directly of the war,) and Maurice Couallier.

The book binding artists represented are to include Kieffer, Heller, and Rollince, and the exhibits are said to be remarkable. The exhibition is to have as one of its features thirty to forty posters, some of them rare, these including the first mobilization posters of Paris, and a collection of ten aquarelles of flags taken from the Germans on the battlefields and now in the Musée des Invalides at Paris.

45,000 ON STRIKE IN THE SUIT TRADE

Fully 90 Per Cent. of Union Workers Quit—No Disorder Follows the Walkout.

LIKELY TO BE SHORT-LIVED

Manufacturers and Employes, It Is Believed, Will Reach Early Compromise.

The strike of workers affiliated with the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union began at 10 o'clock yesterday morning, when, it was estimated, 45,000 unionists left their machines, walked out and virtually paralyzed the cloak and suit industry in this city.

The admonition contained in the strike order sent out over the signature of Benjamin Schlesinger, President of the International, that the strikers maintain self-control and commit no acts of disorder, was heeded. The workers, men and women, simply left their machines and tables and quit work.

In accordance with the strike order, which was circulated early in the day, the workers stopped their tasks when 10 o'clock came and the shop chairmen gave the expected signal. In orderly arrangement they gathered behind their chairmen and marched to their usual meeting places in various parts of the city.

Union leaders estimated that 90 per cent. of the workers went out, and where, as in some cases, this was not done, it was due, they said, either to misunderstanding or failure of the strike order to arrive. Madison Square, Fifth Avenue, and the Broadway clothing district were filled with the strikers marching away from the shops. Some of these carried banners stating that in their shops 100 per cent. had responded to the call. The whole proceeding seemed to be marked by general good humor.

Letter to Manufacturers' Association.

There were several meetings of union committees during the day for the purpose of organizing the strike and attending to the many details and questions that arose with the walkout. Mr. Schlesinger gave out a copy of a letter which he sent to Saul Singer, President of the Cloak, Suit and Skirt Manufacturers' Protective Association, the organization of the employers. It was as follows:

May 14, 1919.

Mr. Saul Singer, President, Cloak and Skirt Manufacturers' Protective Association, 220 Fifth Avenue, New York City:

Dear Sir—This morning's newspapers print a statement by you to the effect that our demands are unreasonable and that all the efforts of your Conference Committee to reach a peaceful agreement with the union were without avail. You also say that "whenever the union is ready to meet the association in an earnest effort to adjust the present controversy the association stands willing to resume the conference in the hope of finding a solution of the existing difficulties."

We take it that the first part of your statement was made for the purpose of placing your association in a favorable light before the public. We believe, however, that the public is sufficiently informed in such matters to understand that as President of the Manufacturers' Association you are expected to say that the workers are unreasonable, and your statement will, therefore, fail to make the impression you desired it to produce.

As to the second part of your statement, we wish to say as follows: The union stands ready to resume conferences with your association. We earnestly hope that after a closer analysis you will find that our demands are reasonable, just, and fair, and that a satisfactory adjustment can be reached.

We would kindly request you to designate in your reply the place and time for a conference. Very truly yours,

BENJAMIN SCHLESINGER,
President.

Further Conferences Likely.

"I have just received a communication from the union in which they take exception to the statement made by me in the press that their terms were arbitrary," said Mr. Singer, referring to the Schlesinger letter. "It is useless for me to argue at this time whether or not the union's demands are arbitrary. Any person who has read them and has knowledge of this industry is qualified to judge whether they are arbitrary or not.

"In this communication of the union they also request a resumption of the conferences. The letter will be referred to the Executive Committee, and I have no doubt that a time will be set in the very near future for further conferences. I also believe that, if a spirit of fairness is shown by the union, a workable and livable agreement might eventually be effected."

There was an impression in the industry yesterday that the strike would be short-lived, as both sides at the contemplated conferences would find a ground for settlement. The strikers want piece work abolished, and it was said that the manufacturers are willing to do this and establish week work in the trade. The demands also include a forty-four-hour week and an increase in wages. The workers affected are cloak and suit makers, machine operators, finishers, pressers, cutters, piece tailors, sample makers, buttonhole makers, reefer makers, examiners, and bushelers.

Move to Settle Paper Strike.

WASHINGTON, May 14.—J. R. Buchanan, a Labor Department conciliator, now at Buffalo, will be ordered to Fort Edward, N. Y., today to confer with officials of the Pulp, Sulphite and Paper Mill Workers' Union in an effort to end the strike of workmen in mills of the International Paper Company. The department also announced that a conciliator would be sent to International Falls, Minn. In demanding increased wages, the mill men have refused to abide longer by the terms of the award made by the National War Labor Board, which was to be effective "until six months after peace is declared."

Strikers Tie Up Pittsburgh Cars.

PITTSBURGH, Penn., May 14.—Pittsburgh's street railway system was tied up at midnight tonight by a strike of motormen and conductors. The men walked out when they failed to reach an agreement with the receivers of the Pittsburgh Railways Company on the question of submitting a wage dispute to the War Labor Board. Approximately 3,000 motormen, conductors, and other workers are affected. The men demanded a 12-cent an hour increase in pay.

TO REST IN OLD GAMING CLUB

Convalescent Soldiers to Occupy Daly House at Long Branch.

In place of the click of chips and the spinning of the roulette wheel, which made the John Daly Clubhouse at Long Branch notorious in the days of unrestricted gambling, there will be heard the thud of crutches and the shuffling of convalescent soldiers when fifty enlisted men with overseas service are sent there by the New York War Camp Community Service. Away from the atmosphere of the military hospitals, these men will be allowed to enjoy all the modern conveniences of a big club, undisturbed by military discipline.

Recently this club his been used as a resting place for uniformed men, managed as are numerous canteens and huts throughout New York. But now it is open to wounded men only. Entire management of the building and grounds has been placed with Mrs. H. G. Ogden, head of the Convalescent Bureau of the New York War Camp Community Service. She will send the fifty men to long Branch as soon as the finishing touches are made, and bedding, pajamas, and bathrobes that have been donated to the convalescent home by the Red Cross are ready for the convalescents.

There ar eenough bedrooms for all fifty men who will be sent there, but during the Summer months a large screened-in sleeping porch with room for everyone will be utilized for sleeping quarters.

CITY TO AID FIREMEN.

Governor's Hearing Discloses a Plan for Two-Platoon System.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, May 14.—New York City firemen will not receive the benefits of a three-platoon system, but they will obtain some relief through the adoption shortly, by the city authorities, of the two-platoon system. This was disclosed today at a hearing on the legislative bill designed to split into three periods the firemen's working day in the first-class cities of the State.

Governor Smith indicated strongly that he would not approve the bill, and Assistant Corporation Counsel Edward J. McGoldrick of New York City informed the executive that the city authorities contemplated inauguration of the two-period scheme immediately.

The Governor gave the hearing at the request of several firemen's associations. He declared that the fire fighters were entitled to some relief, but he told the proponents of the measure that he did not care to take the position of permitting the State to interfere when the local authorities contend that the city cannot meet financial requirements for making the plan operative.

The "superstructure" or crosstown spur of the elevated on Forty-second Street will soon be demolished under the provisions of a bill approved today which will permit the First District Public Service Commission to institute court proceedings to have it declared an obstruction to the public use of the street, unless the Manhattan Railway Company agrees voluntarily to tear it down. This is the bill introduced by Assemblyman Martin G. McCue when the company refused to demolish the structure.

The Governor signed 36 of the bills considered today, making 614 legislative bills that have become laws this year.

McCORMICKS SEPARATED.

Union of Members of Two Noted Chicago Families Unhappy.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, May 14.—Chicago society is much exercised over the admission of Mrs. Hamilton L. McCormick that her son, Captain Leander McCormick, who recently returned from France, is living apart from his young wife, who was Miss Alice Cudahy, daughter of Edward A. Cudahy, the packer. Captain McCormick is a grandson of the founder of the International Harvester Company. His wife, with whom his parents are trying to effect a reconciliation, was a famous beauty. The couple were married Nov. 8, 1917. Mrs. McCormick is now living with her sister, Mrs. Vaughn Spalding, in Lake Forest.

Mrs. McCormick was heartsick when her husband sailed for France, but when he came home in March, it is said, did not go to New York to meet him. Neither did she see him after he came to Chicago.

"I have asked Alice to come and see me," said Mrs. Hamilton McCormick today, "but she will not come. It seems to be a hopeless situation. Alice says she will never live with her husband again."

LAUD LEAGUE AND TREATY.

Benson Socialists Appeal for Their Support.

An appeal for support of the Peace Treaty, which is declared to be in accord with President Wilson's Fourteen Points and to solve "intelligently and humanely" many world problems, was issued yesterday by the Social Democratic League of America.

The League, which is described as the "Socialist organization which supported the war," is headed by Allan L. Benson, Socialist candidate for President in 1916; John Spargo, Mrs. Charlotte Perkins Gilman, Charles Edward Russell, William English Walling, and J. G. Phelps Stokes.

The appeal declares that the Peace Conference in a few months "has carried us further along the road to international democracy than we have traveled in a thousand years," and calls on all American Socialists and Democrats to uphold the Peace Treaty and the League of Nations.

Frees Hoboken Suspects.

Supreme Court Justice Swayze of Jersey City yesterday discharged ninety-six soldiers and sailors and others, arrested in the Hoboken election troubles on Tuesday at the instance of Mayor and Commissioner-elect Patrick R. Griffin on the charge of violating the election law, but held four employes of a detective agency, accused of hiring the men and bringing them to Hoboken.

Laing Succeeds Justice Bissell.

ALBANY, May 14.—County Judge Phillips A. Laing of Buffalo, was appointed Justice of the Supreme Court by Governor Smith today. He succeeds the late Herbert P. Bissell. The Governor also named George B. Hurd of Buffalo as County Judge of Erie County in succession to Judge Laing.

Think of It!

In New York City alone the Holmes Company protects property and valuables having a greater value than all the money in all the banks in New York. We render electric protection to a grocery store and the largest jeweler on Fifth Avenue. To a restaurant uptown and the largest bank downtown. We also protect a host of other varied businesses. We have over 200 workmen whose entire time is devoted every day to installing new alarms in the premises of new subscribers. More business men are realizing the value of our services daily. Can you afford to be without protection? Think it over.

HOPE FOR NEW DATA IN AIR PHOTO OF SUN

Scientists Commend Plan of Dr. Todd to Snap Eclipse from Above the Clouds.

DR. JACOBY FAVORS TEST

Columbia Astronomer Thinks It May Reveal Hitherto Unknown Facts About Light Rays.

Widespread interest was expressed by scientists yesterday in the plan of Professor David Todd of Amherst College to observe the total eclipse of the sun, on May 29, from a hydroaeroplane at an altitude of 10,000 to 15,000 feet. Professor Todd's plan calls for the plane to fly from the deck of a ship 1,200 miles southeast of Cara, on the coast of Brazil.

Professor Harold Jacoby, head of the Department of Astronomy at Columbia University, who acted as assistant to Professor Todd on the United States eclipse expedition to West Africa in the United States steamship Pensacola in 1889, spoke of it as an experiment well worth trying and one that may reveal something on the sun that has not yet been seen by man because of the absorption by the atmosphere of certain kinds of light rays.

Professor Walter I. Slichter of Columbia thought it a commendable undertaking, especially as the eclipse will not be visible from any point on land which is easily accessible, and as the airplane will fly far above the clouds it will make a complete and accurate observation virtually a certainty. Dr. Edmund Otis Hovey, Curator at the American Museum of Natural History, compared the probable results to be expected from the attempt to photograph the sun from the airplane with photographs of previous eclipses, many of which he has installed at the museum.

Will Escape Influence of Air Density.

Professor Jacoby explained that while the atmosphere itself extends about fifty miles above the surface of the earth, it is so much denser in the lower regions that an airplane rising three miles would leave one-third of the mass of air below it. At this altitude, he said, the photographic plate might record phenomena the light rays from which would be absorbed if they had to pass through the entire atmospheric mass.

As to the value of the photographs to be taken of the already familiar phenomena in the corona and the prominences, the professor expressed doubt. "There are several obstacles," he said, "which have to be overcome, and undoubtedly Professor Todd has planned to meet them. I wonder what the possibilities are of keeping the camera pointed directly at the sun, and what effect the vibration of the engine will have on the picture. If the plane can be kept moving in an absolutely straight line there will be no trouble in keeping the image of the sun on the film, no matter at what speed the machine is flying. Possibly the engines can be stopped for a short period while the plane is allowed to glide. Those are problems for the aviators.

"A practical difficulty for which I do not quite see the solution arises from the difficulty of setting up a large camera on the plane. A camera with a fourteen-foot focus takes a picture which shows the sun only as large as a quarter, and I doubt the possibility of manipulating a machine of even this size. Of course, the negative may be enlarged, but there is a limit to this process. As the size is increased, the result becomes less clear.

Hope for Photograph of Corona.

"As Professor Todd says, no human eye has ever seen the corona except during a total eclipse, and, therefore, the chief interest will be in obtaining photographs of this. The prominences, or streamers, can be photographed at any time by a process which has been in use for some time. The various light rays from other elements of the sun are screened off so that only those from the hydrogen prominences are allowed to reach the sensitive surface of the plate. So these phenomena can be studied at any time.

"Besides, there is no particular value in getting above the clouds simply to see the eclipse, as all previous eclipses have been thoroughly studied with apparatus far superior to that which can be carried in an airplane. Despite this, the experiment is certainly a commendable undertaking."

In the American Museum of Natural History, Dr. Hovey has mounted a number of photographs of previous eclipses. He said that all of them were taken with cameras ranging from 30 to 140 feet in length, the average length used being 60 feet. The largest direct photograph ever taken during an eclipse was with a 140-foot camera, by the Smithsonian Institution at Wadesboro, N. C., on May 28, 1900.

Dr. Hovey said that in a few weeks a painting of the last eclipse will be mounted in the museum in such a way that the spectator will imagine he is looking at an actual eclipse through a telescope. The picture is the work of Howard Russell Butler, and is the result of his observation of the eclipse last year from a station at Baker, Ore. The sun will be painted as a disk 17 inches in diameter.

BISHOP GREER EASIER.

His Early Recovery After Tuesday's Operation Is Expected.

Bishop David H. Greer of the Protestant Episcopal Church of New York, who underwent an operation Tuesday for intestinal trouble at St. Luke's Hospital, Amsterdam Avenue and 113th Street, was reported late last night as resting comfortably and as having spent a quiet day. He rested comfortably Tuesday night, and members of the immediate family called to see him yesterday morning. The early recovery of Bishop Greer, who is 75 years old, is expected. The operation was performed by Dr. Frank Matthews, Dr. Austin Hollis, and Dr. Charles H. Peck.

Delegates attending the 126th annual convention of the New York Diocese at the Cathedral of St. John the Divine received with great pleasure yesterday morning the announcement by the Right Rev. Charles S. Burch, Suffragan Bishop, who was presiding, that the condition of Bishop Greer was regarded as highly favorable.

BOYS HELD FOR GEM THEFT.

Diamonds Worth $50,000 All Recovered by Robbed Firm.

Bernard Marron, 17 years old, a messenger, and Solomon Green, 16, who said they lived at 292 Bedford Avenue and 163 Nevins Street, Brooklyn, were arraigned in the Tombs Court yesterday on charges of grand larceny in connection with the theft of diamonds valued at $50,000 from Meyerowitz Brothers at 170 Broadway on May 10. They were held in $10,000 bail each for a hearing tomorrow. A member of the firm of Meyerowitz Brothers said that all the gems had been recovered.

Marron was employed as a messenger by Herzfeld & Stern, brokers at 40 Exchange Place, and fled in November with Liberty bonds valued at $29,000. He was arrested while trying to dispose of one of the bonds in Boston, was brought here and released on bail pending trial. Several months ago he obtained employment with Meyerowitz Brothers by presenting a recommendation purporting to be signed by the director of business courses in the De Witt Clinton High School. This was found to have been forged, and in which Marron assumed the name of a reputable boy in a downtown office.

Green was held because he had concealed some of the gems in a Hoyt Street house in Brooklyn. Accompanied by a detective, Green went to the house and got the remainder of the missing jewels from a bureau drawer.

READING FOR A DRY WORLD.

Librarian Paine's Forecast Enlivens Booksellers' Meeting.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, May 14.—The advent of prohibition furnished an enlivening topic at the second day's session of the American Booksellers' Association today, Paul M. Paine, City Librarian of Syracuse and President of the New York State Library Association, declaring that "after July 1 there would be many lonesome people in Syracuse and other cities, and therein lay an opportunity to bring to their attention the pleasure and profit of good reading."

Heywood Broun of New York spoke upon "The Relation of Newspaper Reviews to Bookselling," and business problems were discussed by Joseph Wharton Lippincott, Vice President of J. B. Lippincott Company, and Ralph M. Wilson, of McDevitt, Wilson, Inc.

KIERAN—BOLDTMANN.

A Demobilized "Fighting Engineer" Takes a Bride in Yonkers.

Lieutenant John Francis Kieran of the fighting Eleventh Engineers was quietly married yesterday at the Monastery Church of the Sacred Heart in Yonkers to Miss Alma Boldtmann, youngest daughter of the late Reynold Boldtmann.

Lieutenant Kieran is the eldest son of Professor James M. Kieran of Hunter College. America's entry into the world war found him a member of the staff of THE NEW YORK TIMES and eager to get to the fighting front. Believing that the newly organized engineer regiments offered the best chance for a speedy fulfillment of that wish he enlisted in the Eleventh as a private, and in July, 1917, went to France with the regiment. He was in the Cambrai fighting when the Eleventh, dropping its tools and seizing rifles, helped to stop the German rush through the British line, and later saw service in many parts of the front, winning successive promotions until he attained commissioned rank.

Miss Boldtmann was also a member of THE TIMES staff. The wedding took place immediately after Lieutenant Kieran's demobilization after 22 months' service. The ceremony was a high nuptial mass at which the Rev. Father John O'Donovan officiated. The bridesmaid was Miss Jane Collinson, and the best man was Lieutenant Frank Hughes with whom were three of the bridegroom's fellow officers in the Eleventh Engineers, Lieutenants Harry DeWitt Latting, Raymond W. Jones, and Joseph Owens.

After the ceremony the couple held a small reception for their relatives at the home of Paul Reilly of Life in Tower Place, Yonkers, before setting off on an extended honeymoon trip to the Pacific Coast and the Canadian Rockies. On their return Mr. and Mrs. Kieran will reside in Yonkers.

SECOND SON TO MRS. DICK.

Mother Was Widow of Col. John Jacob Astor, Lost on Titanic.

Mr. and Mrs. William K. Dick are receiving congratulations on the birth of a son at the La Salle Hotel, 26 East Sixtieth Street. Although the child was born on Monday afternoon, it did not become known to many of the friends of the family until yesterday. Last night it was said that the mother and son were doing nicely.

Mrs. Dick was formerly Miss Madeleine Force, whose first husband was Colonel John Jacob Astor, who was lost on the Titanic. Her first son, John Jacob Astor, Jr., was born on Aug. 14, 1912, after the death of Colonel Astor, who left a trust fund of $3,000,000 to his son, which was not affected by his mother's second marriage.

In June, 1916, at Bar Harbor, the widow of Colonel Astor was married to Mr. Dick. Their first son was born on April 11, 1917. They have been living since their marriage at The Gables, Islip, L. I., but came to town and took an apartment at the La Salle several weeks ago.

Miss Ballard to Wed G. B. Hanford.

Mr. and Mrs. John T. Ballard of Bloomfield, N. J., announce the engagement of their youngest daughter, Miss Margaret Eveland Ballard, to George Bennett Hanford, Jr., son of Dr. and Mrs. George B. Hanford, also of Bloomfield. Miss Ballard has been a member of the Bloomfield Red Cross Motor Corps. Mr. Hanford enlisted in the U. S. N. R. F. and served eight months on the Mohican, and was a year with Thomas A. Edison on special Government work.

Hartley-Sidell Wedding Tonight.

The marriage of Miss Ruth Hillard Sidell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Ellsworth Sidell, and the Rev. Lyman Richard Hartley, will take place this evening at 8 o'clock in the Fort George Presbyterian Church, of which the Rev. Hartley is pastor. A reception will follow in the social hall of the church.

Virginia Military Institute Dinner.

The annual "New Market Day" dinner of the New York Alumni of the Virginia Military Institute will be held in the Far East Garden of the Vanderbilt Hotel today. Major Henry A. Wise, U. S. A., will be toastmaster, and the speakers will be Major Gen. David C. Shanks, U. S. A.; Brig. Gen. E. W. Nichols, Colonel James D. Taylor, U. S. A.; Lieut. Col. William Couper, U. S. A.; Captain Frederick Stuart, U. S. A., all V. M. I. men. There will follow five-minute reminiscences by "Our Service Men." Tributes will be paid to the V. M. I. men who died in the service.

Hustis-Horner Engagement.

Dr. and Mrs. C. T. Hustis of 44 East Forty-ninth Street announce the engagement of their daughter, Elinor Stewart Hustis, to Nathaniel Hammond Horner, son of Edward Horner. Mr. Horner recently received his discharge from the Air Service.

HENRY J. HEINZ OF THE SIGN OF '57' DIES

BEGAN BIG INDUSTRY AT 25

Chairman of World's Sabbath School Association, Was Active in Civic Life of Pittsburgh.

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSBURGH, Penn., May 14.—Henry J. Heinz, founder of the firm of pickle manufacturers that bears his name, known the world over for its sign of "57" and equally well known in church and Sunday school circles everywhere, died at his home in this city this afternoon after an illness of less than a week of double pneumonia. The firm of which Mr. Heinz was at the head was about to celebrate its fiftieth anniversary in a few months.

Mr. Heinz was born in this city on Oct. 11, 1844, the son of Henry and Anna Margaretha Schmidt Heinz, and after finishing in the public schools he attended Duff's Business College. Mr. Heinz was 25 years old when he began in a small way the packing of food products at Sharpsburg, Penn., which was the beginning of an industry which he made famous the world over.

The possibilities of the industry dawned more vividly upon Mr. Heinz at the end of three years, and so, in 187p, he removed his plant to Pittsburgh, where the business was carried on for some time under the partnership of Heinz, Noble & Co. The firm name later became F. & J. Heinz, and in 1888 H. J. Heinz Company, which was continued as a partnership until 1905, when the business was organized as a corporation, with Mr. Heinz as President.

Besides the main plant in Pittsburgh, with 22 acres of floor space, the corporation has sixteen branch factories, ninety-eight salting houses, 30,000 acres of land under cultivation, 40,000 people assist in harvesting the crops, forty-five distributing centres, and prior to the war had more than 400 traveling salesmen scattered over America, Europe, Australia, and Africa. The branch plants include one each in Canada, England, and Spain, and the corporation has agencies in all parts of the world.

Mr. Heinz was elected to succeed John Wanamaker as President of the Pennsylvania Sabbath School Association in 1908, which office he held until his death. He had been a member of the International Sabbath School Association since 1902, and last year at Buffalo was elected a Director. Since 1913 he had been Chairman of the Executive Committee of the World's Sabbath School Association, with a membership of 36,000,000, and this office practically put him in charge of that organization. Mr. Heinz had planned to attend the annual meeting of the Executive Committee being held in New York this week.

Mr. Heinz had been a Director of the Union National Bank, Western Insurance Company, Pittsburgh Chamber of Commerce, and was Chairman of the Commission to Devise Means to Protect Pittsburgh from Floods. He was also a Director of the Pittsburgh Tuberculosis Sanatorium, Western Pennsylvania Hospital. He was a member of the Aldine and Sphinx Clubs of New York, as well as the Japan Society of that city. He was one of the fifty members of the Inter-Racial Council, of which Coleman du Pont is the Chairman.

Surviving are three sons, Howard Heinz, now in the Balkan States representing Herbert Hoover's Food Commission; Clifford Heinz, at home, and Clarence Heinz, living in Wisconsin, and one daughter, Mrs. John L. Givens of New York.

JERSEY TROOPS WELCOMED.

113th Infantry, Old National Guard, Met by Governor and Mayors.

More than 8,000 troops arrived yesterday from Farnce on five transports, which were met down the Bay by the police boat Patrol, with the Welcome Committee on board. The most enthusiastic reception was given to the transport Calamares, which arrived in the afternoon with the 113th Infantry from New Jersey City and Hoboken, made such a Governor Edge and the Mayors of Jersey City and Hoboken made such a noise coming to the piers in Hoboken that the municipal offices in New York were all calling up the Custom House and the Barge Office at the Battery to know what was happening.

Among the troops on the Calamares were 24 officers and 1,024 men of the 113th Infantry under the command of Colonel C. B. Finley of Elkton, Md. There was also the 57th Infantry Brigade, to which the 113th Regiment belonged, 6 officers and 33 men, with Brig. Gen. Leroy S. Upton, a nephew of General Upton, after whom Camp Upton was named. There were also two detachments of the 28th Division, who arrived just too late for the parade of the division, which will be held today in Philadelphia.

The transport Pesaro, formerly the Hamburg-American liner Moltke, arrived yesterday at the foot of Fifty-fifth Street, North River, with 1,407 troops from Marseilles. Among them were the 153d Field Artillery Brigade Headquarters and the 308th Field Artillery complete, 44 officers and 1,273 men. During the fighting in the Argonne from Aug. 25 the 153d Field Artillery supported the 90th Division. Many of the officers and men were decorated for bravery. There were a number of casuals and Red Cross nurses on board.

The Spanish steamship P. de Satrustegui, from Bordeaux, brought 1,642 officers and men, who were mostly units from the 82d Division.

The Italian transport Giuseppi Verdi brought 1,892 American troops and docked at Pier 95, North River, foot of West Fifty-sixth Street.

The principal unit aboard the vessel was the 307th Field Artillery, of 58 officers and 1,404 enlisted men, of the Lightning Division, composed mostly of Northern New York State and New Jersey troops. They were under command of Major Francis G. Baldwin.

WOMAN LOST ON MOUNTAIN.

Mill Owner Asks Constabulary to Put Bloodhounds on Trail.

Special to The New York Times.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., May 14.—Mrs. Louise Valli, 76 years old, mother of Frank Valli, a mill owner at Chodike Lake, disappeared from her home on Monday and searching parties have found no trace of her.

She had been in the habit of taking long walks on the mountain overlooking the Hudson. Mr. Valli today asked the State Police at Brewster to send bloodhounds on the trail.

Manning G. Cleveland, United States Marshal, who has kept bloodhounds for chasing criminals, said the attempt would be of no use, as the dogs would not be able to follow a scent after recent heavy rain.

Napoleon Life for $2,950.

BILLION IN SAVINGS PLAN.

Liberty Bondholders Are Asked to Put Year's Coupons in War Stamps.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 14.—The Treasury Department opened up its thrift campaign today by advising holders of Liberty bonds to reinvest the interest thus earned in Thrift Stamps and War Savings Stamps.

"Liberty bond interest coupons should be clipped promptly and promptly reinvested," read the announcement. "Thriftless money, or money which lies idle, is of no benefit to the individual or to the community. Money should be put to work where it can earn the most in the safest way, just as the individual should be kept busy.

"The Government, following the Victory Loan, is now paying interest to the people at the rate of nearly $1,000,000,000 a year. This is the money earned by the savings of the people invested in the securities of the Government. These earnings should be put to work, and there is no better, safer place of employment for money than the War Savings Stamps and Thrift Stamps issued by the Government.

"Two semi-annual interest coupons clipped from $100 4¼ per cent. bonds will more than buy a War Savings Stamp costing $4.16 in May. In January, 1924, this War Savings Stamp will be worth $5."

DAVID TOD DIES AT 42.

Ohio Multi-Millionaire Banker, Manufacturer and Politician.

YOUNGSTOWN, Ohio, May 14.—David Tod, multi-millionaire manufacturer, banker, politician, and sportsman, died at his home here today of typhoid pneumonia.

A former State Senator from this district, and prominent in local and State Republican politics for many years, he was a candidate for the nomination for Governor of Ohio against former Governor Frank B. Willis in 1914.

His business interests included many Youngstown industries and banks. He was formerly at the head of the William Tod Company, recently taken over by the United Engineering and Foundry Company.

Mr. Tod was keenly interested in sports, especially horse racing, and was the owner of many fine racers and owned Southern Park, Youngstown's race track. He also had several large farms, specializing in livestock.

During the war Mr. Tod was active in protective league work here. Mr. Tod, who was 42 years old, was a grandson of Governor David Tod, Ohio's civil war Governor.

Nathan J. Mitchell.

Nathan J. Mitchell, a prominent real estate dealer and civic worker in Brooklyn, died on Tuesday at his home, 1,033 Eighty-sixth Street, Bath Beach, in his fifty-first year. Mr. Mitchell was formerly head of the firm of N. J. Mitchell & Co., managers of large office buildings in Manhattan, and at his death was senior partner of the real estate firm of Mitchell & Coverdale, with offices in Brooklyn and Manhattan. He was President of the Arkwright Club, former President of the Dyker Heights Golf Club, and a member of the Crescent Athletic Club, the Brooklyn Civic Club, the Brooklyn Chamber of Commerce, the Brooklyn Board of Real Estate Brokers, Montauk Lodge, No. 286, F. and A. M., and the Montauk, New York Athletic, and the Long Island Automobile Clubs.

Dr. James W. Snowball.

Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., May 14.—Dr. James W. Snowball, for twenty years one of the leading physicians in Atlantic City, died today at the Atlantic City Hospital. He had been ailing for some time and the effects of a recent attack of influenza hastened his end.

Dr. Snowball was a native of St. George, Canada. On his mother's side he was descended from Robert Dinwiddie, Colonial Governor of Virginia, and his paternal ancestor was General Snowball, the noted British warrior. Dr. Snowball was graduated from Jefferson College, Philadelphia, in 1894. His wife is his sole survivor. He was 55 years old.

Obituary Notes.

URGES NEW HOSPITAL PLAN.

Dr. Conley Would Put City's Institutions Under One Control.

Dr. Walter H. Conley, acting General Medical Superintendent, Blackwell's Island, Department of Public Charities, spoke before the Tenth Annual New York City Conference of Charities and Correction yesterday in the Russell Sage Foundation Building, 130 East Twenty-second Street. His subject was "The Unification and Control of Public Hospitals." Mrs. Hermann M. Biggs, Vice President, presided, and Charles H. Johnson, Secretary of the State Board of Charities, spoke on "Co-operation and Relation of Public and Private Agencies."

Dr. Conley said he believed that an ideal form of control of the public hospitals could be obtained by establishing a department of hospitals under the jurisdiction and direction of a commissioner. Under the present system the control of public hospitals is under the jurisdiction of three distinct departments of the State Government.

These departments, he said, have similar plants and equipment and care for the same cases. Salaries and wages are paid under different departments, with the result that there is constant friction and agitation among employes who do not receive the same schedule of salaries and wages.

He also said that the practice of these different departments, each purchasing the same kind of supplies at different times and under separate contracts, costs the city more money than it should. He believed a better and more economical arrangement would be for the city to administer the departments as one.

COMPROMISE RATE DISPUTE

Companies to Return Increases if Defeated in Court.

Following an argument before Vice Chancellor Lane in Newark yesterday, L. E. Herrmann, counsel for the Public Utility Commissioners, agreed to enter into a stipulation with the New York and New Jersey and the Delaware and Atlantic Telephone Companies whereby the companies will return to subscribers increases in rates which went into effect on May 1 in case the decision in the United States Supreme Court is against the Postmaster General.

The case came before the Chancellor in the form of an injunction. John L. Swayze, counsel for the companies, said that the increases would amount to about $400,000 in South Jersey, but to less than $4,000 in the northern part of the State.

SIR BARTON ADDS TO KENTUCKY DERBY LAURELS, WINNING PREAKNESS IN GALLOP

Because so successful in other seasons, practically all of our stiff straws this season are made flexible where they fit the head.

Require no conforming.

The result is comfort along with the customary smartness that goes with stiff brimmed Splits and Sennets.

Of course we've the other kinds; too—Panamas, Bangkoks, Leghorns and Milans.

Lighter clothing requires the highest type of tailoring if it's to hold its shape.

We've no fear for ours because we're our own manufacturers.

SIR BARTON ROMPS HOME IN PREAKNESS

J. K. L. Ross's Derby Winner Finishes Four Lengths Ahead of Eternal--Sweep On Third.

PIMLICO, Md., May 14.—It is early in the season to blaze forth the name of the king of three-year-olds, but if ever a colt earned such a title in Spring racing Commander J. K. L. Ross's Sir Barton did so today when he won the Preakness Stakes at a mile and an eighth as easily as he captured the Kentucky Derby last Saturday. From a monetary standpoint the other horses of his age will have difficulty in reaching the total already acquired by Sir Barton in his two sensational victories. There is no richer stake than the Preakness to be run this season, and when Sir Barton swept over the line he added $24,500 to Commander Ross's bank account, which, when added to his earnings in the Derby, made $45,325 won by this remarkable racer, which was a maiden when the present season opened.

Racing luck may have hindered the chances of two of the field of twelve sterling racers that faced the starter as Vindex, the Whitney hope, wheeled at the rise of the barrier and was left, while P. A. Clark's Dunboyne was knocked off his stride at the start and was practically put out of commission. There is no reason to believe, however, that either of these unfortunates would have been able to outrun the magnificent son of Star Shoot, which simply toyed with the field throughout and had a margin of four lengths at the finish over James W. McClelland's Eternal, which made some amends for his poor showing in the Derby by finishing second to the new star. W. R. Coe's Sweep On was third, three lengths behind Eternal and a length and a half in front of the Brookside Stable's King Plaudit, which under the liberal conditions of the race earned $1,000 by finishing fourth.

Carried Stake Weight.

Sir Barton proved by his latest victory that he can handle stake weight and can show to equal advantage in heavy or fast going. There were some who cavilled over his Derby success because he was in receipt of a maiden allowance of ten pounds, and also were prone to believe that he, being a son of Star Shoot, was particularly favored by the heavy mud in which the Kentucky classic was decided. These objections to Sir Barton's claims to greatness were swept away today, for he shouldered 126 pounds, as much weight as was carried by any other starter, and on a track that was good, if not actually fast, danced into the lead and made the race a procession from start to finish, so far as first place was concerned.

The achievement of Sir Barton is unparalleled in turf history, for, though War Cloud won the Preakness last Spring after being soundly beaten in the Kentucky Derby, he only just squeezed home, and failed later to show the consistency already exhibited by Sir Barton. With these two events run so close together, it seemed a daring task to try to win them both with the same horse, yet Sir Barton cantered away from the best the West could uncover last Saturday, and four days later on a vastly different track triumphed over the specially prepared cracks of the East in a manner that was just as decisive.

The distance of the Preakness was a mile and an eighth, a furlong shorter than the Derby, but apparently if it had been six furlongs or a mile and a half Sir Barton would have been winging his way to the judges just the same. He was in front the whole journey, and the further he went the more he asserted his superiority, while, with the exception of Eternal, the others were struggling to hold their places behind him. The time of the race was 1:53, far behind the record for the event, but it gave no criterion of Sir Barton's real ability, as he was cantering when he passed the judges.

Great Crowd Sees Race.

Favored at last by fine weather after a long spell of rain the Maryland Jockey Club officials had the satisfaction of seeing one of the largest crowds that ever graced Pimlico troop into the grounds to see the event that by overwhelming liberality is rapidly assuming a place among American classics, though today marked only the twelfth running of the stake. It was a representative assemblage, the usual delegations from Washington, Philadelphia, and Baltimore being reinforced by a large contingent from New York, which included the owners of several of the candidates. There was a quota also from the West, expecting to see Eternal redeem himself or hoping in ever so forlorn a way that W. F. Polson's Vulcanite, which finished fourth in the Derby, would develop enough speed to match that of the winner.

The Ross entry, which included Milkmaid, was a strong favorite. The horse that had shown he could lead Billy Kelly home was good enough to carry the money of the Marylanders and they swooped down on the mutuel machines in such force that the entry was a 7 to 5 favorite. There was good support for Dunboyne and Vindex, so that the stanch adherents of Eternal received nearly 3 to 1 for their place wagers, while 3 to 2 for third was paid against the Coe entry.

With such a fine setting it was unfortunate that so much interest should be taken out of the race by a start that was by no means good. They were a fractious lot, and after a delay of five minutes the barrier went up, which was the signal for the exceedingly frisky Vindex to wheel and refuse to break. Dunboyne broke all right, but his first move was directly in the wake of Milkmaid and when the two bumped he suffered more than did the filly.

Sir Barton had been behaving like a perfect gentleman, and with the wide-awake Loftus in command he rushed to front, with the Odom hope, King Plaudit, doing his best to keep close to the smooth-moving thoroughbred a length and a half away and two lengths in front of Eternal, which Shuttinger was rating in third place. Sweep On was fourth, with Routledge fifth and Milkmaid sixth at the end of the first furlong, at which point the field was well strung out. Toward the end of the back stretch Eternal began to move up to King Plaudit, and, with Sir Barton safely intrenched two lengths in front, this pair had a race around the turn to see which should have the honor of leading the chase after the Derby winner. It was soon over, for Eternal exhibited a flash of the speed he showed as a two-year-old and raced away from King Plaudit.

Set Dazzling Pace.

That was enough for the son of Sweep, but catching the grand thoroughbred in front was another matter, and Shuttinger, who rode Eternal, soon became aware of it. As they turned into the stretch Sir Barton still held his lead of two lengths, while Sweep On had passed King Plaudit and was in third place. Urge his mount as he would, Shuttinger could not gain an inch on Sir Barton, which moved with a raking, easy stride that made him look like a piece of machinery. There was no need for driving Sir Barton, but with the others dazzled by the pace he had set his path to victory was clear, and he drew further away while still under the careful restraint of Loftus. He finished the race as fresh as when he started and richly deserved the plaudits of the crowd.

As an added feature the Hampden Steeplechase was decided and resulted in a victory for J. E. Griffith's great jumper, The Brook, which carried 165 pounds and reasserted his right to be called the best jumper in training.

The summaries:

SOUND BUGLE AT JAMAICA.

Metropolitan Racing Season Begins Today with Good Card.

Racing on the Metropolitan circuit will open today at Jamaica with brighter prospects than the sport of kings has enjoyed since legislation put a damper on the activities of the thoroughbreds in 1910. There are more and better horses in training and the return of several favorites which had either broken down or gone off form has served to awaken public interest in the competitions scheduled for the local tracks.

An excellent card has been arranged for the initial day of the Metropolitan Jockey Club meeting, and given clear weather and a fast track there is no doubt that when the stirring notes of the bugle summon the horses for the first race this afternoon there will be a large crowd to welcome the racers. Excellent sport during the past six weeks in Maryland has whetted the appetites of the racegoers and the demand for clubhouse boxes for the meeting has been so large that a capacity crowd in the select inclosure is expected. For the first three days the meeting will conflict with Pimlico, and though there appears to be no lack of horses larger fields may be looked for after the close of Pimlico on Saturday. The present meeting will last for only six days, after which the Spring fixture of the Westchester Racing Association at Belmont Park will run its course, after which the scene again shifts to Jamaica for another session of nine days.

One of the most popular horses that ever thrilled racing crowds will be the chief attraction this afternoon. Old Rosebud, which was kept from competition last year on account of a bad leg, has come back to the races and will carry top weight of 134 pounds in the Paumonok Handicap at six furlongs, which is the feature of the card. Old Rosebud has won two races and has been placed in two others since his return to the turf, and the eight-year-old gelding is looking better than ever before. There are a dozen horses in the field, including two great sprinters, Old Koenig and Flags. Most of those engaged have not been to the post this season, but have been well tuned up in training gallops. Among the lightweights in the Paumonok is the Oneck Stable's Elfin Queen, which around this time last year was counted the best of the two-year-olds. This speedy filly is in with 105 pounds, and if the reports are true that she has regained her old foot, which failed after an attack of skin disease, she will be a hard one to beat.

The Suffolk Selling Stakes for two-year-olds will introduce several promising juveniles which have not yet faced the barrier, in addition to Oleaster and Shoal, which raced creditably in Maryland. Some smart youngsters are also engaged in the sixth race, for two-year-old maidens.

The entries follow:

FIRST RACE.—Three-year-olds; selling; six furlongs. Ambassador III., 112 pounds; *Teddy Rousseau, 108; Wyndover, 119; Young Adam, 111; Efficient, 111; *Scrub Lady, 102; Marmite, 106; Title, 108; War Zone, 116; Syrdarya, 112.

SECOND RACE.—Three-year-olds and upward; selling; five and a half furlongs. Ting a Ling, 111 pounds; *Masda, 101; Our Nephew, 116; Teddy Rousseau, 101; Hubbub, 111; Kewessa, 111; Appleton Wiske, 111; Elected II., 101; Out the Way, 116; Green Gold, 111; Housemaid, 106; Marmite, 96; Madam Byng, 96; Half and Half, 111; Piedra, 111.

THIRD RACE.—Two-year-olds; the Suffolk Selling Stakes; five furlongs. Oleaster, 103 pounds; *Eddie Rickenbacker, 107; Hampden, 107; Flying Orb, 110; Shoal, 122; Fair Colleen, 109.

FOURTH RACE.—The Paumonok Handicap; $5,000 added; for three-year-olds and upward; six furlongs. Old Rosebud, 134 pounds; Old Koenig, 128; Flags, 126; Hollister, 121; Lucullite, 119; Jock Scot, 116; Lanius, 114; George Starr, 112; Fairy Wand, 107; Abadane, 106; Elfin Queen, 105; The Boy, 102.

FIFTH RACE.—Three-year-olds; selling; one mile and seventy yards. Paddy Dear, 118 pounds; Belario, 106; Ninety Simplex, 108; *Sylvano, 89; Orderly, 108; Sir William Johnson, 108; *Goaler, 101.

SIXTH RACE.—Two-year-old maidens; five furlongs. Roisterer, 115 pounds; Don Plaudit, 115; End Man, 115; White Socks, 115; Sugarmint, 112; *Heyday, 112; Say Which, 112.

*Apprentice allowance claimed.
Weather cloudy; track fast.

PIRATES POUND WATSON.

Bunch Hits in Early Innings and Beat Phillies, 8 to 3.

PHILADELPHIA, May 14.—Timely hitting and better fielding gave Pittsburgh today's game with Philadelphia, 8 to 3. Watson was ineffective in the three innings he pitched, and the Pirates amassed a lead which the Phillies were unable to overcome. Some 300 doughboys of the 28th Division were guests of the club.

VAUGHN IS VICTIM OF M'GRAW BATSMEN

Giants Reach Their Onetime Nemesis for Timely Hits and Again Beat Cubs by 3 to 2.

Hippo Jim Vaughn, the magnum-sized pitcher of the Chicago Cubs, suffered a couple of shocks in the game against the Giants at the Polo Grounds yesterday. McGraw's swatting squad pasted Vaughn hard enough to win the game by a 3 to 2 score, but that predicament didn't upset Hippo nearly as much as did Manager Moose Mitchell when he lifted Jim from the pastime in the eighth inning.

There were two Cubs on the bases at the time and only one out, and it was Vaughn's turn to bat. Having lost the game to the Giants by his pitching, he was now prepared to win it back again by his batting. With one out, Deal singled and Killefer doubled to left, sending Deal to third. Hippo grabbed his trusty club and wandered to the plate.

Vaughn figured that he could just about slam the ball to the fence for a two or three bagger which would send in enough runs to tie the score, while some of the batsmen following him could send him home and he would be nothing less than a hero in the eyes of the New York multitude. While Hippo was mapping this all out in his mind Manager Mitchell was thinking along another channel.

"Mitch" called a halt to the game and unceremoniously extracted Vaughn from the game and sent O'Farrell in to bat for him. Hippo refused to believe that Mitchell would think of not giving him a chance to win his own game, when the stage was all set so beautifully for a cleanup. Vaughn started to argue with his manager, something which isn't done in the best baseball circles. Manager Mitchell told Hippo where the clubhouse was and gave him complete directions how to get there. Vaughn approached the clubhouse by way of the diamond, and while he was walking across the playing field the game was held up for about five minutes.

Mitchell's guess about O'Farrell wasn't so far wrong, at that. He hoisted a sacrifice fly to Young in right field, and Deal scored. But the Cub rally ended and Chicago came within one run of tieing the Giants, just as they did in the game on Tuesday.

Johnny Dubuc did the pitching for the Giants, and he was stingy with his hits most of the way. He had a few troublesome moments in the first and eighth innings, but pulled through before too much damage was done. The Cubs scored in the opening inning. Flack singled to centre and reached second when Benny Kauff fumbled the ball. Hollocher sacrificed, and Mann hit a sacrifice fly to Burns which scored Flack.

The Giants took the upper hand in the second. Kauff led off with a two-base rap to right, and Zimmerman sacrificed. Fletcher rolled to Merkle, who was too slow at tossing the ball home to catch Kauff, and Benny was safe at the plate. McCarty rolled to Merkle and Fred sat down on the lawn while he was trying to field the ball, so the tap went for a hit. Dubuc singled to left, scoring Fletcher.

The third Giant run came in the fourth. Zimmerman doubled off the right field wall, the hit coming within inches of being a home run. Fletcher sacrificed, and Heinie scored when McCarty hoisted a Texas Leaguer back of second. The Cubs' outfield became confused over the situation and the ball dropped unmolested when there were three or four players within reach of it.

The Cub rally which was nipped in the bud came in the eighth.

ROBINS HIT BALL OFTEN.

Bombard Three Cincinnati Pitchers and Win by Score of 7 to 0.

Hy Myers, Brooklyn's agile centre fielder, started a batting jamboree at Ebbets Field yesterday against the Cincinnati Reds, which didn't end until the Robins had safely tucked away their second victory over the invaders, after a tempestuous session, by 7 to 0. Three Rhinelander pitchers were heavly shelled when the Brooklyn heavy artillery got going properly, the only players not participating in the bombardment being Lee Magee and Burleigh Grimes. In some unaccountable way neither of these players was able to wallop out a safe blow, while their team mates thrived on Cincinnati twirling to the complete joy of some 5,000 fans.

Myers started the bludgeon outburst in the second inning. The retiring Hy took a fancy to the first ball served by Rube Bressler, and sent it screaming hight over the head of Eddie Roush, to come to a stop under the temporary seats against the centrefield wall, which Charles H. Ebbets expectantly placed there for the recent Giants-Robins series. The hit was the longest, on a direct line, ever made in the Flatbush ballyard, according to Abe Yeager, whose baseball memory dates back to the days when Noah lived in the Ark. Anyway, Myers scooted around the base paths like a scared rabbit and crossed the rubber long before the horsehide was relayed back to the infield.

That blow started a lot of trouble for Bressler. In the fourth Myers again crossed the plate, riding home on Lew Malone's single to centre. The Robins got another off Rube in the fifth when Ivan Olson scored Grimes from first, with a double to left, and then Bressler was derricked. Jimmy Ring, a former Robin, went to the mound and tried to stop the onslaught, but was ineffective. Ivan the Terrible stole third and scored on a tight play at the plate when Magee grounded to Rath. Ring uncorked a wild pitch which sent Magee to third, from which corner he scored on Griffith's blow to right.

Reuther batted for Ring in the seventh, making the third out, and then Ed Gerner went to the hill for the Reds. Olson greeted Ed with a single to right, took second on Magee's sacrifice, and scored on Griffith's single to centre. In the eighth Konetchy's single, Malone's sacrifice, and Krueger's blow to centre manufactured Brooklyn's seventh marker.

From this it can be seen that the game was valuable for two things: It enabled the Robins to fatten their lagging batting averages and gave them a tighter hold on first place.

YANKS START TOUR BY BEATING TIGERS

Ping Bodie's Bat and His Alert Fielding Play Chief Role in 1 to 0 Victory.

Special to The New York Times.

DETROIT, May 14.—The Yankees opened their first western tour with a victory over the Tigers here this afternoon, taking a light-hitting game from the Jennings crowd by the score of 1 to 0. Fine pitching by Herb Thormahlen kept the jungle tribe away from the plate in seven of the nine innings, and in the two other frames Ping Bodie stepped in with fancy catches that prevented any scoring.

It was a big day for Bodie. Ping led both teams with the stick, getting a brace of clean singles in three trips to the plate, or half of the hits which the Huggins' help was able to garner off Howard Ehmke. One of his hits helped to produce the only run of the game. The other wallop, which was followed by the bold theft of second base, helped in no respect save in Bodie's individual record.

It was in fielding especially that the stocky outfielder shone. With one out in the eighth inning, Bobby Jones hit a ball that soared and sped on its way to deep left centre with all the marks of a triple or a home run, as Jones can step around the bases with the best of them. Ping had been playing toward right centre and started with all the speed that is done up in those chubby legs. Ball and Ping were about to cross paths, both going fast, when Bodie's gloved hand shot up and the flight of that ball ended right there. Bodie covered a lot of ground after making the catch before he was able to reduce momentum sufficiently to stop with safety. Ainsmith followed with a triple to right centre, so the catch prevented at least one run.

Again in the ninth when trouble developed for Thormahlen it was Bodie who turned back the Tigers. Bush had opened Detroit's ninth with a single to left, and Ellison's sacrifice put the little shortstop on second. With Cobb and Veach due at the plate, the outlook for a tie score and extra innings was roseate. But Ty, with two strikes on him, grounded to Pratt and was out at first, Bush moving along to third. Veach caught one on the nose, and away the ball went toward deep centre. Bodie ran back, and again was moving fast when he pulled in the drive, ending the game.

Aside from the two innings in which Ping performed his legerdemain Thormahlen had the Tigers well in hand. He allowed five scattered hits through four innings. In the fifth, the only inning which produced two hits for the home team, Veach and Heilman led off with singles, but the three succeeding batsmen could not get the ball past the infield. Only three of the Tigers reached second base during the game.

Ehmke set the Huggins hitters down with four singles, which arrived in as many different innings. It required an error to make possible the one run scored by the New York team. That was contributed by Donie Bush, who otherwise played a strong defensive game. After failing to threaten for four innings the Yanks put the needed run over in the fifth, and then were very tame during the last four chapters.

Ty Cobb failed to reach first base in four trips to the plate.

GIANTS MAY GET GONZALES.

Big Catcher Coming Here for Conference with McGraw.

Before many days Mike Gonzales, the Cuban catcher, will probably be a member of the Giants. Gonzales played with the St. Louis Cardinals last year, but has refused to sign a contract this season. After a conference between Managers McGraw and Rickey yesterday the New York manager wired Gonzales to come to this city for a conference.

Gonzales will probably be traded to the Giants for Dave Robertson, the hard-hitting outfielder.

SWARTHMORE IS BLANKED.

West Point Gets Only One Run, but It Proves Sufficient.

Special to The New York Times.

WEST POINT, N. Y., May 14.—The Cadets shut out the Swarthmore College nine here today by a score of 1 to 0.

The Cadets' lone run came in the lucky seventh. After Wilhide had grounded out, Honnen smashed a three-bagger to deep left and scored on Lystad's hard drive through Ogden.

The Army presented a new line-up today, Honnen coming into shortstop from right field and Tate going to first base.

Diamond
SQUEEGEE TREAD
Tires

Why their treads are black and their sides are red

Color cuts no figure in making the treads of Diamonds. For a tire tread must resist the mauling of rough and stony roads—the grind of macadam and brick.

When the toughest, most gristly rubber that could possibly be made for Diamond Treads was made, it just naturally CAME BLACK! Black it will be always unless a tougher rubber is discovered.

But the sides of Diamonds are made red purposely—because Diamond Red Rubber admirably resists side wear, and those red sides make Diamonds distinctively beautiful.

Watch those red-walled Diamonds—they're rolling up 5,000 to 8,000 miles for our customers as often as any other tires, and they COST YOU LESS than most other tires.

TILDEN ADVANCES TO SEMI-FINALS

Philadelphia Tennis Star Disposes of Iler and Bry in Harlem Club Tourney.

KUMAGAE AGAIN VICTOR

Fox Defeats Sommer in Longest Struggle of Day—Doubles Begin Today with 23 Teams Competing.

William T. Tilden, Jr., of Philadelphia jumped into the limelight yesterday afternoon in the open tournament of the Harlem Tennis Club, and his name is the first to be placed in a semi-final bracket. Like Kumagae on the preceding day, Tilden came through two matches successfully, but in the first of these young Alex Iler of the United States Navy gave him a real battle, losing the second set by the close score of 9—7, after dropping the opener at 6—2. Tilden's second victim was Chairman Louis Bry of the Tournament Committee, who worked hard to make a good showing, but had to be satisfied with a total of three games in two sets.

Tilden's lame knee did not visibly affect his playing until late in the second set of his contest with Iler. At the start he was full of speed and confidence, while the naval Ensign had difficulty in getting his strokes under control. With one set down, however, Iler steadied, and for a time had all the better of the argument. Breaking through Tilden's versatile service, he quickly ran into a lead of 4—2, and, although the Philadelphian succeeded in squaring the set again at 4—all, Iler continued to win the odd game on his own fast delivery, up to 7—6, being once within a point of the set. Tilden was clearly in distress at this stage, but kept on trying all the shots in his big répertoire, giving his opponent no respite with the brilliant variety of his play. At the very limit of his endurance he managed once more to break through Iler's service, and then squeezed out the necessary points for the set and match, mixing volleys, drives, and chops in impressive fashion.

Hunter's Match Postponed.

Aside from this struggle there was little to arouse the enthusiasm of the gallery in yesterday's play at the Harlem Club. There was disappointment at the inability of Lieutenant Frank T. Hunter to appear against Allen Behr, and this delay may result in some congestion of the draw today, as it is planned to reach the final round by tomorrow afternoon. The winner of the Behr-Hunter match will face Ingo Hartman, who won another easy victory yesterday, defeating S. Brubans in straight sets, 6—3 6—0. The New York Tennis Club lefthander seems to be at the top of his game this week, and his steadiness and accuracy were again in evidence as he progressed to the fifth round of the singles.

Ichiya Kumagae was even less extended in his match against H. Schwartz, who had come through as the result of defaults by Pope and Von Bernuth. The loser was fortunate to secure a single game in the opening set, as the Japanese southpaw showed little mercy in uncovering his entire battery of long-distance shots.

Although the scores do not show it, the longest and hardest fought match of the day resulted from the fourth-round meeting of J. W. Fox and R. J. Sommer, both members of the Harlem Club. Fox won in straight sets, 6—4, 6—3, but every point was desperately contested, and the rallies were exhaustingly long. Both men are exceedingly steady and tireless court coverers, Fox's only advantage lying in a superior ability to half-volley from the service line, with consequent opportunities to finish the points close up to the net. Sommer had a little the worse of the breaks in the first set, but hung on grimly, and was always dangerous.

Doubles Begin Today.

The doubles event begins today, with twenty-three teams, drawn as follows:

Upper Byes.—E. Bry and L. Bry, Desnoes and Schmidt, Iler and partner, Ronaldson and partner.

First Round.—Brubans and partner vs. G. Groesbeck and O. Wagner, W. H. Pritchard and Jerry Lange vs. George Walker, Jr., and Kenneth Stern, H. B. O'Boyle and Augustin Healy vs. W. T. Tilden, Jr., and Vincent Richards, J. W. Fox and partner vs. G. Rodgers and H. Brunie, J. H. Steinkampf and Allen Behr vs. Hardfin and Stanley, Henry Bassford and partner vs. Dr. William Rosenbaum and partner; B. Landau and partner vs. Ralph Gatcomb and partner.

Lower Byes.—Ichiya Kumagae and Harold Taylor, Randall and Randall, Ingo Hartman and Wylie C. Grant, Lefkowitz and partner, F. T. Hunter and Harold Throckmorton.

Yesterday's summary follows:

Harlem Club Open Singles.—Third Round—H. Schwartz defeated A. F. von Bernuth by default.

Fourth Round.—J. W. Fox defeated R. J. Sommer, 6—4, 6—3; Ichiya Kumagae defeated H. Schwartz, 6—1, 6—0; Ingo Hartman defeated S. Brubans, 6—3, 6—0; William T. Tilden, Jr., defeated Alex Iler, 6—2, 9—7.

Fifth Round.—William T. Tilden, Jr., defeated Louis Bry, 6—2, 6—1.

C. C. N. Y. WINS AT TENNIS.

Defeats Stevens Players by 4 Matches to 2.

PENN THRASHES HAVERFORD

Pseudo Quakers Beat Real Ones by a Tally of 18 to 0.

PHILADELPHIA, May 14.—Penn, 19, Haverford 2, indicates how the big Quakers spanked the little Quakers on Franklin Field this afternoon. The Red and Blue sluggers took kindly to the offerings of Busby, the Garnet moundsman, and piled up sixteen hits.

Three years ago Busby, who pitched for Haverford today, held Penn scoreless.

The Rutgers tennis team defeated New York University yesterday on the university courts by five matches to one. All four singles were taken by Rutgers.

CHICAGO BLANKS RED SOX.

Cicotte Holds Champions to Four Hits for 1 to 0 Victory.

CHICAGO, May 14.—Jackson's two-base hit, coupled with a fumble by Barry in the sixth inning today gave Chicago the first game in the series with Boston, 1 to 0. It was a battle between pitchers Cicotte and Mays. Cicotte staved off defeat in the first half of the sixth when a hit and two errors put runners on second and third with none out. He disposed of Mays, Hooper and Barry on short flies. Cicotte struck out Ruth twice in four times up.

FORDHAM REMOVES PELT FROM TIGERS

Princeton Batters Swing Vainly at McNamara's Offerings and Lose by 7 to 1.

Special to The New York Times.

PRINCETON, N. J., May 14.—Fordham defeated Princeton here this afternoon by 7 to 1. The game was a pitchers' battle between McNamara and Margotts, the Tiger hurler, until the ninth inning, when Margotts weakened after errors had placed two Fordham runners on base and yielded three walks and two hits, one a triple by Frisch.

Fordham opened the scoring in the first inning, when three infield hits scored Keogh, after McLoughlan had been caught off second.

McNamara had the Tiger batters at his mercy throughout the game, but Princeton managed to squeeze a run across in the seventh, when Trimble was hit by a pitched ball, advanced on a sacrifice, and scored when Sweetland made a bad throw on Frisch's bunt.

The Tigers garnered just three hits off McNamara's delivery and the whole Fordham team played fast, clean baseball.

COLLEGE GOLFERS IN MEET.

Ball of Wisconsin Takes First Net Prize with 152.

More than one hundred college graduates took part in the semi-annual golf tournament of the University Club, held over the two courses, Nassau and Piping Rock, yesterday. The first net prize was won by W. L. Ball, University of Wisconsin, 192, 40—152. J. C. Greenleaf, Yale, had second net, 197, 40—157, and S. Girard, Yale, third, 185, 28—157. Greenleaf won on the toss.

The best gross of the day was made by S. C. Mabon, Rutgers, who returned 168 for the double round, playing from scratch. He had 83 in the morning at Nassau and 85 at Piping Rock. Percy Pyne 2d of Princeton had the second gross, 173.

There were two afternoon net prizes, one for each course. A. C. Rearick, Knox, won at Nassau with a card of 92, 14—78, while J. D. Voorheis of Princeton showed the way at Piping Rock. He had 104, 22—82.

HARVARD NINE TAKES BRACE

Williams is Soundly Trounced for First Time This Year.

Special to The New York Times.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., May 14.—After losing eight of its first ten games this season the Harvard ball nine came back in its annual game against Williams today, beating the heretofore undefeated sons of the Berkshires 11 to 4. The visitors made twelve hits against the two Cambridge pitchers, Bullard and Hardell, but the safe slams were scattered through seven innings, and eight of them had no effet on the scoring.

Harvard played a strong game on the defense, but the Williams infield was up in the air most of the time. Harvard settled the issue in the fourth, when four runners made the rounds on as many Williams errors and without even one base hit being turned in by the Crimson batters. McLean pitched well, and the loss of the game was due entirely to his poor support.

At the finish Harvard got its batting eye again, registering three hits, and with five stolen bases getting a second cluster of four runs.

YALE IS EASY FOR BROWN.

Providence Collegians Outbat and Outfield the Blue Nine.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., May 14.—Yale's ragged fielding today was a valuable asset for the Brown nine, which won the game by a score of 5 to 1. Crotty contributed four errors and Faherty misjudged two flies in right field, costing several runs.

Brown's exhibition of baseball was gilt-edged, the airtight pitching of Knight, the hair-raising catches of Porter and Hall, and the dazzling stops of Nelson being features. Except for a muffed thrown ball by Weeks in the ninth, Brown's fielding was errorless.

Robinson pitched effectively for the Elis; Sawyer killed two apparently safe hits, and Captain Russell Boyd threw out two men at the plate and aided in a double play at third.

WANDERERS BEATEN BY WHIPS AT POLO

Whippany Quartet Defeats Camden Riders in the First Game of Outdoor Season.

The outdoor polo season in the North was ushered in yesterday at the Whippany River Polo Club, Morristown, N. J., where the Whippany Whips trounced the Camden Wanderers in a keenly contested game by a score of 6¾ goals to 3. The contest was played in eight periods and furnished thrilling competition to a large crowd.

An improved offensive in the closing periods gave the Whippany Whips the victory. The Camden quartet, playing well together, scored the first goal in the opening period. Robert Grannis also scored for the Whippany Reds, but was penalized one-quarter point for a safety, and the whistle found the Wanderers in front by 1 to ¾. This margin was increased through brilliant and effective playing up to the fifth period, when the Camden quartet enjoyed a lead of 4 goals to ¾, George Sherman and S. C. Lee showing the way in the attack for the leaders.

At this stage, however, the Whippany Reds' play steadied and increased in snap. The quartet began a concerted attack which swept aside the opposition.

The lineup:

WHIPPANY W., (6¾.)	CAMDEN W., (3.)
No. 1—J. B. Richards.	No. 1—H. Crossman.
No. 2—L. Ross.	No. 2—G. C. Sherman.
No. 3—A. Nother.	No. 3—J. Metcalf.
Back—R. Grannis.	Back—S. C. Lee.

Goals—Richards, (2,) Ross, (2,) Nother, (2,) Grannis, Sherman, (2,) Metcalf, (2.) Goals earned—Whippany Whips, 7; Camden Wanderers, 4. Penalties—Grannis for safety; Lee for two fouls. Timekeeper—G. Maynard. Referee and scorer—H. East. Time of periods—Eight of seven and one-half minutes each.

STEVENS NINE BEATS N. Y. U.

Carson Proves an Enigma to Opponents and Violet Loses by 8 to 2.

Stevens Institute's baseball team triumphed over the strong New York University nine yesterday at Castle Point by the score of 8 to 2. Carson, the Tech hurler, was at his best and held the Violet batters to three safe hits, while his teammates collected eight bingles off Delaney and Sulzer, the Violet moundsmen.

N. Y. U. was wobbly in the field, being guilty of six miscues. Donnelly, covering the left garden for the Castle Pointers, played a spectacular game. He made two hits, and pilfered four sacks besides playing his field without a slip.

New York University drew first blood, garnering a run in the second inning. Willentz walked, stole second, and reached third on Barker's sacrifice grounder. Willentz registered when Roth made a pretty catch of Dailey's sacrifice fly to deep centre.

Stevens promptly retaliated in the same inning. After Carlson's demise at first on a weak infield tap, Drew reached the initial sack on an error by Kram at short. Daly hit past third safely. Donnelly hit to Delaney who threw out Daly at second. Quinn walked, choking the corners. Delaney was unable to locate the plate and Ferrari was passed to first, forcing Drew home.

STANDARD EIGHT
A Powerful Car

More power per pound of weight than any other eight-cylinder car made. That is the Standard Eight.

—And power is what every driver wants.

It is a wonderful satisfaction to approach a steep hill with the confidence that you can make it without a gear shift.

Even on the hills where other cars falter and knock and go slower and slower, the Standard Eight goes faster and faster as you depress the throttle.

Power means automobile satisfaction, and the Standard Eight has power that can only be appreciated by seeing it operate.

We invite you to sit at the wheel and put your foot on the throttle.

REPORT BIG SALES OF WAR SUPPLIES

Total Last Week $110,000,000 at 88 Per Cent. of the Purchase Price.

Subsistence Sales $50,000,000—Czechoslovakia, Rumania, and Poland Get Bacon Stores.

WASHINGTON, May 14.—Surplus war materials to the value of $110,000,000 were sold by the War Department during the week ended May 9. The Ordnance Department disposed of large quantities of ammonium nitrate to the Department of Agriculture and the Allied Nitrate Commission for conversion into dynamite, which will be used largely in clearing land for agricultural purposes and in the construction of roads. In announcing the week's sales, the department said the average price received on all sales represented 88 per cent. of the original cost of the materials to the Government.

Sales of surplus subsistence supplies held by the army overseas have totaled $50,000,000, the War Department announced, the American Relief Commission taking goods valued at $10,000,000, the Czechoslovak Government $16,000,000, Rumania $14,000,000, and Poland $10,000,000. The sales include 22,000,000 pounds of bacon to the three Governments named.

Announcement was made that the department would sell by July 1 all the horses and mules now with the army in France and that negotiations were under way for the sale of oil and gasoline storage tanks and distributing stations, with the railroad tank cars and tank trucks used by the A. E. F. in France.

CALLS FOR REVOLUTION.

"Nation" Denounces Peace Treaty, Scores Wilson, Sees Chaos Coming.

In an editorial on "The Madness at Versailles," appearing in this week's issue of The Nation, edited by Oswald Garrison Villard, the peace terms imposed on Germany are termed "a peace of undisguised vengeance," a "peace which openly flouts some of the plainest dictates of reason and humanity, repudiates every generous word that Mr. Wilson has ever uttered regarding Germany, flies in the face of accepted principles of law and economics, and makes the very name of democracy a reproach."

"In the whole history of diplomacy there is no treaty more properly to be regarded as an international crime than the amazing document which the German representatives are now asked to sign," the editorial continued. "President Wilson, the editorial said, "stands today discredited and condemned. His rhetriocal phrases, torn and faded tinsel of a thought which men now doubt if he himself ever really believed, will never again fall with hypnotic charm upon the ears of eager multitudes. The camouflage of ethical precept and political philosophizing which for long blinded the eyes of all but the most observing has been stripped away, and the peoples of the world see revealed, not a friend faithful to the last, but an arrogant autocrat and a compromising politician."

In the concluding paragraph the editorial says that all that has gone before, the overthrow of the Czar, the constitutional struggle in Germany, and the establishment of a Soviet Government in Hungary "are only the preliminaries of the great revolution to whose support the friends of freedom must now rally everywhere."

ACCUSE EX-NOTE TELLER.

Former Employe of Trust Company Charged with Grand Larceny.

Irving Weiner, 28 years old, of 1,622 Fortieth Street, Brooklyn, was arraigned before Judge Humphrey in the Queens County Court yesterday on an indictment found by the Queens Grand Jury charging him with grand larceny in the first degree. He was the note teller and general bookkeeper at the Long Island City Branch of the Irving Trust Company at the Queensboro Bridge Plaza. The specific charge in the indictment was that he appropriated to his own use $288.12 of the funds of the institution. He pleaded not guilty to the charge and was held in $5,000 bail, and in default of bail went to jail.

According to the statement of District Attorney O'Leary, the peculations of Weiner amounted to $4,700, and the money was taken in connection with the payment for Liberty bonds by patrons of the trust company. It was also said he lost the money betting on the races.

Weiner resigned from the trust company's forces and joined the Naval Reserves on June 7 last. It was after he left that an audit of his accounts revealed the discrepancies on which the charges are based. Weiner was arrested at the Bay Ridge recreation ship by Detective John Hurton.

FOR BOY SCOUTS CAMPAIGN.

Definite Plans Made for Drive in This City in June.

Definite plans were launched yesterday at a meeting at the Bankers' Club for the New York City campaign in the interests of the Boy Scouts of America, not the least of which was the election of William H. Edwards as Chairman of the Citizens' Committee, which is to consist of 100 New Yorkers who have always had the interests of this organization at heart. At a meeting to be held today at the Bankers' Club, detailed plans will be decided upon for active borough leadership, and every preparation made for the crowning week of the campaign, June 8 to June 14, which will be the week of activity given over to the boys themselves.

William G. McAdoo, Chairman of the Citizens' National Committee, was present at the luncheon and in a brief talk emphasized the importance of supporting a movement familiar to all citizens and supporting it with men and money. Health Commisisoner Copeland spoke of the splendid service given by the Boy Scouts in the course of his own work, and pledged his hearty co-operation. The others present also pledged their enthusiastic support in all the boroughs.

Among those who participated in the preliminary campaign organization were James E. West, National Chief Scout Executive; Job E. Hedges, R. A. C. Smith, Dock Commissioner Murray Hulbert, Bernard Gimbel, William G. Willcox, Martin Vogel, Assistant Secretary of the Treasury; Harry M. DeMott, C. G. M. Thomas, Guy Emerson, Medad M. Stone, Alrich H. Mann, Albert Behrend, Willis B. Gawtry, Norman S. Walker, Jr., and Irving Crane.

Sues the St. Regis for Stolen Gems.

The theft of jewelry belonging to Mrs. Harriet Pullman Carolan, one of the heirs of the George M. Pullman estate, from the Hotel St. Regis on Dec. 18 last, resulted in the filing of a suit against the hotel in the Supreme Court yesterday for $20,000. Mrs. Carolan stated that the jewelry stolen was worth $30,000, but that a $10,000 emerald and pearl pendant had been returned. She contends that the theft was due to negligence by the hotel management in permitting persons no guests of the hotel to enter the rooms. Mrs. Carolan's home is in San Francisco.

MRS. ROOSEVELT RETURNS.

She Went to France to Visit Grave of Her Son Quentin.

One of the civilian passengers who landed yesterday from the Italian liner Giuseppi Verdi, at Pier 95, North River, foot of West Fifty-sixth Street, was Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt, who was dressed in deep mourning and traveled alone with her maid. She was met at the pier by her sons, Lieut. Col. Theodore Roosevelt, Captain Kermit Roosevelt, and Captain Archie Roosevelt and Mrs. Alice Longworth, who were kept outside the barrier because the army regulations do not permit any one to go on the pier where a ship is landing troops except those on official business.

Mrs. Roosevelt visited the grave of her son, Lieutenant Quentin Roosevelt, near Verdun, and afterward went to her sister's villa, just outside Genoa. Mrs. Roosevelt went immediately to Oyster Bay.

Neighborhood Stores Growing.

One phase of commercial development here that has been more or less overlooked in the rush of war work is the development of the so-called neighborhood stores. Not only have many of these institutions taken leaves from the books of the larger stores, so far as buying methods are concerned, but they have also gone in for more advanced methods of display, accounting, training of salespeople, &c. The result has been that not a few of them are duplicating on a smaller scale the success of the big stores in the acknowledged shopping centres of the city. So marked has been the growth of one of these neighborhood stores that it recently took on as a department manager a man who for several years held a similar position with one of the leading Fifth Avenue stores.

Scarcity Is the Keynote.

If there is any word that is being worked to the fullest extent in connection with the jewelry and kindred trades at the present time it is, "scarcity." Practically everything is scarce but orders, which are more plentiful than for a long time, if not ever before. Not only are stocks low in all hands and materials hard to get, but the manufacturers are also having their troubles in obtaining sufficient skilled help to fill their orders. In the gem branch of the industry there is a marked demand for fine articles and a scarcity of them that is just as marked. The sharp decrease in receipts of cut and uncut diamonds that has been seen here in the last several months has been accompanied by a corresponding rise in prices, with "top" not yet in sight. Fine emeralds, rubies and pearls are also difficult to get, and the same is true of the semi-precious stones, especially aquamarines.

Drug Speculators Busy.

Many drug and chemical products are being bought up by speculators who have foreseen a possible shortage and are holding materials of a certain kind for higher prices. Drug and Chemical Markets will say today: Consumers are buying crude drugs in much larger lots than during the last few months. In dye bases, dyes and colors the prices are tending downward. A few products like Chinese egg albumen are firm, owing to the exceptionally strong demand and scarcity. Prices of heavier chemicals are firmer. There is a good demand for acetic acid of high test, and the price is higher.

Offers an Unusual Ornament.

A local manufacturer who specializes in hollow fruit and similar novelties has just brought out a serviceable and unusual pin in the form of a walnut. That is, the head is in the form of a walnut, and the imitation is so accurate that it can scarcely be told from a real nut. Next to its unusualness, the light weight of the pin is said to make it of special value as a millinery ornament. It may be had in practically all colors to match the ribbons and other ornaments that are generally used with a trimming of this kind.

Garment Retailers to Protest.

From 75 to 100 members of the National Garment Retailers' Association, representing important retail interests in all parts of the country, will confer today at a luncheon meeting to be held at the Waldorf-Astoria at 1 P. M. on the best way of counducting a campaign for the repeal of the so-called luxury tax law. Telegrams of invitation to the luncheon were sent to members of the association by Franklin Simon, who is its President. The plan of campaign decided on, it is the intention of the association to begin a vigorous fight on the measure at once, in order that the movement in Congress to repeal it is not shelved in the press of business which will come up before the special session.

Gray Goods Prices Rising.

Trading was again active in the local gray goods market yesterday, especially in printcloths, and many constructions closed today at advances over the opening quotations. These sales of printcloths for delivery into the Fall months were made by first hands: Thirty-nine-inch 72-76s, 15⅝ cents; 39-inch 68-72s, 14¼ cents; 38½-inch 64-60s, 12½ cents; 38½-inch 64-56s, 12 cents, and 38½-inch 60-48s, 10½ cents. Among the sheetings sales for similar deliveries were five-yard goods at 11¼ cents, 5.50s at 10¼ cents, and 37-inch four-yard, 48 squares at 13 cents. Business was done at 15¼ cents on 37-inch 3.95-yard drills. Fine-yarn goods and clothing specialties also were active and strong as to price.

"Tams" Are Coming Back.

"Tams" are on their way back to favor, according to the bulletin of the Retail Millinery Association of America. They are being shown here in taffeta and moiré silk. Navy is the leading shade, and soutache, silk floss braiding, and silver thread embroidery are used extensively for decoration. Interwoven straw "tams" are being shown by some of the wholesalers, the bulletin says, but they are not as soft and attractive as the ones made of fabrics. Many of the new "tams" follow the lines of a baker's hat.

HORACE W. DAVIS, Receiver.

ACCUSES CARRANZA OF LOOTING BANK

Head of London and Mexico Institution Alleges Mexicans Took $20,000,000.

SEEKS COURT ORDER HERE

Asks That Bank of Montreal Be Restrained from Giving Up Deposits of $140,000.

The Bank of London and Mexico, in Mexico City, was looted of $20,000,000 in gold and silver coin and bullion by representatives of the Carranza régime, it was said yesterday in an action filed in the Supreme Court by William B. Mitchell, General Manager of the bank, who asked that the Bank of Montreal, in this city, be restrained from turning over to local Carranza representatives funds which the London and Mexico Bank has on deposit there.

Mitchell's story of how Carranza military chiefs forced him almost at the point of a gun to open the vaults of the bank in 1916 and then appropriated the $20,000,000 which the bank had on deposit at one of the Mexican banks of issue, was told at great length in accompanying affidavits. Mitchell asserted repeatedly that he was threatened with death before a firing squad of Carranza regulars unless he opened the vaults and allowed the Mexican Government to help itself.

Before September, 1916, according to the papers filed yesterday by Saul E. Rogers of 60 Broadway, as counsel for Mitchell, the Banco del Londres y México had in its vaults $6,000,000 in gold coin, $4,000,000 in silver dollars, $8,500,000 in gold and silver bars, and about $900,000 in small silver. Against this the bank was allowed to issue currency.

The bank had been operating for more than ten years under a charter granted in the Porfirio Diaz régime and continued as a bank of issue until Sept. 15, 1916, when Carranza issued a decree abolishing all bank charters. It is also alleged that this decree forbade banking institutions continuing their functions and at the same time announced that they should liquidate. This was impossible, as their privileges as banking institutions had been removed by the order, Mitchell said, so he with other officials of his bank decided to await developments.

Seven days later a so-called Board of Sequestration appointed by Carranza called at the bank and announced that they had come to take charge of the institution. Mitchell said that he asked the members of the board what their authority was, and that they replied that their action was based on the banking laws.

Then the General Manager of the London and Mexico Bank drew the attention of the Mexicans to the fact that Carranza had abrogated those laws himself, and that before they would surrender control of the bank and its deposits they should have a hearing. At this point Mitchell alleges that the Board of Sequestration admitted that they had come to take charge at the request of Carranza.

Mitchell and his fellow-workers, according to the affidavit, refused to give up the bank and were thrown into jail in Mexico City, where they were held for about ten days and threatened with death because they refused to open the vaults for the Mexicans. Finally, according to Mitchell's story, the Mexicans came to the prison and threatened to shoot him unless he signed a minute which showed that he had accepted a position on the Board of Sequestration and approved the action taken by that body.

To save himself the manager said he signed such a document and was freed, whereupon he wrote to the Minister of Finance and others relating the facts and repudiating his signature. He was again thrown into prison, he said, and Carranza troops, armed to the teeth, took possession of the bank.

Again the Mexicans visited Mitchell in prison and threatened him with immediate death unless he opened the vaults of the bank, he said. He finally agreed to unlock them if the Mexicans would have their accredited Minister of Finance and other officials on hand to taken an inventory of their contents, continued the affidavit, and this was readily promised. A short time later the vaults were unlocked.

As soon as this was done the Mexicans took charge and insisted that the vaults remain unlocked under an armed guard, he said. Mitchell asserted that he remonstrated and relocked the vaults. He promised to open them whenever the board required it.

On Sept. 27, 1916, the complainant asserts that the Mexicans took about $1,500,000 in bullion from the bank for coinage purposes, which they agreed to return as soon as it was coined. He asserts that of this amount some $200,000 was sent back. From time to time he alleges that Mexican Government representatives took different amounts from the vaults until there was nothing left. These funds, it is alleged, were used by the Carranza régime.

When this bank of issue was completely stripped, along with similar institutions in Mexico, and the money obtained was spent, Mitchell asserts that Carranza learned that the London and Mexico had $140,000 on deposit here with the Bank of Montreal. This he is alleged to have ordered Alfredo Caturegli, his New York financial agent, who has offices at 120 Broadway, to obtain. It is to restrain Caturegli from prosecuting an action to get these funds that Mitchell's suit was filed. In bringing suit, Mitchell mentions Caturegli and the bank as defendants. His claims aggregate $37,000 for himself and other creditors.

FOOD SHIPS STOP JUNE 30.

Government Sees Need Ending with Start of Harvest Abroad.

Edgar Rickard, Joint Director of the American Relief Administration, announced yesterday at the offices of the organization at 115 Broadway that the exportation of food by the Government organization for relief purposes would come to and end on June 30. The last A. R. A. foodship will sail on that date.

"Ships leaving after June 30 would arrive after the European harvest has begun," he said, "and would not be required by any emergency then existing. We do not expect that all of Europe and the Near East will be able to raise sufficient crops for their own populations, but they will have enough to last them through the Winter, and by that time they are expected to be able to supply themselves from the food markets without further direct relief.

"The destruction of farm animals, the evacuation of the peasants from regions under German occupation or forming part of the war theatre, the lack of fertilizer and, in some cases, the eating of seed corn to prevent starvation, has reduced the outlook for crops in 1919. This is true particularly in Poland, but other countries in Central Europe and the Near East are in about the same condition. It will not be until 1920 that these countries are all self-supporting, but they will probably be able to take care of themselves by obtaining food commercially after this year.

"One of the most remarkable phases of American activity of the present day in Europe is the way children who have suffered all through the war from malnutrition are being restored to health. In some parts of Rumania and Poland the men of the American Relief Administration found that many children were born weighing slightly over four pounds. In other places the children were too weak from lack of food to go to the soup kitchens which had been provided for them. They were only able to sit weakly on the street curbings and beg for help. During the month of April the child-feeding work of the Administration has been generally distributed over the liberated countries of Europe."

TO PROTECT FIFTH AVENUE.

Plans to Restrict Apartment Construction to be Discussed.

Following the regular monthly meeting of the Board of Directors of the Fifth Avenue Association, held yesterday in the Waldorf-Astoria, it was announced that a luncheon would be held on Tuesday to formulate plans for the protection of Fifth Avenue near the Park. Plans will be made for consolidating public opinion in support of a bill to prohibit the construction of buildings higher than seventy-five feet.

The object of the movement, as explained yesterday, is to prevent further building of apartment houses in the avenue between Fifty-ninth and Ninety-ninth Streets. The association officials said they wished to educate the people to the necessity of having at least one street where all buildings would be in harmony and where the highest type of architecture would be the rule.

Among the organizations to be represented at the luncheon are the New York City Federation of Women's Clubs, the City History Club, and delegations from the Broadway Association, Municipal Arts Society, Harlem Board of Trade, Metropolitan Museum of Art, Thirty-fourth Street Board of Trade, and the Central Merchants' Association. Gage E. Tarbell will preside.

CHARGES DISCRIMINATION.

Truck Owners' League Wants Labor Bodies Restrained.

Supreme Court Justice Van Siclen, in Brooklyn, was asked yesterday by P. Reardon, Inc., a Manhattan trucking concern, and the Truck Owners' League, to make permanent a temporary injunction restraining the Transportation Trades Council and affiliated labor unions from discriminating, as was alleged, against the Reardon concern because it was maintaining the "open shop" principle in the conduct of its business.

Lawyer Paul Bonynge, for the plaintiffs, argued that the alleged discrimination, participated in by common carriers, steamship lines and other agencies, was an "illegal boycott." By practically closing piers and ships to the plaintiff concern for the delivery or reception of merchandise, Mr. Bonynge said, the defendants were seriously interfering with its transfer business. After hearing argument on both sides, Justice Van Siclen reserved decision.

Dress Manufacturers to Meet.

Plans are now under way for a convention of all the dress manufacturers of the country in this city this Fall. They are being formulated by Executive Director David N. Mosessohn of the Associated Dress Industries of America with a view to solving many of the problems that have confronted the manufacturers for the last twenty years or more. According to Mr. Mosessohn, it is the aim of the association, and also of the proposed convention, to show every manufacturer of dresses in the country just what can be done to increase his business both in the home and export fields. The membership campaign of the association, which was suspended during the Victory Loan drive, has been resumed.

GOMPERS AT A. F. L. MEETING

Labor Leader Has Almost Recovered from Recent Injuries.

Samuel Gompers, President of the American Federation of Labor, presided for a short time yesterday at a meeting of the Executive Council of that body held in the Continental Hotel, Broadway at Forty-first Street. He has nearly recovered from the injuries suffered when a taxicab in which he was riding was in collision with another vehicle some weeks ago.

The meeting was held to make arrangements for the annual convention of the federation in Atlantic City in June. The council also received a delegation from the machinists' and hatters' unions.

BUSINESS RECORDS

In Town.

PORT MORRIS CHEMICAL WORKS, INC. —A petition in bankruptcy has been filed against the Port Morris Chemical Works, Inc., manufacturer of chemicals at 141st Street and Locust Avenue, by these creditors: Charles A. Rogers, $906 for insurance premiums; Jacob Lawson Bag Company, $27 for merchandise, and Bronx Builders Machine Company, $105. It was alleged that the company admitted inability to pay its debts. Judge Mayer appointed George C. Austin receiver; bond, $3,000. It was stated that the assets were about $20,000. The business has been shut down for some time, and the New York Central Railroad Company, the landlord, has served notice of the termination of the lease. There is also a judgment against the company in favor of the Durex Chemical Corporation for $13,834. The company was organized in October, 1915, with a capital stock of $2,500,000, and had a pyrites mine at Nicholsville, Ky., and turned out an average of 100 tons of sulphide a week.

PHILIP MUNTER COMPANY.—A petition in bankruptcy has been filed against the Philip Munter Company, manufacturer of toilet preparations and cosmetics at 54 East Ninth Street, by these creditors: Chelsea Press, $60; Monarch Specialty Manufacturing Company, $73, and E. & J. S. Harris, Inc., $30. Judge Mayer appointed Henry C. Quinby receiver. Liabilities are $26,000 and assets $7,500.

STOVEMAKERS IN SESSION.

National Association Holds Its 48th Annual Convention.

Members of the National Association of Stove Manufacturers met at the Hotel Astor yesterday morning for their forty-eighth annual trade convention. The President, Frederick Will of Rochester, called the session to order and made his annual report. He also submitted the report of the War Service Committee of twelve members, of which he was Chairman. It showed the activities of the organization in bond purchases and other ways.

At the afternoon session there were addresses by John Walsh, ex-counsel of the Federal Trade Commission, Allen Walker and H. E. Arens. The convention will end today.

Jewelers Making Surgical Goods.

Owing to their facilities for turning out fine work, jewelry manufacturers were called upon during the war to produce surgical and dental instruments. At present, the concerns that introduced these lines are continuing to turn out such articles for the benefit of the trade. Their product in these new branches, it is said, will bear most favorable comparison with similar instruments that were formerly brought from the European market, and the resultant business has been very satisfactory from a profit standpoint.

Advantage of American Buckles.

The shutting off of imports of steel shoe buckles during the war required the manufacture of these goods in this country. In the pre-war period, the bulk of these articles were bought in Europe. Now the domestic manufacturers are getting the greater part of the business, for the reason that the home made buckle is rustless, which is a decided advantage over the imported kind. While the plain steel buckle in a variety of designs is the most popular style, shoe buckles with white stones have also proved good sellers.

FINANCIAL MARKETS

Steel and Railroad Stocks Lead in Largest Business of the Year—Call Money Up.

The stock market boiled throughout yesterday's session with speculative interest on the buying side extending into the steel and railroad issues on a scale not seen before this year. The product of the newly developed demand for these stocks together with very heavy realizing sales among shares which had lately risen rapidly was the largest turnover since early in 1917. Speculative exuberance doubtless played the major part in lifting steel shares from 1 to more than 3 points, but there was reason to believe that actual business events and promises were influences of considerable importance. The steel trade periodicals noted that a better feeling had been in evidence since the Industrial Board's stabilization plan was dropped and new buying, according to information in steel producing circles, has appeared in moderate volume in the last few days. The market for steel products is still so sluggish, however, that more dependence is placed upon prospects for the moment than upon actualities for the support of sentiment in the industry. The Administration's action in removing some of the restrictions from shipbuilding received considerable attention, being looked upon as an occurrence initial to the receipt of large private orders from abroad for ships. It is known that the Norwegian countries and various other neutral nations, as well as some of the belligerent countries, have had inquiries in the American shipbuilding market for several months.

Yesterday's dealings in stocks aroused further expressions of caution from brokers and bankers, whose warnings about the dangers of excessive speculation are none the less sincere because they have had only temporary results so far this month in checking purchasers. In some respects the market has of late been running parallel to the tremendous days of 1916, with the exception that the occasional sharp and general reactions of the war boom have been lacking. The absence of such setbacks is one factor that promotes the reiteration of conservative suggestions, because many brokers fear that the appearance of unfavorable news might produce a decline all the more drastic because it had not been eased by a series of lesser reactions. So far it seems that the underlying structure of the speculative account has been kept sound by the switching of interest from one group of stocks to another. Partisans of the continuation of the rise felt their position was strengthened yesterday by the localization of the most extensive buying in steel and railroad shares of seasoned experience in the market. While the Street has believed that money rates would grow easier shortly after the Victory Loan was subscribed, the action of call money yesterday and the day before worked to alter some preconceived ideas. This particularly in respect to the time when rates might be expected to move lower. The prevailing rate yesterday was 6 per cent. and the firmness of the market tone was displayed in the afternoon, when a late demand shot the quotation to 7½ per cent. The Government withdrew a round amount of deposits from the banks and this presumably had effect on the call market. The immediate outlook for demand funds is made rather uncertain because of current stock market operations and the initial payment of 10 per cent. on part of the Victory Loan subscriptions next week.

In banking quarters predictions were heard that French exchange would continue to move further against Paris during the period before the peace treaty was completed. Quotations declined yesterday to a new low record, Paris cables selling as low as 6.32, compared with 6.22½ on Tuesday. It is expected that large credits will be arranged for France, but it seems as though the method for securing them depends primarily upon the terms arrived at in the Peace Conference. Sterling also declined 1¾ cents to the pound, and lire were weak. The decline of Italian cable rate carried the quotation to 7.82.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

Nearly 2,000,000 Shares.

Trading on the Stock Exchange yesterday amounted to 1,871,303 shares, the heaviest that has been recorded since Feb. 1, 1917, when the turnover was 1,964,753 shares. While in number of stocks sold the market was not as broad as some of recent days, the activity was much better diversified than at any time this year. The average price of twenty-five representative rails was up 1.04, a gain such as has not been recorded in many a day. The rise in the case of twenty-five industrials was 1.28, and for rails and industrials combined there was an advance of 1.16.

Words of Caution.

For some time brokers have been advising caution, but thus far the market has failed to live up to the predictions of an impending fall. As a matter of fact there are now many who begin to doubt the wisdom of their own forecasts. One of the chief factors in the arguments for greater caution was the unbalanced condition of the market. Until a few days ago the leaders were the oil shares, but since the reaction of last Saturday the oils have been less in prominence and the old-line issues have begun to claim attention. This was especially true yesterday when the rails were taken up, the leading stocks making substantial advances.

Steel Stocks in Demand.

Not in a long time has there been such interest displayed in the steel stocks. The action of United States Steel was typical, this issue moving forward steadily throughout the day for a gain of more than 2 points. There is a saying that Steel moves more easily when above par than when below and the market action yesterday, at least, bore this out. Gulf States Steel acted in a way that was reminiscent of 1916, when it sold as high as 193. The advance was more than 11 points. Republic, Bethlehem, and Lackawanna also made big gains.

Steel Rail Orders.

Bids from eight steel companies, it is reported, have been received for the order of 200,000 tons of rails which the Railroad Administration is to place in the near future. The bids, it is expected, will be opened Monday. One steel manufacturer said yesterday that it would probably be found that the Steel Corporation had named a price of $45 and $47 a ton for the Bessemer and open hearth, respectively, and that the bids of independent companies were substantially higher.

Accumulating the Rails.

The response of the shares in the railroad group to the increased buying orders in yesterday's market bears out, to a considerable extent, the contention of traders in recent days that there has been a steady accumulation of the standard issues. Advances ranging from 1 to 3 points were made by a large number of the railroad stocks, with no preference being evident for the shares of the creditor roads over some of the lower-priced issues. The change in sentiment was attributed to the general belief that the incoming Congress will reline the Railroad Administration's purse and that remedial legislation will be framed for a return of the carriers to private operation without waste of time.

Tractions Advance.

Third Avenue led the traction shares in a general advance yesterday with a gain of 1½ points, while Interborough preferred was a close second with a net gain of 1 point. The common was fractionally higher and B. R. T. moved up. Manhattan Railway, which gained more than 3 points on Tuesday, caused off fractionally on a very small turnover. Traction bonds were also firm. The movement is attributed to an indicated improvement in local sentiment toward the tractions.

Saving Time.

After a succession of million-share days the stock ticker announced yesterday another change in the abbreviations which designate the stocks dealt in on the New York Stock Exchange when it stated that the new abbreviation for Atlantic, Gulf & West Indies will be "AG" instead of the customary "AGW." Recently the abbreviation for Reading was changed to "R" from "Rg." It was suggested in the financial district that the shaving down of these abbreviations has been done to save time so that the stock ticker may keep more even with trading on the floor of the Exchange in these busy days.

City Financing.

In well informed bond circles it is said that the City of New York is not expected to make the usual Spring offering of corporate stock, but is likely to stick to short term finance until the bond market settles down and rates become more favorable to the borrower. The city is not making much noise about its finances, but last month it disposed of some $32,000,000 of shorttime warrants and other securities and appears quite well satisfied to go ahead in this way. Bond men say the city has paid all the way from 4 to 4¾ per cent. for the accommodation with the average probably around 4½ per cent.

Buying Bonds.

Evidences of "institutional buying" are said to obtain in the bond market, where an improving tendency is noted and an increasing demand appears to be building up. Yesterday a Middle Western savings bank took a fairly good sized block of Third Liberties and another Western bank bought upward of $500,000 of private bonds. Municipals are said to be in good demand, and it is reported that institutions in many parts of the country are well supplied with funds and are making inquiries for high-class investments. As for the supply, bankers believe there shortly will be a lot of new issues brought out which will prove very attractive.

French Exchange Demoralized.

French exchange broke to a new low record yesterday, far under the previous low record. At the extreme low, checks on Paris were quoted at 6.36, against the "pegged" price of 5.45 which obtained when the French Government was supporting the market. This latest drop takes the franc down to a depreciation of 18½ per cent., against only a little more than a 5 per cent. depreciation in the pegged rate and a discount of 14½ per cent. in April, 1916, the lowest for the war period until now. It was said by officials that no new development to account for yesterday's break had occurred, and that the trouble with francs was cumulative; which is to say, the market is suffering because of the withdrawal of support and the uncertainty surrounding peace negotiations and the general future of international finance. Until the peace treaty is signed and all concerned know exactly where they stand, it is believed French exchange will continue weak.

Call Money at 7½ Per Cent.

After maintaining an even tenor at 6 per cent. throughout almost the entire trading session, call money yesterday at about 2:40 o'clock suddenly went to 7½ per cent. and the stock market shivered momentarily. In explanation, bankers said that the Government had been withdrawing funds from local banks—rumor had it that about $60,000,000 was taken out of local institutions—and pointed to the Federal Reserve Bank's credit balance of $58,180,197 at the Clearing House as substantiation.

Curb Commission Rates.

Following the advance in commission rates on the New York Stock Exchange, the Curb Market Association has marked up its rates, too. The new schedule calls for a minimum charge of 2 per cent. on the amount of the transaction for shares selling at one dollar or less; $4 per 100 shares on stocks selling at more than $1 and less than $3 a share; $5.50 per 100 up to $5 a share; $7.50 per 100 up to 10 a share; $15 per 100 up to $125 a share, and $20 per 100 above that figure.

RAILROAD HEADS TO DISCUSS EQUIPMENT

Executives' Meeting Friday May Also Consider the Maintenance Situation.

SEE NEED FOR ACTION

Some Association Members Are Dissatisfied with Upkeep of Roads Under Federal Control.

Thomas DeWitt Cuyler, Chairman of the Association of Railway Executives, announced yesterday that there would be a meeting of the Standing Committee of the association on Friday morning in the New Haven Board Room in the Grand Central Terminal, and that there would be a meeting of member roads of the association in the same place in the afternoon of that day for the transaction of general business.

While it is admitted in some railroad quarters that the meeting has been called to consider the policy of the association in regard to its stand in the present equipment situation, it was learned yesterday that the question of deferred maintenance may be brought up by those member roads which are dissatisfied with the manner in which their properties have been kept up during the period of Federal control.

It is acknowledged both by railroad operators and bankers, and by Railroad Administration officials as well, that deferred maintenance is one of the most pressing of the problems within the railroads' problem itself, and it is understood that some of the corporate managers of railroad properties are dissatisfied with the progress made toward tie, rail, and ballast replacements since the signing of the armistice last November. During the war period the corporate managers were willing to sit back and see their replacement supplies dwindle to an alarming degree, in the belief that when the war was over ample provision would be made to build up their properties to a standard equaling that at which they were taken over by the President at the end of 1917.

Attention has been called to the fact that the season for open track work on the roads in the northern section of the country is a comparatively short one at best, and that unless the Railroad Administration does its buying soon it will be impossible to put enough work on roadbeds to bring them up to their condition of last year. At the same time it is pointed out that maintenance in 1918 fell way below that of 1917, the last year of private operation.

On the other hand there are corporate managers who are inclined to be more conservative in their attitude toward the Railroad Administration on the question. Some of these are managers of properties which enjoy comparatively open Winters, where roadbed replacements may be accomplished throughout the better part of the year, but there are also among them the corporate heads of several of the Northern roads. These men believe that the Railroad Administration has demonstrated its good faith in sticking for a lower price on steel rails. They also consider that when the Redfield committee failed to stabilize business as it had planned to do, the Railroad Administration again demonstrated its intentions by immediately asking for bids on steel rails.

$1,000,000 FOR CAMBRIDGE.

Pledged by Oil Companies to Educate British Chemists.

Copyright, 1919, by The New York Times Company.
Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, May 14.—It is officially announced that British oil companies have agreed to contribute 200,000 guineas ($1,000,000) for the endowment of a Chemical School at Cambridge University. The intention of the donors is that a new generation of British chemists shall be educated and trained for the great part which British industry is expected to play in the near future.

COTTON DOWN AGAIN.

Government Report Is Somewhat Better Than Expected.

If there had been more activity in yesterday's cotton market, the session might easily have produced a most interesting situation. As it was, with business on only a moderate scale, there was little opportunity to judge of the relative strength of the two factions which have been locking horns the last few days, and until one side or the other develops a real aggressiveness no accurate estimate of power can be arrived at.

The two factions are composed of local trade and local and Western speculative interests, on the one side, and the Southern trade and spot people on the other. The former are the bulls; the latter have been making it their business recently to sell on all the bulges. Yesterday the Southerners had rather the better of the argument.

At the outset the market was firm, with first prices unchanged up to 10, and in the first hour the market rose until the price level was advanced about 10 to 17 points over Tuesday's closing. Then the South started selling on a scale which, while not heavy, was, nevertheless, sufficient to force the market down. By midday prices were about where they had closed the previous day, and in the afternoon they declined 25 to 30 points and rallied less than 10 points on the average by 3 o'clock.

The weather report was mixed. Additional rains were reported over the Atlantic States, but the prediction was for clearing and warmer. The weekly report of the Government Bureau was somewhat better than expected, so that the ring found little inspiration either way in the weather exhibits.

The ginning report was more bullish than most people had looked for, with 475,753 bales passing through the mills in April, as against 433,720 bales in March, and 433,516 in February of this year, and 544,558 in April, 1918. The comparison with last year is not good, yet compared with recent months and considering the restrictions in New England and elsewhere last month, the display could hardly be considered as anything other than encouraging.

Spot sales here yesterday, totaling 4,500 bales, were the largest in some time. Receipts at Liverpool, which were reported at 18,000 bales, 16,000 of which were American, were also somewhat larger than ordinary.

Yesterday's quotations follow:

The local market for spot cotton was quiet, down 15 points to 29.35c for middling uplands; sales, 4,500 bales.

Southern spot markets were: Galveston, 29.50c; New Orleans, 28.13c; Savannah, 28c; Augusta, 27.75c; Memphis, 28.25c; Houston, 29c; Little Rock, 27.75c.

Yesterday's cotton statistics were:

Liverpool cables: Spot cotton was firm at 17.40d for middling. Sales, 8,000 bales, of which 6,000 were American. Imports, 18,000 bales, 16,000 American. Futures opened steady, 10 to 19 points up, and closed quiet but steady, 14 to 26 higher. Prices: May, 17.30d; June, 17.09d; July, 16.80d; September, 15.93d. Manchester: Yarns and cloths were in good demand.

M'ADOO WANTS LAWS SIMPLIFIED

He Tells Customs Men the United States Must Revise Business Methods.

MUST SELL AND BUY ABROAD

Replies to Republican Criticism Concerning Democrats Who Conducted War Policies.

A plea for broader methods of business expansion and the simplification of the laws of the country was made yesterday by ex-Secretary of the Treasury William G. McAdoo, who spoke before the conference of Collectors and Appraisers of the United States Customs Service in the Customs House. Mr. McAdoo originated the plan for having the customs heads of the country come together for a conference once a year.

Mr. McAdoo said the customs service was one of the great administrative structures of the Government. He was sorry to say that its methods were somewhat archaic, for they were evolved under laws created when the nation was very young, and these laws were affected by the British methods in handling customs matters.

"This is a great era," he said, "how new we do not yet fully realize. We must make the Customs Service as simple as can be. To be sure, all the laws bearing on the subject are not administrative; some affect the tariff, and I have no time to talk of the tariff. You all know it, live with it, and, I believe, are very fond of it. We must devise some means to simplify the collection of customs duties. The method of arriving at what is taxable and in what amount must help both the public and the strangers who come among us.

"Unless America pursues a broader method in expanding the business we can't expect great prosperity in this country. If we do not simplify our laws and their administration we fail in our great opportunity. We must sell our entire exportable surplus to prosper, but we cannot do this unless we allow other countries to sell us something, for they will not be able to pay the balance against them if that balance is all one way."

Mr. McAdoo said that the rank and file of the service need a very substantial increase in their pay. "I mean the men who do the hard work," he explained. I wish I had the power to do with this matter as I had with the railroads. Why, gentlemen, I found that men were getting as little as $57 a month on which to maintain families. The situation on the railroads was a disgrace to America.

"We hear criticisms of the Government's control of the railroads and are told that they serve better under private ownership. If what I learned while I was in control was a good answer then criticism is false. I say to you Democrats, and if there are any Republicans here to them also, that there is no cause to become indignant because a Democratic administration waged a successful war. Did the Republicans want Germany to win because the administration was Democratic, or are they as patriotic as the boys who went over seas and fought for freedom?

"I did not come here to make a political speech, but I want to say that if the coming campaign is to go down on this issue only, there can be but one verdict, and that in favor of the men who championed humanity and fought, as our glorious soldiers did, to retain it unsullied. Just where the people stand will be seen when 1920 comes around."

The session today is confined to the problem of getting better pay for inspectors, appraisers, and other field employes. The problem of working the men in three shifts of eight hours each was discussed. The questions of overtime for night workers will be considered and recommendations made on the subject.

WANTS BUSINESS FREED.

Fordney Forecasts Attitude of New Congress Toward Administration.

Special to The New York Times.

BAY CITY, Mich., May 14.—"Now that the war is over the new Congress will ask the Administration to take hands off business and let it assume a normal condition," said Joseph W. Fordney of Saginaw, Chairman of the Ways and Means Committee of the new Congress, to a large gathering of business men here today. He touched lightly on the tariff.

"We must see to it," he said, "that we have laws to keep cheaper made goods from coming into this country at a price to put our industries out of business."

Referring to unrest throughout the country, he said "this is largely due to the agitator, who ought to be hanged. The man who tries to make another man believe his employer is his enemy has no place here. I will help you deal roughly with any man who would march under any flag but the Stars and Stripes."

The speaker was strong in condemnation of Government operation of railroads, telegraphs, and telephones.

"I can readily see why the cables were taken over," he said. "We have several representatives in Paris, but we only hear from one. I hope that the glory won by our boys on the battlefields will not be lost by negotiations."

Mr. Fordney said Congress would conduct a large number of investigations, chief among them being Hog Island shipyard contracts.

GUARANTY TRUST CO., New York City. Transfer Agent — CHASE NATIONAL BANK, New York City. Registrar

Application will be made to list this additional stock on the New York Stock Exchange, where approximately $35,000,000 is already listed.

We summarize from a letter of Mr. W. C. Durant, President of the General Motors Corporation, as follows:

CAPITALIZATION (Upon completion of proposed financing):

	Authorized	Outstanding
6% Debenture Stock	$150,000,000	$85,315,000
6% Preferred Stock*	20,000,000	16,037,700
Common Stock	200,000,000	151,301,100

*The Preferred Stock is convertible into the Debenture, share for share, up to January 2, 1921, inclusive.

BUSINESS:
The principal products of General Motors Corporation are:
AUTOMOBILES—Cadillac, Buick, Chevrolet, Oakland, Oldsmobile, Scripps-Booth.
TRUCKS AND TRACTORS—G. M. C., Chevrolet, Oldsmobile, Samson.
PARTS AND ACCESSORIES—Delco and Remy Starting, Lighting and Ignition Systems, Hyatt and New Departure Bearings, and many other important parts.
FARM IMPLEMENTS—Janesville line. REFRIGERATING MACHINES—Frigidaire.
The net sales of all the companies now embraced in General Motors Corporation for the twelve months ended December 31, 1918, amounted to $326,044,755.

ASSETS:
The net quick assets as of December 31, 1918, amounted to $150,390,492, to which should be added the proceeds of the proposed issue of Debenture stock.

EARNINGS:
Net earnings after taxes for the last five years, if applied to the total amount ($101,352,700) of Debenture and Preferred stock, including the proposed issue, would have amounted to about $18 per share annually. However, the average amount outstanding was only $23,197,020.
Net earnings for the first quarter of 1919, before taxes, were $21,626,594, which compares with $10,146,000 for the same quarter in 1918.

EQUITY:
The amount of Common stock outstanding on December 31, 1918, was $151,301,100, having a market value at present quotations in excess of $250,000,000.

PREFERENCES:
The Debenture stock is safeguarded by liberal preferences and in the event of default in payment of a dividend thereon, continuing for six months, has sole voting power to the exclusion of the Preferred and Common stock.

All legal matters in connection with this issue are being passed upon by Messrs. Simpson, Thacher & Bartlett, New York. Balance Sheet and Income Account of the corporation for 1918 have been certified correct by Messrs. Haskins & Sells, Public Accountants.

Telephone Company Official Gives Reasons to Merchants' Association for Poor Service.

MORE OPERATORS NEEDED

Additions to be Made to Equipment to Meet Great Growth in Company's Business Here.

F. H. Bethell, First Vice President of the New York Telephone Company, yesterday replied to the request of the Merchants' Association for information relative to the cause of poor telephone service. The association, after receiving numerous complaints from business men about long delays in putting through calls, brought the matter to the attention of the telephone officials, this reply being written by Mr. Bethell:

May 13, 1919.

F. B. De Berard, Director of Research, the Merchants' Association of New York, 233 Broadway.

Dear Sir:

I have your letter of the 10th inst., in which you advise that you have during the recent months received numerous complaints from your members of inferior telephone service, and in which you ask, first, for a statement of conditions now affecting the operation of our service, and, secondly, what steps are being taken to overcome the existing conditions, and, thirdly, what time the public can reasonably expect a restoration of the service to normal conditions.

Briefly, the telephone facilities in New York City and the trained personnel necessary to its efficient use are not equal to the demand which the public is now making upon the service. A telephone traffic running some 50 per cent. above normal is put upon a property the development of which was arrested during the war and upon a personnel that was to a very considerable extent depleted because of war's necessities.

It is safe to say, I think, that the volume of traffic offered during the past week could not have been efficiently handled even with adequate facilities. The closing of the Liberty Loan drive, an unusually heavy volume of trading on the commercial exchanges, the strike of the express companies' drivers, and the inclement weather all tended greatly to increase the public demand upon the telephone service. Other conditions which have reacted seriously upon the service during the past year include the influenza epidemic which, while it brought an increase in the amount of telephoning, brought a greatly reduced force to handle the traffic offered; the great parades which have recently been held here have brought a concentration of the population into restricted areas and a flood of telephone calls into the particular central offices serving these areas which could not be efficiently handled.

To overcome the unfortunate conditions now existing requires, first, substantial additions to the property; secondly, the securing and training of additional employes. With respect to the former I point out that in our construction program for New York City this year there is included a new tollboard, to cost approximately $1,250,000; to complete additions to central office equipment already under way, $950,000; for new buildings and additions to old buildings, $3,250,000; for new central office installations and additions to installations already in place, $12,000,000; for station equipment and outside plant, $9,300,000, or a total of $26,525,000. All things possible are being done to hasten to completion the additional construction I have outlined.

In the matter of personnel, we are training student operators in great numbers, but because of the shortage in our forces it has been necessary to transfer students from the schoolrooms to the central offices themselves before they had been sufficiently trained. Of the 2,000 or more trained telephone men who went from New York into the military service some 500 men have returned and are now going into their old places. The 407th Telegraph Battalion returned from overseas only last week, and the men of the battalion, all skilled in telephone construction and maintenance, will assist materially in lifting the burden that now rests upon the plant department.

We believe, and our records indicate, that we have turned the corner, and that, except when we are called upon to meet such extraordinary demands as developed during the last week, and to which I have referred in this letter, we are slowly but surely getting back to normal. We all believe that within a few months we will be serving the telephone-using public in New York City in a satisfactory manner, but the standards that obtained before the war cannot be reached until the construction program herein referred to has been substantially completed. We have prided ourselves always on the quality of service we have been able to furnish in New York City, and you and the members of your association may rest assured that we will not be content until the old conditions have been entirely restored.

Yours very truly,
F. H. BETHELL.

The Anti-Saloon League of New Jersey, 207 Market Street, Newark, N. J., yesterday announced that it had again written to Postmaster General Burleson calling attention to the fact that telephone companies were continuing to furnish service to poolrooms. It was said that the league had evidence of several such places in Newark, and the letter to the Postmaster General gave addresses and names for investigation. At the local offices it was said that the investigation, if one is ordered, would be started from Washington, and that comment on the matter must also come from the headquarters.

TO IMPROVE CAMBRIA PLANT

Midvale Steel Will Make Expenditure of $14,000,000 for New Shops.

The Midvale Steel and Ordnance Company is planning extensive improvements at its Cambria plant, which will call for the expenditure of about $14,000,000 over a three-year period, according to advices from Pittsburgh. Several additions are contemplated, including the erection of a new machine shop and an axle plant.

A big housing plan is also to be entered into, according to William B. Dickson, Vice President of the company. It is expected that as many as 2,000 houses will be put up, these to be open for purchase by employes at prices which will probably range between $3,000 and $6,000. A similar plan on a smaller scale has been in operation at Coatesville for some time.

Details of the proposal have not as yet been worked out, but it is asserted that the houses will not be for rental. It is the plan to make the payments eas for the employes who desire to make purchases. The entire matter was under discussion at a meeting of officers and employes of the company in Philadelphia recently.

FURTHER DECLINE IN SILVER

Sells as Low as $1.11 an Ounce, in Sympathy with London.

The silver market experienced a further decline yesterday, selling down as low as $1.11 an ounce at one time, and being quoted at $1.12 and $1.15 an ounce at the close of business. This break, it was said, was in sympathy with a further decline in London, where the metal was quoted yesterday at 54d. for spot delivery and 53½d. for futures. On Tuesday the London quotation was 55½d. an ounce, and on Saturday last it was 59d. The high rate in New York was $1.21, reached on Monday.

It was said that the high prices had brought out a considerable selling pressure from firms which were well supplied with silver which they had purchased around $1 an ounce before the export restrictions were removed by the Federal Reserve Board a week ago.

BEGINS RADIO PHONE SUIT.

Wilmington, Del., Company Alleges Infringement of Patents.

A patent infringement suit was begun yesterday in the Federal District Court by the International Radio Company of Wilmington, Del., against the Western Electric Company of this city. The complaint alleges that the International Company owns six patents granted to Reginald A. Fessenden of Manteo, S. C., and that the apparatus covered by the patents is being used by the Western Electric in making radio-telephones which are being sold to the Government.

The plaintiff asks for triple damages if the defendant continues to manufacture and market the telephones.

Buy Sherman National Bank.

Interests connected with the Irving Trust Company have purchased control of the Sherman National Bank, at Thirty-second Street and Fifth Avenue. No definite plans have been announced, but it is understood that a consolidation of the two institutions will take place in the near future.

Newfoundland Offers Bond Issue.

The Government of Newfoundland is asking for bids today on an issue of $5,000,000 twenty-year 5½ per cent. bonds, which are being offered to retire a similar amount of bonds maturing on July 1. The bonds are payable, principal and interest, at New York, Toronto, Montreal, and London.

A Story Everyone Can Understand

A FEW WEEKS AGO WE WERE APPROACHED by a man known to us by reputation who sought $200,000 additional capital in the hope of putting an industrial enterprise on a production basis.

Look for products bearing this seal

Upon inquiry we learned from him that in seven years his firm had expended more than $500,000 on developing their product, but production had not been reached.

He frankly admitted the cause of their difficulties. It was simply this: Neither he nor his associates knew the essential factors of their enterprise.

We informed him that we do not finance enterprises but that had S-A-S Management been called upon at the commencement of their project we could have after proper investigation determined the commercial and mechanical practicability of the project, how much should have been expended on development, its worth as an investment and a definite plan for production outlined.

There are hundreds of concerns today in exactly the same position as the one outlined. Are you one of these concerns? If so, and you still believe in your project it might not be too late. We will be pleased to place one of our engineers at your disposal for consultation.

IRON AND STEEL MARKET.

A feeling of greater confidence pervades the steel industry because of the abandonment of stabilization and the establishment of a free market, according to the trade publications, which assert that already there has been a slight increase in the demand for steel products. The belief is expressed that the Government will be a big buyer before the end of the year. Price cutting, it is asserted, has not been in evidence except to a very limited degree. On the other hand The Iron Age says that there have been two increases in prices, one in the case of plates and the other for light rails. This publication says in part:

In view of the formal inquiry of the Railroad Administration for 200,000 tons of 80-pound to 130-pound rails, bids to be in by May 17, much interest is taken in the prices that will be named. There is little expectation of lower than $47 at mill for open-hearth rails, which has been the stabilized price, and the fact that $50 for Bessemer rails and $52 for open-hearth has been named on a domestic inquiry for 2,750 tons in the past week points to the possibility of at least one equally high quotation on Government business.

That railroad buying before the end of the year will be on a considerable scale is more confidently looked for, as largely increased appropriations are discussed.

The steel manufacturers having told the Railroad Administration that no further reduction could be made on railroad steel unless wages were reduced, are not expected to go out and signalize the new situation by price cutting. While advances would be surprising, with operations still as slack as for several weeks, an Eastern maker of wide plates has announced a price of 2.75 cents, or $2 a ton advance. There is also a quotation of $2.50 a ton higher on light rails, for which considerable export inquiries have come up lately.

An increased demand upon the mills for ship steel is foreshadowed by the President's cabled permission to the shipyards of the country to accept contracts for foreign account as far as this can be done without interfering with the building of the American merchant marine. British yards have taken some large orders lately for Norway.

The free swing allowed in the British market since May 1 has resulted in further advances. Cleveland foundry iron, quoted at $22 per ton two weeks ago, has now gone to $34. Makers are fully booked to the end of June. Billets have brought $68 per ton, or $5 above the recent export price there and $11 above the British domestic rate. Tin plates are $8.20 per box, against the April price of $7.90.

The Iron Trade Review says:

The abandonment of the stabilized price plan generally is hailed with satisfaction because it terminates every form of governmental regulation and removes the long-drawn-out Washington controversy as a conspicuous factor of disturbance and uncertainty. There is a general feeling that the industry is much closer to recovery and sound business than it could have been had the Government price plan prevailed. Authoritative advices on the export situation accept the probability that the best trade for this country in iron and steel is to come from neutral markets. The extent to which Continental Europe will compete against or buy steel from the United States is complicated by high costs of production. British steel makers are very receptive to suggestions of closer alliances with American producers in the world's trade. The market has brought forth no signs of fresh price shading in steel products, and makers insist that the erstwhile agreed schedule is minimum.

For information regarding this issue of preferred stock and the business of the Company, we refer to a letter dated May 7, 1919, from Mr. F. S. Whitten, President of the Company, some of the items of which he has briefly summarized as follows:

Business, established in 1887, consists in the manufacture and sale of the well known and widely used Columbia Grafonolas, Columbia Records, and the Dictaphone.

Purpose of present issue is to pay off $1,936,800 face amount First Mortgage 6% Bonds; to retire $2,200,000 Serial 6% Notes, and to supply additional working capital; upon completion of this financing the Company will have no mortgage or funded debt excepting a small purchase money mortgage for $20,000 due in 1923.

Net profits, as certified by Arthur Young & Co., Certified Public Accountants, for the 3¼ years ended March 31, 1919, after depreciation, taxes, etc. (but before allowing for interest which is being eliminated by this issue), averaged $1,731,053, or over 2¼ times the annual dividend requirements on the preferred stock, and for the 15 months ended March 31, 1919, were at the annual rate of $2,153,303 or over 2¾ times said dividend requirements.

Based on the net profits for the first quarter of 1919 and the present volume of $11,000,000 unfilled orders on hand, the net profits for the year 1919, computed on the same basis as above, are conservatively estimated at upwards of $4,000,000, or between 5 and 6 times the annual dividends on the preferred stock.

Total net assets (exclusive of good will, patents, trade names, etc.) as of March 31, 1919, after giving effect to this sale of preferred stock are equal to $162 per share of preferred stock, the net quick assets alone amounting to $119 per share of preferred stock.

Equity, based on present quotation of about $250 per share for the common stock, represents a market valuation of about $17,700,000 junior to the preferred stock.

Annual sinking fund for the purchase or redemption of preferred stock at not exceeding 110 and accrued dividends is to be created by setting aside from surplus profits: (a) a sum equal to 3% of the aggregate par value of preferred stock issued whether or not outstanding; (b) a further sum of 3% of the net profits as computed, after allowing for taxes, interest and the regular fixed sinking fund. First semi-annual instalment of the sinking fund will be due on October 1, 1919.

Application will be made to list the Preferred Stock on the New York Stock Exchange

The Company's temporary certificates will be deliverable, in the first instance. These certificates will, by their terms, be exchangeable for engraved certificates when prepared. Copy of provisions governing rights and preferences of this preferred stock will be furnished on application and reference thereto is made for all details.

An appraisal of the properties has been made by the Standard Appraisal Company of New York. The Company's books are regularly audited by Arthur Young & Co., Certified Public Accountants, New York. The legal proceedings in connection with the issue and sale of the above preferred stock are being passed upon by Messrs McAdoo, Cotton & Franklin, New York City.

Snap and Ginger

and punch in each fist—you don't find them often in a paper about stocks and bonds, do you? Especially not, combined with sensible, well-thought-out information and advice as to what to buy and what to leave alone.

But just that combination is what you do find in the little old Odd Lot Review.

That's why its readers like it and swear by it and wouldn't be without it for ten times the subscription price.

Pin a dollar bill to this advertisement and the little paper (you can go through it in 15 minutes) will come to you regularly each week for six months.

CONSOLIDATED EXCHANGE

Until the final hour, yesterday's session was one of positive bullish domination on the Consolidated Stock Exchange, and advances were more general and for most of the day better sustained than has been the case for months. Purchases of the steels and rails were unusually heavy, and in a majority of instances these were maintained right up to the close. United States Steel closed with a net gain of 2¼ points, Bethlehem Steel B gained 3¼ points, Lackawanna Steel 5 points, and Crucible 3⅝ points, most of these issues closing at about the high point of the day. Price movements in the oil shares were more divergent, those issues at times showing varying strength and weakness. There was considerable profit-taking in the equipment properties during the last half of the day, on which these issues fell off 1 to 2 points from their high levels.

BUTTER AND EGG MARKET.

BUTTER.—Receipts yesterday 12,035 packages. Prices advanced ¼@1c on most grades of creamery under pretty active trading. Part of the demand was of a speculative character, the goods going into storage. One or two purchase for export. Supplies liberal, but the speculative demand is taking up the surplus stock closely. Creamery, higher than extras, a pound, 59½@60c; extras, 92 score, 58½@59c; firsts, 88 to 91 score, 57@58c; seconds, 83 to 87 score, 54½@56½c; lower grades, 52@53c; unsalted, higher than extras, 62@62½c; extras, 61@61½c; firsts, 58@60½c; seconds, 55@58c; State dairy tubs, finest, 58@58½c; good to prime, 55@57c; common to fair, 48@54c; renovated, extras, 53c; firsts, 51@52c; lower grades, 47@49c; imitation creamery, firsts, 50@51c; ladles, current make, firsts, 47@48½c; seconds, 45½@46c; lower grades, 44@45c; packing stock, current make, No. 1, 45c; No. 2, 43½@44c; lower grades, 40@43c.

EGGS.—28,349 cases. Under decreasing receipts, continued strong Western advices, and a smaller proportion of high-grade eggs the market maintains a strong tone on the better grades, with a further advance established on the bulk of the supply. Dirties and checks are in good demand and firm, with the tendency slightly in sellers' favor. The express companies are delivering some lots of nearby eggs shipped during the past week or ten days and the offerings are generally of more or less defective quality, some being out of condition. Strictly fine qualities are in light supply and quite promptly salable at firm prices; under grades irregular. Fresh gathered extras, a dozen, 50@50½c; storage packed, extra firsts, 49½c; firsts, 48@49c; gathered, extra firsts, 49@49½c; firsts, northerly sections, 47@48½c; southerly sections, 46½@47½c; seconds and poorer, 43@46c; dirties, No. 1, 42½@43c; No. 2 and poorer, 39@42c; checks, good to choice, dry, 41@41½c; under grades, 38@40c. State, Pennsylvania, and nearby Western hennery whites, fine to fancy, 54@55c; ordinary to prime, 49@53c; gathered whites, ordinary to fine, 49@53c; Western and Southern, gathered, whites, 48@52c; State, Pennsylvania, and nearby hennery browns, 52c; gathered brown and mixed colors, 46@50½c.

REAL ESTATE FIELD

The twelve-story fireproof apartment house 829 Park Avenue, held at $1,000,000, was purchased as a speculation yesterday by Frederick Brown. This is Mr. Brown's initial purchase on Park Avenue. The structure, which was sold by the Florida Realty Company, of which William W. Bancroft is President, covers a plot front fronting 117 feet on the avenue and 100 feet on the street. It contains forty-eight suites and shows a gross rental of about $110,000. John A. Osborne negotiated the sale.

Sells Forty-eighth Street Apartment House.

The ten-story apartment house, 50 by 100, at 15 East Forty-eighth Street was sold by the 15 East Fortieth Street Corporation, headed by James Speyer, to Edgar A. Levy. The building, which is arranged for bachelor apartments, was sold through William A. White & Sons.

Buys Site for Ten-Story Building.

George Backer, Arnstein & Levy was the buyer of the four-story and basement building, 25 by 98.9, at 16 West Thirty-sixth Street, from Mrs. F. S. Wharton, reported recently. In addition the same purchasers have acquired the similar adjoining property at 18 West Thirty-sixth Street from Thomas Williams, and on the combined plot, 50 by 98.9, will erect a ten-story store and salesroom building. Andrew F. Gilsey negotiated the sale.

Two Firms Buy Permanent Homes Downtown.

To provide increased space for future use the Merchants' Fire Assurance Corporation, now located at 45 John Street, purchased through William A. White & Sons the four and five story buildings at 83 to 87 John Street, northwest corner of Dutch Street. The corner building was purchased from Rodney Gibson, and stands on a plot 41 by 97. The adjoining structure is on a lot 27 by 103, and was sold by the Floyd estate, represented in the deal by Cammann, Voorhees & Floyd. The property is under a lease which has several years to run.

Young, Corley & Dolan, Inc., consulting engineers, now located in the United States Realty Building at 115 Broadway, have joined the down town commercial home-buying colony to insure a permanent location in lower Manhattan. They have purchased the five-story business building at 28 and 30 West Broadway, 46.11 by 86.7, with an "L" to 66 Park Place, 23 by 60, Columbia College leasehold. Norman S. Riesenfeld, the seller, acquired this property recently from the Mitchell Woodbury Company.

Jackson Sells Hudson View.

Daniel H. Jackson resold to the Paradise Realty Company the five-story Hudson View Court, 87 by 103, at 112 to 118 Haven Avenue, facing West 171st Street, valued at $130,000 and acquired recently from William Gamble, President of the Irving Trust Company.

Bachelor Apartments on West 125th Street.

Samuel Potter bought the four-story building, 15.7 by 54 by 100.11, at 48 West 125th Street, and will alter the premises for business and bachelor apartments. Shaw & Co. negotiated the sale.

Uptown Apartment Sold.

The Plumbers Realty Company sold to the E. L. Realty Company the six-story apartment, 40 by 100, held at $45,000 and renting for $7,000, at 218 and 220 West 146th Street, through Louis Block.

The Anthony Avenue Realty Company (Heller & Sussman) sold the five-story apartment, on plot 75 by 100, held at $75,000, at 116 to 120 West 129th Street, to an investing client of Jerome A. Kohn through Royal & Moses.

Quarters for the Uptown Club.

The Uptown Club, which was abandoned due to war conditions, has been reorganized and has secured a lease of the entire second floor of Pierre's Restaurant in the former "Home Club" building, 11-17 East Forty-fifth Street. Necessary alterations to the building are being completed as speedily as possible, with a view of giving the club possession on or about the first of June.

The club has been organized with the purpose of filling a long felt need in the uptown business district of a business men's club for the important interests which have been so rapidly establishing their headquarters in and around Forty-second Street. It is the intention of the Governors of the Uptown Club to secure a much larger space in some one of the new building which it is believed will shortly be erected in this section, at which time the original plans of the club will be carried out of giving facilities for the entire uptown business community.

The temporary quarters now secured are only large enough for a club limited to 300 members, but a waiting list will be established, and as soon as permanent quarters can be provided the club will be immediately enlarged.

On the opening of the club, on or about the first of June, a luncheon will be given at which there will be some prominent speakers.

The officers of the club are: George McAneny, President; Lawrence B. Elliman, Vice President; Harris A. Dunn, Treasurer, and E. Dimon Bird, Secretary. The Board of Governors are: Robert Adamson, Albert B. Ashforth, Ancell H. Ball, E. Dimon Bird, J. Howes Burton, Robert Grier Cooke, Michael Dreicer, Harris A. Dunn, Lawrence B. Elliman, Ezra H. Fitch, Michael Friedsam, James W. Gerard, Julian Gerard, Joseph W. Harriman, Thomas Hastings, George McAneny, Patrick F. Murphy, Louis Stewart, Jesse I. Straus, John H. Towne, Louis Wiley, Dr. John A. Harriss. The lease was arranged by Pease & Elliman.

Natanson Buys Ritz-Carlton Apartment.

Max N. Natanson purchased from Frederick Bangerter the Ritz-Carlton, a six-story elevator apartment, occupying the block front on the west side of Audubon Avenue from 187th to 188th Street. The property returns an annual rental of $40,000 and is held at $300,000.

Private Dwellings.

Joseph W. Hatch sold the three-story dwelling, 17 by 100, at 517 West 149th Street, to a client of the Duff & Brown Company for occupancy.

The estate of Mary Martin sold the four-story and basement dwelling, 20 by 100, at 231 East Sixtieth Street, through Joseph F. Seitz.

The Robwig Realty Holding Company bought through M. M. Hayward & Co. 306 West 107th Street, a five-story dwelling, 19 by 100.11.

Angelo Bisusey sold to a Mr. Pinto the three-story and basement dwelling, on lot 16.8 by 100.11, at 319 East 116th Street, through Kehoe & Canero.

Buys West Side Warehouse.

Samuel Weil has bought the six-story warehouse at 391 and 393 Washington Street, southeast corner of Hubert Street, on a plot fronting 75 feet on the corner and 79.10 feet on the latter thoroughfare.

Factory Building Sold.

The estate of E. B. Kellogg sold the five-story factory building at 222 and 224 East Thirty-seventh Street to John G. McCarthy through Henry Hof. The property has been owned by the sellers since 1856.

The Bronx Market.

Samuel Kaufman bought from a client of Otterbourg, Steindler & Houston the six-story apartment building with stores, on plot 56 by 97, at 2,426 Creston Avenue.

The estate of Herman H. Blohm sold the four lots on the east side of Eastburn Avenue, 100 feet south of [illegible] Street, to a client of Williamson & Bryan for cash.

John H. Beckman sold the property at 2,295 University Avenue to a client of the I. Lincoln Seide Company, and McLernon Brothers for occupancy.

V. M. Jeliffe sold the three-story brick dwelling on lot 18.5 by 100, at 146 East 150th Street, near Mott Avenue, through J. Clarence Davies.

The four-story dwelling, on plot 50 by 100, at 165 East Tremont Avenue was sold by a Mrs. Hofgins to a client of Moore, Schutte & Co. and B. H. Weisker. The same brokers sold for the Columbia Trust Company, as executor and trustees of the Theodore J. Chabot estate, the three-story and basement dwelling, on lot 25 by 75, at 1,016 Ogden Avenue.

Daniel H. Jackson bought from Anna Socol 1,854 Elsmere Place, near Southern Boulevard, a five-story apartment, 50 by 100, which he sold to her several years ago.

The Samwill Construction Company has bought from E. Shamus, 856 Elsmere Place, a five-story apartment house, on a plot 40 by 100, renting for $6,000 and held at $40,000. H. L. Sonand was the broker.

M. Messerschmidt sold the two-story frame two-family house, on lot 25 by 120, at 571 Eagle Avenue, through J. Clarence Davies.

The Bedford Holding Company, Fred Brown, President, sold the three-family house, 25 by 100, at 847 Whitlock Avenue, through George Goldblatt.

Brooklyn.

The Realty Associates sold a plot 280 by 100 on the south side of Sixty-eighth Street, 100 feet east of Sixth Avenue, to a builder who will improve the property with two-family semi-detached houses with garages. Walter S. Ross and C. C. Greisinger negotiated the sale.

Meister Builders, Inc., bought the two four-story apartments on plot 140 by 60, renting for $15,700 and held at $100,000, at 366 and 368 Forty-first Street, southwest corner of Fourth Avenue.

Mildred Liebermann sold the three-story brick limestone apartment house, 22 by 100, at 2,586 Bedford Avenue to an investing client of the McInerney-Klinck Realty Company.

The George Adams estate sold the three-story and basement brown stone dwelling, 20 by 100, at 184 Sixth Avenue to William A. Norman for occupancy. The John Pullman Real Estate Company negotiated the sale.

The property at 196 Lenox Road has been sold at private sale by Harry L. Little to an investor. The property is scheduled to be sold by Joseph P. Day at auction on Tuesday, May 20.

Michael Pomerance sold to Emanuel Greenberg and I. Jerome Riker the apartment house, 25 by 100, renting for $4,100, for $24,000 through Riker & Sanders.

Margaret E. Bretz sold the store and apartment building at 342 Livingston Street to a client of Charles A. O'Malley.

Investor Increases His Brooklyn Holdings.

Joseph P. Day negotiated another private sale for the estate of James G. McLoughlin to William J. Glacken, consisting of forty-five Greenpoint lots located on Morgan and DeBevoise Avenues and Richardson Street, Brooklyn. Mr. Glacken purchased twenty adjoining lots at the auction sale of the McLoughlin estate held by Joseph P. Day on April 10, and shortly after the sale purchased thirty additional lots, and with the present purchase of forty-five lots makes a total of ninety-five lots. It is understood that Mr. Glacken intends to extensively develop and improve his large holdings in this section.

Queens Borough Sales.

The Star Company of New York sold a plot of twelve lots on Oakley, Thedford, and Ocean Avenues, between Liberty and Belmont Avenues, Ozone Park, as a site for a large refrigerating plant. Huberth & Huberth negotiated the sale.

The Dickel Construction Company purchased for immediate development a plot at the northeast corner of Hillside and Maple Avenues, Woodhaven, with 61 feet frontage on Hillside Avenue. The sellers were M. Lefferts and E. Richardson.

The Sage Foundation Homes Company has sold to B. Rolff a plot, improved with high-class dwelling, 34 by 72, on the east side of Bow Street, north of Slocum Terrace, Forest Hills Gardens.

The Kew Gardens Corporation has sold to J. Winslow a plot 50 by 100, improved with dwelling, on the north side of Newbold Place, east of Austin Street, Kew Gardens.

M. Barr has purchased from B. Schieman a plot, 100 by 125, at the southeast corner of Fourteenth Avenue and Twenty-eighth Street, Beechhurst, Whitestone.

Suburban Sales.

Albert W. Pross bought a plot in the Greenacres section of Scarsdale, N. Y., from the Scarsdale Estates, Robert E. Farley, President, as a site for a dwelling.

The Belair Manor Company, Inc., sold to E. Miller a new dwelling on Hope Avenue, Fort Wadsworth, Staten Island, through Cornelius G. Kolff.

Commercial Leases.

The French-American Banking Corporation leased the ground floor at 65 William Street, corner of Cedar Street, and will open for business June 1. The bank was incorporated at Albany last month with a capitalization of $2,000,000 and a surplus of $500,000, all paid in.

The Schulte Cigar Stores Company leased, through the office of Samuel J. Tankoos, for a long term of years, at an aggregate rental of over $100,000, the entire building owned by Benjamin Prince, at 423 Fulton Street, northeast corner of Pearl Street, Brooklyn, and upon expiration of the existing lease will make alterations under the supervision of Frederick Putnam Platt.

The St. Regis Restaurant, Inc., leased to Louis Palmer for a term of years at an aggregate rental of $100,000 a part of their store at 1,587 Broadway.

NEW JERSEY—FOR SALE OR TO LET.

A GENUINE BARGAIN FOR AN EARNEST HOMESEEKER. A sudden in my immediate family has compelled me to buy a large home. I have secured one in the same neighborhood where I have been living for three years, and am offering my smaller property for sale. It consists of a plot with 100 ft. frontage on a beautiful street, running back 165 ft.; the tastiest, best designed, most comfortable, and best built home in New Jersey today, and a garage that is absolutely right. The grounds have been exquisitely landscaped and intelligently cared for. The house has four master bedrooms and bath on the 2d floor and a living room, dining room, butler's pantry, and kitchen on the 1st floor. The servants' quarters and bath are entirely apart. Immediate occupancy can be had. Everything to make a perfect home goes with it, as screens, shades, awnings, etc. The house has been newly and handsomely decorated inside and out. $4,500 on easy terms to the right party buys it. $3,000 can remain on 1st mortgage. I have spent over $12,000 cash on this place. It is only 5 min. walk to the railroad station, and I commute daily myself to Manhattan in about an hour from home to office. The neighborhood is of the very best. I will be glad to furnish all details to any one really interested; others need not reply to this notice. Business Man, Box 55 Times Downtown, New York City.

SPLENDID HOME BARGAIN

Education Notes.

Ex-President of the Board of Education Arthur S. Somers left New York yesterday for the Berkshires, where he will remain a few days. Mr. Somers was disappointed in not being re-elected, after having served as President during sixteen of the most trying months in history. He will probably go West for an extended trip in the near future.

Anning S. Prall is the second President of the Board to be chosen from Richmond Borough, the other being William G. Willcox, who was President of the board of forty-six members, which was succeeded in January, 1918, by the present board of seven members. Mr. Prall is a member of the Fox Hills Golf Club.

One of the changes in the new administration will be private meetings of the Committee of the Whole from which newspaper men will be excluded. During the term of office of President Somers nearly all of these meetings were open. The Committee of the Whole is virtually the Board of Education taking up different matters and acting upon them. Its action, as a general rule, is adopted without debate by the Board of Education sitting as such. A monthly bulletin will probably be issued, giving educational news of interest. It is Mr. Prall's idea to have an amendment to the State Education law that would provide for a sort of Court of Examiners of Appeals, to which a teacher who thought that he or she was entitled to a higher rating could take his or her case.

The sum of $108,146.25 has been appropriated for payment of awards in the matter of acquisition of property on Keap and Rodney Streets, adjoining Public School 19, Brooklyn.

United States.

The commission announces an examination for assistant epidemiologist, for men. Vacancies in the Public Health Service at $2,000 to $2,500 a year will be filled from this examination. Certification to fill the higher salaried positions will be made from those attaining the highest average percentages in the examination. It is desired to secure persons with the following qualifications: Experience in making epidemiological studies of diseases; familiarity with methods for the prevention of communicable diseases; acquaintance with all public health laboratory methods; ability to design and supervise public health laboratory work; familiarity with methods of disease reporting; experience in computation and tabulation. Competitors will not be required to report for examination at any place, but will be rated on: General education and medical training, 25; laboratory experience, 25; experience in epidemiological work, 40; publications of thesis, 10. Graduation from a medical school of recognized standing and at least three years' experience in epidemiological work under Federal, State, or local authorities, and experience in laboratory technique, especially in regard to malaria and typhoid fever, are prerequisites. Applicants must have reached their twenty-third but not their fortieth birthday on the date of the examination.

MASTER'S SALE.

NOTICE OF SALE OF VALUABLE REAL ESTATE.

By authority and direction of an order made by the United States District Court for the Eastern District of Tennessee, Northeastern Division, on May 9th, 1919, in a cause styled The Central Foundry Company vs. Federal Dyestuff & Chemical Corporation, No. 21, on the Equity Docket in said Court at Greeneville, Tennessee, being made under a dependent bill in said cause, styled Metropolitan Trust Company of the City of New York, and James F. McNamara, Trustees, against the Federal Dyestuff & Chemical Corporation et al., to which cause in equity, and said dependent bill thereunder, and said order of sale, and all pleadings, testimony, exhibits, reports, and records therein and thereunder, reference is hereby particularly made, I, W. J. Donaldson, Special Master, will, at the front door of the Sullivan County Court House, Blountville, Tennessee, at 10:30 o'clock in the forenoon on June 17th, 1919, offer for sale, and sell to the highest bidder, the following property, to-wit:

FIRST PARCEL:
Lots 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, 32, 33, 34-35, in Block 71 as shown on map marked "Addition Two to Kingsport Townsite Plan, showing additional lots laid out in Blocks 63, 69, 70, 71, 72, 73, 74, and 75, December 18th, 1915," said map being of record in Sullivan County, Tennessee, in Deed Book 109, at page 430. Said lots containing One and Seventy-Six hundredths (1.76) acres, more or less.

SECOND PARCEL:
Lots 36, 37, 38, 39, 40, 41, 42, and 43 in Block 71, containing One and Eighteen Hundredths (1.18) acres, more or less, as shown on map of record in Sullivan County, referred to in description above of the First Parcel.

The property described herein and in the First Parcel above, is a part of the land conveyed to Kingsport Improvement Corporation by Kingsport Farms, Inc., by deed dated March 15th, 1916, and of record in the Register's office of Sullivan County, Tennessee, in Deed Book 113, at page 209; and being the same property acquired by Federal Dyestuff & Chemical Corporation by deed dated August 15th, 1918, and of record in the Register's office of Sullivan County, Tennessee, to which deed reference is here made for further and more complete description.

THIRD PARCEL:
Lot 25 in Block 71, containing One hundred sixty-eight hundredths (.168) of an acre, more or less, as shown on map of record in the Register's office of Sullivan County, Tennessee, as shown above in the description of the first parcel herein, and being the same property acquired by the Kingsport Improvement Corporation by deed from Kingsport Farms, Inc., by deed of record as shown in description of the Second Parcel described herein, and being the same property acquired by Federal Dyestuff & Chemical Corporation by deed dated October 23d, 1916, and of record in the Register's office of Sullivan County, Tennessee, to which deed reference is here made for further and more complete description.

The foregoing three parcels of property constituted what was known as the "Club House Property" of the Federal Dyestuff & Chemical Corporation.

Said property is the same as described in said order of said Court, and the sale will be made under foreclosure of a certain mortgage dated May 29th, 1916, executed by the defendant, Federal Dyestuff & Chemical Corporation, to said Metropolitan Trust Company, of the City of New York, and James F. McNamara, Trustees, a copy of which mortgage is filed in said cause. Said mortgage is registered in Trust Book No. 115, pp. 1—50, in the Register's office of Sullivan County, at Blountville, Tennessee, to which reference is here made. The said property will be sold free and clear of all liens, encumbrances, and claims, which are held or claimed to be held, or may be held by the defendants, or any of them, and all persons claiming by, through, or under the defendants, or any of them, and in bar of the equity and right of redemption.

The terms of sale shall be as follows: One-third in cash and the balance on a credit of six, and twelve months, the purchaser being required to give interest bearing notes with good security to be approved by the Master, and retaining a lien upon the property thus sold, as additional security for the payment of said notes.

In accordance with provision of said mortgage, the purchaser at the sale may turn in, in lieu of cash, an amount of the mortgage notes and coupons, which upon distribution of the net proceeds of such sale would be payable thereon, but the purchaser may be required to pay in cash additional amounts which the Court may in the future deem necessary and order to be paid.

The purchaser may anticipate the deferred payments, provided for, by the payment of such amount in cash with interest up to the date of such anticipation, or the pro tanto turning in of notes and coupons in accordance with the provision of said mortgage, together with any additional amounts in cash, which the Court shall in the future deem necessary to be paid. For further information reference is particularly made to said order of sale.

WITNESS my hand at Knoxville, Tennessee, this May 10, 1919.
W. J. DONALDSON,
Special Master.

THE WEATHER

WASHINGTON, May 14.—The pressure is quite uniform but low over practically all parts of the country, with a region of maximum depression over Northern Minnesota and the west plateau region. Within the last twenty-four hours there were light local rains in the upper lake region, the Upper Mississippi Valley, the South Atlantic States, and on the North Pacific Coast. Fair weather prevailed in other regions. Temperatures are now near or above the seasonal average in all parts of the country except the Carolinas and Virginia.

The outlook is for partly cloudy weather, with moderate temperature, over much of the country east of the Mississippi River during Thursday and Friday. There is a possibility of light local showers, however, in the region of the Great Lakes, the Ohio Valley, and the Middle Atlantic States.

Winds for Thursday and Friday, North, Middle, and South Atlantic, East and West Gulf—Gentle to moderate variable; partly cloudy weather.

FORECAST FOR TODAY AND FRIDAY.

Northern New England—Fair and cooler Thursday; Friday cloudy.

Southern New England—Partly cloudy Thursday, cooler west interior; Friday cloudy.

Eastern New York, Eastern Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Delaware, Maryland, District of Columbia—Partly cloudy Thursday and Friday; not much change in temperature.

Western Pennsylvania, Western New York, Ohio—Partly cloudy Thursday and Friday; not much change in temperature.

	1919.	1918.		1919.	1918.
3 A. M.	59	62	4 P. M.	71	69
6 A. M.	55	60	6 P. M.	67	69
9 A. M.	61	61	9 P. M.	65	66
12 M.	70	65	11 P. M.	62	64

This thermometer is 414 feet above the street level. The average temperature yesterday was 64; for the corresponding date last year it was 64; average on the corresponding date for the last thirty-three years, 59.

The temperature at 8 A. M. yesterday was 58; at 8 P. M. it was 67. Maximum temperature, 74 degrees at 2:30 P. M.; minimum, 54 degrees at 7 A. M. Humidity, 61 per cent. at 8 A. M.; 45 per cent. at 8 P. M.

The barometer at 8 A. M. yesterday registered 29.94 inches; at 8 P. M. it stood at 29.81 inches.

SAY THOSE AFOOT CAUSE STREET RISKS

Automobile Club Speakers Urge Campaign of Education to Reduce Accidents.

SUGGEST TRAFFIC RULES

Hold Time May Soon Come When Highways Will Be Reserved for Vehicles Alone.

Traffic conditions, motor truck transportation, especially in rural communities, and the education of persons on foot in the proper use of the streets in New York were among subjects discussed yesterday at the Automobile Club of America at the annual meeting of the National Highway Traffic Association.

Elmer Thompson, Secretary of the club, and Professor Arthur H. Blanchard, President of the Traffic Association, urged a program of education as a step in reducing accidents in the city streets. This should be followed, said Mr. Thompson, by certain restrictions, such as prohibiting pedestrians from crossing busy streets diagonally or in the middle of blocks. It was the general opinion that while New York has done much in the regulation of vehicular traffic, little attention has been paid, thus far, in giving proper warnings to pedestrians in getting them to realize the danger of carelessness at street crossings.

"The automobile is here to stay on the 'streets,'' said Charles M. Brown, President of the Automobile Dealers' Association, "and it is possible that in the near future the streets will be considered as the legal thoroughfare for vehicles, just as railway tracks are restricted to the use of railroad trains. The pedestrians will have their rights at proper crossing places. Some restrictions of this nature will benefit both kinds of traffic and minimize to a large extent the number of accidents."

Mr. Thompson struck a popular note by saying there was no reason why every cent of the increased fee for automobile operators, raised from $1 to $2 in the Knight-Wheelock bill just signed by the Governor, should not be spent for highway maintenance and equipment of signposts. He criticised Highway Commissioners who fail, when road repairs are under way, to give proper directions to users of the highway regarding detours.

"Motorists and others," said Mr. Thompson, "have a right to demand adequate signposting at all detours, telling their length and road conditions. Nearly all these emergency detours are in an atrocious condition, and the highway engineers give no thought to the comfort of those who have to use them."

Mr. Thompson said that municipal authorities should give more care to proper signposting of main thoroughfares, so that residents as well as visiting motorists might find the shortest and best routes in and out of the city. In New York, he said, there are no proper signs showing how to reach the Boston Post Road, the main routes to Long Island or other surrounding localities.

"The majority of cities are delinquent in this respect," said Mr. Thompson. "Newark, for instance, has no signs showing how to get out of the city. I know a man who once hired a guide to show him the best way out. I was lost in Baltimore once for lack of proper signs to tell me where to go. One of the worst cities in this respect is Boston, but there is virtually no city which is properly signposted for through traffic."

Professor James E. Doyle of Cornell University, F. W. Fenn of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce, and J. H. Collins of the Highways Transport Committee, discussed the advantages of rural motor express in New York and other States.

A feature of the evening session was the first production of a moving picture prepared under the auspices of various highway associations to show the high cost of bad roads to communities, and the benefits of well built highways for motor transportation.

CAUTIOUS ABOUT TUNNEL.

Edge Wants to Know If It Won't Require Permission of Congress.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 14.—Inquiry as to whether legislation by Congress would be necessary to permit New Jersey and New York to carry out their agreement to establish a vehicular tunnel between the States under the North River, and if so, the nature of such legislation, was made today by Senator-elect Walter E. Edge of New Jersey, of the Department of Justice and the War Department.

The inquiry was prompted because in Article 1, Section 10, paragraph 3, of the United States Constitution, it is provided that "no State shall, without the consent of Congress," among other things, "enter into any agreement or compact with another State."

At the office of the Engineer Corps of the War Department it was said that no action by Congress would be required on behalf of the War Department and that no Federal legislation had been necessary for the construction of the Hudson tubes.

"The project is too great and vital for us to omit any effort to comply with every requirement of the United States Constitution and laws, even though apparently of a merely technical nature," said Senator Edge. "New Jersey is sponsor for the undertaking, as well as one of the States at interest, and I wish to get the opinion of the highest authorities before even preliminary work is started, so that we shall have a clear path."

CARPET WOOLS TAKEN UP.

Big Sales Made at Government Auction in Philadelphia.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Penn., May 14.—Carpet wools offered at the Government wool auction today met with a good distribution. Of the total offerings, comprising 5,800,000 pounds of greasy carpet wool and 2,275,000 pounds of scoured carpet wool, about 53⅓ per cent. was sold. This was divided into about 60 per cent. of greasy and 40 per cent. of scoured. Twenty-one buyers figured in the sale. Some good-sized quantities were taken.

The Bigelow-Hartford Carpet Company was the largest buyer, taking 808,702 pounds. Other buyers who took large amounts were Alexander Smith & Sons Carpet Company, 647,300 pounds; Thomas Kenworthy's Sons, 439,100 pounds; Charles J. Webb & Co., 205,400 pounds; McCleary, Wallin & Crouse, 529,749 pounds; James G. Kitchen & Co., 284,000 pounds.

The bidding dragged at times throughout the sale. Many undesirable lots that were offered were quickly passed by bidders. Out of a total of 323 lots offered, 115 were withdrawn.

At tomorrow's sale the Government will offer about 735,000 pounds of domestic fleeces, 750,000 pounds territories, 800,000 pounds of Texas and California wool, 275,000 pounds pulled wool, and 690,000 pounds scoured stock.

ALEXANDER PRAISES SALVATION ARMY AID

77th Division Commander Sends Letter of Thanks for Work in Behalf of His Men.

Great praise for the work of the Salvation Army in connection with the Home Service Fund campaign for $13,000,000 during the week of May 19-26 was bestowed by Major Gen. Robert Alexander, commander of the 77th Division, in a letter received by the Salvation Army yesterday.

"On behalf of the 77th Division I want to thank you for the wonderful work that the Salvation Army has done for the men of this division," he wrote. "While stationary warfare existed, canteens were established by your organization, where doughnuts and oranges were freely given out, but when the war of movement commenced your workers were constantly assisting by providing for the men, this being extremely difficult owing to the nature of the terrain."

Governor Smith issued a statement addressed to Commander Evangeline Booth of the Salvation Army yesterday urging the people of the State to support the Army's campaign for $13,000,000 which opens next Monday. The statement said:

"Your army, which in the beginning showed its true worth in rendering assistance to humanity, and particularly to those who were in dire distress, has, by its recent work, been brought foremost in the minds of every true-blooded American, and we should show our appreciation for those who followed our boys so closely, administering to their wants at a most critical period.

"It is my earnest wish that the people of New York State respond most liberally in helping and assisting your organization in the campaign for the Salvation Army Home Service Fund, and so voice their approval and thanks for the work which was so unstintedly performed for our fathers, our husbands, and our brothers."

Rabbi Joseph Silverman of Temple Emanu-El also gave high praise for its "excellent work." He said:

"During the war the Salvation Army was first at the front and built its huts from which it distributed the means of physical as well as spiritual comfort. This society well deserves its name, the Salvation Army, for it has saved men and women for this world, and thus made it possible for them to inherit the future life. All honor to the Salvation Army! It deserves not only the respect of the community, but its hearty support and encouragement in all the good works that it undertakes."

Committees to assist in the drive, it was announced, are being organized on the Liberty Loan plan basis in every city in the country, headed by prominent persons. In Washington special committees have been formed under the leadership of Mrs. Newton D. Baker, Mrs. Thomas R. Marshall, and Mrs. William H. Taft.

Mrs. Edla C. Barker, the star influenza nurse of the Salvation Army in the overseas corps, arrived yesterday, and will assist in the Washington campaign. Both on the ship on her way to France and over there her success in dealing with influenza patients was of the highest.

Says B. R. T. Is in Good Repair.

Answering yesterday the statement of F. T. Hibbard, the engineer who said that because of faulty structure at several points on lines operated by the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company, a serious accident was becoming daily more imminent, Frederick P. Royce, general manager of the company, said that within the last fortnight engineers had investigated the road's elevated and surface lines and had pronounced them in good repair. "The reports indicate," said Mr. Royce, "that there is nothing the matter that could be considered unsafe for the passengers, but on the contrary, they indicated that the roads as a whole were in a state that might be described as above criticism."

WARNS OF GERMAN BUSINESS TACTICS

LAUDS VERSAILLES TREATY

Tells Board of Trade and Transportation Document Means Economical Independence.

Isaac F. Marcosson, the writer and lecturer, speaking yesterday at a luncheon of the Board of Trade and Transportation, warned American business men against the methods of Germany, whose business machine, he said, was the partner of the war machine. He said that the Peace Treaty checked Germany's international trade aspirations, that it was the best possible guarantee against a Teutonic militaristic revival, and that by restricting her trade colonization a limitation was automatically put on her preparedness for war. Other things said by Mr. Marcosson were:

"The great document framed at Versailles is a declaration of world commercial independence. It proclaims a new economic freedom for allied nation and neutral alike. No longer can a buffer economic state like Switzerland or a near neighbor like Holland be employed and coerced for Germany's selfish ends.

"It is no secret that Germany has accumulated huge supplies of potash and dyestuffs. The moment that she saw the handwriting on the wall she framed a scheme to employ them in wringing moderate economic terms from the Allies. So far as dyes are concerned any dumping of this stored-up German supply would work serious hardship on a new industry that we have built up in this country at great labor and expense. We can have no permanent dye, optical glass, or any other war-born industry in which we have begun to make ourselves independent of the Germans, unless we give them adequate protection."

Mr. Marcosson said that this protection must consist of a system of licensing imports for the next ten years as England has done, by rearing a tariff wall around the infant industries, and thus save us from becoming the victim of a German dumping system. The Peace Treaty, he said, forbids the existence of militaristic societies, but it did not provide a barrier against the subtle social and economic penetration "with which Germany has poisoned the world for forty years." This sort of propaganda, he stated, lay dormant in the United States during the war, but that it has come again into action and must be crushed.

"America stands at the threshhold of the great commercial things," he added. "The war literally flung a vast trade opportunity into her lap. Peace can perform a service no less beneficent. It is a time for big vision and big understanding. For the first time in our trade history we have an adequate merchant marine. Its flag floats on the seven seas. Capitalizing the experience of these last four crowded years we can become the trade arbiters of the world."

A report of the Committee on Forests of the board, recommending that the Governor be petitioned to veto the bill now before him, providing for the sale to private persons of certain lands in Rockland County now part of the Palisades Park Commission, was not acted upon.

A resolution was adopted calling for the appointment of a committee to report if it would be feasible to adopt the budget system for State expenditures.

$150,000 GIFT TO MT. SINAI

From Mr. and Mrs. George Blumenthal for Memorial to Son.

The Board of Trustees of Mount Sinai Hospital announced yesterday a gift of $150,000 from Mr. and Mrs. George Blumenthal for the erection of an auditorium building on the hospital grounds at Ninety-ninth Street, east of Fifth Avenue, as a memorial to George Blumenthal, Jr. Besides a large auditorium, which will be devoted to the educational work of the hospital, the Mount Sinai Training School for Nurses and the social service department, the new building will house a new and up-to-date X-ray department.

George Blumenthal has been a member of the Board of Trustees of Mount Sinai Hospital since 1892. He became Vice President of the board in 1907 and was elected President in 1911. He is a Director of the Metropolitan Museum of Art, is Vice President of the United Hospital Fund, and for several years has been active in the affairs of the American Red Cross. The original equipment of Base Hospital No. 3, known as the Mount Sinai Unit, which served in France during the war, was donated by Mr. Blumenthal.

Plans for the auditorium are being prepared by Arnold W. Brunner, and it is expected that the building will be ready for occupancy in about a year. It was said at the hospital that, besides being used for the hospital's own educational work, the Federation for the Support of Jewish Philanthropic Societies, and other organizations with which the hospital is affiliated, will probably be invited to share in its use. The Blumenthal Auditorium, as the new building is to be known, will be the sixteenth building in the Mount Sinai group, which faces Central Park and extends from 99th to 101st Street.

MAKE NEW PRISON RULES.

Former Convicts May Visit Sing Sing Under Restrictions.

Special to The New York Times.

OSSINING, May 14.—Warden Edward V. Brophy of Sing Sing today put into effect new rules permitting former convicts to visit the prison. Superintendent Charles F. Rattigan recently advised the Warden to admit former prisoners as visitors under certain restrictions.

According to the regulations, no former inmate shall visit the prison on Saturdays, Sundays, or legal holidays. He shall not be allowed within the inclosure, including the yard or factories, without a permit from the Superintendent of Prisons. If he wishes to visit a prisoner he must apply to the Warden, giving his name and address and the name of the prisoner he wishes to see. The prison attendants will first interview the prisoner to determine if he wishes to receive the former inmate. If the prisoner does receive him, it will count as one of the five visits he is allowed a month by the rules.

Lieut. Europe's Slayer Arraigned.

BOSTON, May 14.—Herbert Wright, drummer in the 369th Regiment Band, held for the fatal stabbing of Lieutenant James Reese Europe here last Friday, pleaded not guilty to a charge of murder today. He was without funds, and the Court assigned counsel, who opposed a motion by the District Attorney to have the trial assigned for May 21. Counsel said he must have time to obtain evidence from France, as this affair was the culmination of a long series of happenings there. The Court postponed a decision until Friday.

REQUISITION STEEL FOR FOUR WARSHIPS

Department Acts Under War Emergency Legislation—Order Goes to Carnegie Company.

WASHINGTON, May 14.—Acting under authority conferred by war emergency legislation, the Navy Department today placed an order, or what amounts to a requisition, for 14,000 tons of steel with the Carnegie Steel Company. The steel is to be used in starting construction of four battleships, work on which, under the act authorizing them, must be begun before July 1.

Decision to requisition the steel was reached today at a Navy Department conference, at which it was found that the bids submitted yesterday for the 14,000 tons were the same as bids which previously had been submitted and which were based on prices agreed upon between the steel manufacturers and the now abandoned Industrial Board of the Department of Commerce. The previously submitted bids were rejected on the ground that they showed no indications of competition.

This announcement was issued by Acting Secretary Roosevelt:

"Today the navy placed with the Carnegie Steel Company an order for about 14,000 tons of steel required for beginning construction before July 1, 1919, of Battleships 49, 50, 51, and 52, ordered constructed at New York, Norfolk, and Mare Island Navy Yards.

"The order was placed at a tentative price, subject to later adjustment, after further conferences with the Carnegie Steel Company officials. That company was the only complete bidder on the entire schedule of requirements. By placing the order with one company the navy felt assured of better service and a more convenient and economical inspection."

Shoe
[Both products of one manufacturer]

CHURCHILL & ALDEN have been building good shoes for men at Brockton, Mass., for 40 years. Marked superiority in every essential feature early won for Ralston Shoes a most enviable reputation. Time and good advertising, in which we are proud to have co-operated for several years, have served to enhance that reputation—and broaden it.

A few years ago The American Posture League discovered the scientific facts upon which a real anatomic shoe could be built. With characteristic progressiveness, Churchill & Alden adopted these principles for a new shoe—the Trupedic. The high standards of quality and workmanship which built prestige for Ralston Shoes were embodied in Trupedic Shoes. To the new product The American Posture League lent its approval and endorsement.

We were engaged to prepare a plan for introducing Trupedic Shoes to the American public and asked to execute the plan we had been engaged to prepare. From that plan sprang the powerful selling phrases, "A Real Anatomic Shoe Without the Freak Shoe Look," and "The Universal Shoe for Universal Service."

Our relations with Churchill & Alden include campaigns in the New York Times and The Saturday Evening Post. An example appears in the May 17th issue of the latter publication.

This work has been successful—and gratifying. In the Churchill & Alden products are embodied that quality of material and degree of workmanship which make ultimately sure the success of PLANNED ADVERTISING based on the Hoyt System of preliminary study and investigation and the resulting conclusions and recommendations.

The word SERVICE, as applied to advertising, receives an interestingly different interpretation by us. A principal of our company will be pleased to explain Planned Advertising to the man or men who decide an organization's policies.
